During recent months a crew of men have been sinking two shafts on the property of the Pontiac Rouyn Mines and both these shafts are now down to forty feet. The property lies immediately north of the Powell Rouyn Mines, which in its turn lies immediately north of Noranda. This whole section lying north of Noranda has had intensive exploration during recent months. Further to the north, the Amulet Mine and Waite Montgomery loom up as potential producers. Waite is already shipping ore to Noranda. A large number of companies are now devoting their energies in this general district.

Practically all the work that has been done on the Pontiac has been confined to a section approximately 7,000 feet north of the Powell granite. Noranda's deposit lies approximately the same distance to the east. The structure is composed of rhyolite with intrusions of diabase dykes running practically north and south. The mineralization apparent is to be seen among the outer contact of the intrusives.

Close to the south of the present Pontiac workings, the Powell Mines are working in a very similar formation. The general formation of both these properties closely approaches the formation on the Noranda, it is said, and some chalcopyrite is to be seen on both properties.

The big Okalta Well, which recently came into production on a sensationally large scale, is now connected with the Royalite (controlled by Imperial Oil) pipe line.

Smelters, Its Earning-Power and Its Possibilities.

One of the most bullish factors behind Consolidated Mining and Smelting shares is the assurance that the company, which has been a relatively small producer of copper, will in good time become one of the country's leading producers of the red metal. The company has developed several important copper mines, and it is expected that an announcement will be made shortly of plans for production on a big scale. At the current price of copper of 16 cents per pound, there is a big profit (equal to about 50 per cent. of gross output).

Smelters this year should earn 100 per cent. or better on its stock. The company is making big plant extensions, now, to increase lead, zinc and silver output. It is readily conceivable that in 1928 the company will earn 125 per cent. on its operations, and when the big scale copper production comes on another very substantial addition to earning-power is assured. If Granby Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. is taken over, as is rumored, the company would become a leading factor in this metal without delay.

The feeling grows that Smelters cannot long delay a split in the stock. The potentialities of the company make the stock look conservatively priced at even current levels. If it is sound calculation that a stock should sell at ten times its earning-power, Smelters shares have a long way to go yet.

High authorities on the copper market are decidedly optimistic regarding the future of the industry. Reduced stocks have occurred in face of the fact that the plants in the United States are operating at 100 per cent. World requirement of the metal have grown heavily, and there appears to be no let-up in view. In the commercial developments of the next five years, it is forecasted that power utilities will be a leader and this involves an enormous demand for the red metal.

Comment On The Market

A Special Service to The Examiner.

Fire Insurance Earnings and Fire Loans

Fire insurance companies in Canada enjoyed a good year in 1927, due directly to the fact that losses by fire were considerably less than the preceding year.

The figures on fire losses this year to date indicate that net results of the fire companies will not be quite so favorable as in 1927. From January 1 to November 22nd this year fire losses in Canada amounted to $16,725,800, as compared with $14,837,200 in the corresponding period of 1927, representing an increase of $1,888,600. Earnings of the fire companies, of course, are directly affected by the amount of fire losses.

British and United States Buying of Leading Canadian Stocks Continues

Substantial buying of issues such as Massey-Harris, Brazilian Traction, International Nickel and Consolidated Smelting from Great Britain and the United States has again been noted in the past week. Buying of this character has been of impressive proportions for some weeks back and has become one of the oustanding features of the business on the Canadian exchanges. The influx of money from this buying, relieving a stringency of local funds for market purposes, has made possible a stronger and more active market than was considered possible earlier in the autumn. As there are signs that it may expand—the market may maintain its recent characteristics, subject to occasional technical reactions, even if the local money situation does not improve.

ECLIPSE TO BE SEEN IN DISTANT MALAYA

British Scientists Preparing To Go To Observe Eclipse of Sun.

LONDON, England, November 23. (Canadian Press.) — British scientists are already making preparations for an expedition to Malaya to observe the total eclipse of the sun on May 9th next year. Two parties are going out. Dr. J. Jackson, of Greenwich Observatory, who will be in charge, and Dr. Carroll of Cambridge University, who will observe at Mostar, the capital of Kedah. Col. F. J. M. Stratton of Cambridge, and P. J. Melotte, of Greenwich, will be stationed at Patani, Southern Siam. They probably will be joined by other scientists.

"The total eclipse will last just over five minutes," Colonel Stratton told a Daily News representative. "The conditions for observing it will depend on the monsoons. Should a monsoon be early, conditions will be poor, but a late monsoon will mean that we shall escape it. Special efforts will be made to test Einstein's theory of relativity. We shall also make some spectro-photo-metric experiments and examine the presence of gases in different layers in the sun's rim."

The parties will leave England next February. The eclipse will not be seen in England.

HOUSE TO DISCUSS NEW TAX PROPOSAL

LONDON, Nov. 23 (Canadian Press Cable).—One of the most important measures to come before parliament this session, the government's "derating" proposals, will be debated on November 26, when the Labor opposition moves for rejection of the bill.

The bill is aimed at reduction of unemployment and encouragement of industry by reforming municipal taxation, removing taxes from agricultural land and buildings, industrial and transportation properties. In return it provides for reimbursement of municipalities from the treasury.

The Opposition will claim the measure perpetuates the evils of the poor-law system; that it does not provide for prevention of destitution in the towns; that it fails to make unemployment a national responsibility; will not appreciably relieve the financial position of necessitous areas; will arrest the normal steady development of local health services; and add to the burden of shopkeepers and householders and other ratepayers by an unfair system of rating relief.

It is noteworthy that the bill recently was attacked hotly in a section of the Conservative press.

The chance to live came to deprived Rheta. There was a fly—a monster—in her ointment. But Rheta took the chance.

The chance that she thought would open the closed books and the way to the beckoning un trod fields.

SOME life is a precarious affair. Human beings, in spite of the fact that they are by nature gregarious, and accustomed to live in units of the family and the state, seem to lack the ability to group themselves in units of three, four, five, six, eight or ten, as the case may be, underneath one roof. For some reason, Home seems to constitute a hunting ground where members of the family cast aside reticence, consideration, politeness, charm and courtesy.

Rheta Mason detested her home life. First of all, she worked seven hours out of every shining day in the shipping room of a great mail-order concern in lower New York. Into this room, which was two stories below ground, sunlight never penetrated. And when Rheta emerged of an evening, there was a red band across her pretty forehead from an eye shield which she wore bending over her bookkeeping. After that, home meant a nervous, harrowed mother who talked constantly of money, or rather the lack of it, and complained bitterly when Rheta held out a bit from her weekly wages for a bauble, a bit of jewelry, or a frock, and a disgruntled father who had been out of luck ever since Rheta could remember.

There were four other Mason children beside Rheta, all younger, two of them constantly ailing and the other two, young fellows constantly at odds with their home life for having to pool their scant earnings into the shallow family coffers.

Long before she was even nineteen, Rheta, who was pretty in a red-haired, gold-eyed sort of way, decided that life wasn't getting her anywhere. She wanted the good things. Not the good things in the shoddy sense that so many of her generation thought of. Rheta wanted to be able to afford the leisure to learn to read the kind of books which she had not sufficient education to understand. Vaguely, she sensed that there were beauties sealed between the covers of volumes to which she had no intellectual entree.

Rheta wanted the time and the opportunity to be able to travel. To gaze upon the great art works created out of the upper reaches of the human mind. In a vague way, even a look at a bit of poetry down a wide-margined page struck her with a sense of rhythm.

It was rather pathetic, Rheta wanting the good things of life this way. They seemed to hover so close to her and yet, so far as any possible contacts with them were concerned, she was an outcast.

Rheta's world was the home life of an uptown flat, a bedraggled, back-hurting mother, a jobless, disillusioned father, wrangling brothers and the vulgar clutter of a vulgar street.

No, Rheta could not be expected to be getting much out of life.

After a short, sharp, spiritual conflict, Rheta reasoned it out for herself and finally decided to go off with the first man who had ever wooed her beyond the flirtatious stage.

He was a large, slightly fat, pink-faced, blonde-haired stock broker. He spent money in a way that Rheta had never before beheld in her life. Little self-denials that she had always known, the walking ten blocks to save a street car fare, the half-soleing of shoes that she detested, shabby gentility, last year's gloves, seemed entirely outside the consideration of this man named Ted O'Brien, who suddenly swept like a gale of fresh salt air into her stuffy world. For the first time in her life, Rheta rode in taxi cabs, dined on the roof gardens of big hotels or table-d'hote places where the wine was red and flower boys passed with trays of wire-stemmed roses, which Ted O'Brien bought in bunches and left at her plate. He was a good-humored, good-natured fellow. He liked her. And in spite of herself, Rheta could not help liking him. In a breezy, easy way.

The fly in the ointment, indeed the monster in the ointment, was the fact that Ted O'Brien was married. There were a wife and two children somewhere out in Seattle. O'Brien was quite honest about it, but he liked Rheta and Rheta's home life was unendurable.

For a long time after her decision, even in the days of the storm of consternation that she created in her family, Rheta relaxed—with a sigh of luxury with which one descends into a warm bath—against the downy background of her new environment.

There was a jewel case of an apartment in a discreet "family hotel." Rheta breakfasted in bed off a blue enameled set and an hour after O'Brien had passed the corner florist when he left mornings, a box of fragrant and freshly hot-house cut-flowers arrived. These Rheta arranged in the two silver vases on her dressing table. At eleven o'clock, she rode down town in the small, perfectly equipped six-cylinder coupe. At one, there was lunch at one of the large hotels, usually alone.

There were charge accounts for Rheta in three or four of the smart shops and that meant afternoon shopping or a matinee.

Then dinner with Ted, who liked his meat thick and red and preferred chop houses, a musical revue and, invariably, night club dancing in one of the airless grottoes that line the side streets of Broadway, where O'Brien was pretty generally known.

Well, as Rheta constantly put it to herself, what had she to lose? Nothing. And yet, there came to her one day, a realization that shattered her soul.

She met her mother, whom she had not seen for over two years, on the street one day by chance. The poor woman burst into tears at the sight of her magnificent daughter.

"What are you getting out of life, now, Rheta, that you never had before?" she asked.

Then and there dawned upon Rheta the grim fact that she was getting nothing out of life which she had never had before; that the closed books were still closed books to her and the untrodden fields were still untrod.

Except, now, there was no hoping for them any more. There was no going back. Rheta had tasted of a life that had made her its slave.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

TAKE IT ALTOGETHER

Rain again, and yet—well, what of it?
Now and then you can learn to love it.
Raining now, and it's dark at present,
Yet, somehow, it's been mighty pleasant.
Had more shine than of days to wet us,
More days fine than of days to fret us.
Rain once more, but, at that, the weather
Didn't pour, take it altogether.

Life's that way, let us all remember,
Not all May, and not all November:
Songs and smiles, when it's sunshine only,
Afterwhiles when the heart grows lonely.
Rain we find, and we call it sorrow;
Never mind, it will clear tomorrow,
Though we've had many kinds of weather,
Life's not bad, take it altogether.

Rain again, but it soon blows over,
Now and then, but it brings the clover.
Rain once more, but the sun breaks through it,
Has before, and will always do it.
When it's wet, when you hear no swallow,
Don't forget there are days to follow.
When pat-pat goes the rainy weather,
Do just that—take it all together.

THE HAPPY

There's nothing as foolish as foolish fear,
  And nothing as smart as smiling,
No word is wise if it starts a tear,
  Or cute if it brings reviling.
The frowning face is not really wise,
  The voice that is cold and snappy,
For only the happy are the wise,
  The truly wise are the happy.

On the road of life there is more to find
  Than the things that we learn in college;
A thousand thoughts may enrich the mind,
  But the heart has its store of knowledge.
We must learn the world, we must learn its needs,
  We must study our human duty,
For our kindly words and our helpful deeds
  Are all that will give it beauty.

There is much to learn: I would like to know
  The worth of the things around me.
Perhaps the things that I value so
  Are the poorest things I have found me.
I would like to learn as the road I went,
  Learn more than the books and chatter.
As I walk the world I would learn content—
  Then none of the rest will matter.

SPECIAL SPEAKER AT GRACE CHURCH

Rev. J. Goforth Horsby, of Port Hope, was the special preacher for the anniversary services of Grace Presbyterian church, held on Sunday, November 25, morning and evening, large congregations gathering for both occasions.

Miss Jessie Pattison, contralto soloist of Saint Paul's church, Peterborough, sang at morning and evening worship, pleasing the congregations with her fine voice and appropriate selections, the numbers sung at the first service including: "My God and Father While I Stray" and "O Rest in the Lord"; the choir, under the leadership of C. Thorndyke, prepared special anthems for the day, the one in the morning, in which Miss Paterson took the solo, being, "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem." Miss Viola Whyte presided at the organ.

The children were given a place in the order of service at morning worship, the minister bringing home a fine lesson as he told of a clock, the gift of an old lady in England, on the occasion of his wedding, which soon stopped going, 'and will never be right outside until it is put right inside.'

"The Master Craftsman will make wrong hearts right, and I think you know His Name—Jesus Christ is the only one who can make us right inside, and then we will be all right on the outside as well."

"The Divine Optimism," was Rev. Mr. Hornsby's subject at the morning service, his text being taken from Isaiah 49:16: "Behold I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me."

Picturing Israel in a strange land, broken in spirit, with the fires of patriotism burning low, dispirited and disconsolate, feeling that God had forsaken her, the speaker went on to show that there was a vast difference between God's viewpoint, and that of His captive people. Israel remembered Jerusalem with the walls blackened ruins, while God saw it with the walls restored, and prosperity again in the land.

"It is similar in our Christian experience to-day; we are distrustful, pessimistic, slow to move, blind to future opportunities, and immediate needs, our eyes holden so we fail to see how ruin can be changed into repair. We think the best days are in the past, and do not see how its joys and successes can be repeated, because we are leaving God out of all our hopes and anticipations entirely."

"The spirit of Jesus is one of bouyant hopefulness; and when we give God His rightful place and preference, we shall see walls restored, and strengthened, and beyond ruin we shall see recovery. He never once doubted the triumph of His mission; ridiculed by the masses, trodden under foot of men, despised and rejected, yet He never lost faith, and He saw, as no one else could see, the walls of a redeemed world always before Him."

"To what extent are we in possession of this optimism? Faith is the 'far look,' leading men to say things and to do things because of close contact with God, and God is in honor bound to send results, and to reward such trust as that."

"May the Presbyterian church at Millbrook see with the penetrating eye of faith away to the horizon where God is waiting to join hands with you, and to help you to advance in His Name. 'I am with the, and I will not fail thee nor forsake the.' Things that seem remote will be gloriously possible; hearts will glow, and lives be spiritually enriched, as you follow the gleam of His leadership."

A special thank-offering was asked by the elders of the church, and the response was a generous one at both services.

FALL PLOWING IS COMPLETED

CHEESE FACTORY CLOSES

(Examiner Correspondence)

OTONABEE, Nov. 27. — With the ground wet and partially frozen, plowing is finished for the season. Most farmers were pretty well through. Threshing is also nearly finished for the season.

Swamps are filled with water and fields here and there are flooded as in the spring. The mud has made getting around the barnyards very disagreeable.

Stops Making Cheese.

The Indian River cheese factory stopped making cheese last Monday after a very successful season. Milk and cream are still collected at the factory for shipment.

Decline in Hog Market.

The decline in the price of hogs much below the cost of production has caused most farmers to become disgusted and discouraged with the business. Both last fall and this fall, farmers have had to sell below production cost, so that many are quitting the industry entirely. It will be many years before as many hogs are raised. The lure of high spring and summer prices will not fool farmers again. Co-operative selling on a contract basis is the only thing that will put the hog market on a profitable basis and necessity will soon drive the producers to the remedy.

Personals.

Mrs. Clara Eason and daughters have moved to Peterborough, where they will spend the winter.

Mrs. Olive Bannon, of Norwood, was a week-end visitor with Mr. and Mrs. H. McKay.

Mr. Clarence Sherwin, of Roseneath, was a recent visitor with Mr. and Mrs. H. McKay.

WINS CHAMPIONSHIP.

WRONG MAN SERVED IN MONTREAL JAIL

Quebec Man Substituted Deliberately for Another, Receiving Money Reward.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—"Bon jour, Lucien," said a prisoner in the jail here to an acquaintance who was serving a month for a breach of the Quebec liquor law. The salutation was so hearty that it attracted the attention of the guards, especially as the "Lucien" thus hailed in a friendly manner was not known to the jail authorities as Lucien at all, but as "Edmond Perusse." The guards at once became suspicious and an investigation was begun which led to the discovery that the prisoner in question was Lucien Desromier and that he was serving the month as a plad substitute for Edmond Perusse.

Under the name of Perusse the substitute had been convicted of selling gin and whiskey and had been duly lodged in the provincial jail at Bordeaux, where he had put in part of the term when his old acquaintance gave the clue to his identity.

The real Perusse was brought before Judge Enright, charged with "frustrating and defeating the ends of justice" and reluctantly admitted he was Edmond Perusse He pleaded not guilty but on being remanded for preliminary, hearing changed his plea and said he was ready to take his punishment. This did not let out Desromier, however, who was charged similarly. Both friends thus found themselves in a bad fix, the outcome of which was put off to Nov. 27.

The word "pajamas" comes from the Hindustani, "pacjama," meaning leg clothing.

A deputation from the local branch of the Canadian Legion visited Havelock Saturday to arrange for a concert to be put on in Campbellford under the auspices of the Campbellford branch and by members of the Havelock club. It was agreed that the play, a war drama, entitled "Fragments of France" will be presented in the Regent Theatre, November 5th. "Rose of Picardy" a feature picture will be shown as well. Gunmen Force Free Drinks On Crowd; One Killed and One Hurt As Police Arrive

DETROIT, Nov. 27.—Despite reiteration by Federal prohibition officials that Michigan is "nearly dry," one man was shot to death and another seriously wounded in a saloon brawl at Ecorse yesterday which took on almost "wild west" action.

The dead man is Charles Bauer, 42. He was literally pumped full of lead when a gang of men entered a blind pig at 4518 West Jefferson Avenue and ordered everybody in the place to line-up at the bar for free drinks. They then forced the bartenders at the point of revolvers to hand over mugs of beer to the involuntary customers who were ordered to drink them on pain of death.

Most of those at the bar were nearly insensible when the drinks were interrupted by the shooting episode Bauer, who, police say, operated the "Pig" announced himself as opposed to the free beer plan and laid a couple of pistols on the bar after he had fired a few shots into the ceiling and had shot a glass of beer out of a man's hand.

Then one of the enforced drinkers summoned police. As the blue coats entered Bauer made as though to use his weapons and the officers shot him dead. William Brown, 32, of Ecorse, was shot and wounded in the fusillade.

What Color are YOUR Eyes?

The color and shape of the eyes tell your disposition—they also tell of the condition of your health. You may be marring the beauty and sparkle of your eyes by improper diet. Impoverished condition of your blood, sluggish liver, constipation, etc., soon show their effects in the eyes.

If they are dull with a yellow tinge to the whites—that's a signal of intestinal sluggishness. You need to rid the system of accumulated poisons. You need a laxative. You need Beecham's Pills we ask the Canadian Legion for permission to put the guns on the only piece of ground in Peterborough owned by ex-service men—the lot behind the Cenotaph.—(Cheers).

FIVE HUNDRED VETERANS RALLY

"And in your discussion, remember that we stand in very high respect in Peterborough, and we can only continue to do so if we handle this situation as gentlemen."

Rev. Captain Paul Costello, Chaplain of the Dominion Command of the Canadian Legion, member of the Executive of the local branch, and ex-overseas Chaplain, confirmed Capt. Abraham's report of the meeting of the war memorial committee at which the disposition of the guns was discussed.

"I was also at that meeting," he said, explaining that he does not represent the Legion on the committee, but was there in his own official capacity. "This matter of removing the guns was brought up by a lady who had lost her boy overseas. She told her personal feelings regarding the matter of placing the guns on Confederation Square. The matter under discussion was the war memorial, and the beautifying of the park was talked over. It was proposed to make it a place of beauty, because there was erected there a war memorial emblematic of the heroism of our Canadian dead."

Explaining his own stand very frankly, the speaker said that taking into consideration the expenditure of $35,000 on the war memorial, and the fact that the city had entered on improvements to beautify the park with shrubs and flowers and walks, he personally felt it would be "a good thing to have these guns removed and placed somewhere else." He did not believe it was the intention of anyone to "scrap" them. Wherever they had been placed, it is temporary, until they find another location. "Personally, where they are doesn't matter to me, whether on Confederation Square or on Armour Hill. If the chairman wishes to put them back of the Cenotaph, that will be splendid. But I still believe, knowing what is to be done in Confederation Square—to some extent, at any rate—it would be better to have the guns away from there."

Disgraced Peterborough.

"This action has disgraced Peterborough from one end of Canada to the other," said a member of the audience. "I think it's up to these men to retrieve these guns to-morrow."

Buff Guerin declared it strange that the lady who objected to the guns should support the project for a war memorial.

"It's not so much the removal of the guns," said Fred A. Dainton, "it's the position they gave them on the dump. It's rather a funny place to store them 'for the time being'."

"The idea seems to be that while these guns stood as Peterborough's memorial up to this time, now we have something better and we discard them," remarked Mr. Stuart.

J. Kelbrick characterized the disposition of the guns as uncouth.

"It is said," another man remarked, "that the action of removing the guns may have been done without thinking. That's not an excuse—it only adds to the crime. These people should think of the soldiers, and if they don't, we shouldn't allow them to remove from sight the things that make them think, however much they may desire that forgetfulness which many would appreciate."

Col. Ackerman remarked, "We are all agreed that the city dump is no place for the guns," and suggested that the meeting ask Capt. Abraham whether the veterans can have the use of Legion property on which to place the guns temporarily."

"I don't see any sense about returned men going up in the air," said Rev. Capt. Costello. "I don't think any slur whatever was intended. If the proposal is made to the Legion, I'll vote for placing the guns behind the Cenotaph." (Cheers).

Just as the motion was made to resolve again into a meeting of the Canadian Legion to discuss this phase of the question, Albert Morley caused a general laugh by his reference to the "tin-horn" council.

Invitation Given.

On motion of Mr. Dainton, the Legion resolved: "That the Legion is quite willing that the guns be placed on the lawn behind the Cenotaph for the time being," and Col. Ackerman returned to the chair.

Some suggestion was made that the work of bringing the guns up town be left to those who had carted them away, but this was suppressed by the exhortation: "If you were men enough to capture them, be men enough to go and bring them back."

Col. Ackerman, again greeted with cheers, "Now, comrades, there's very little left but to line up in the most orderly way, and get the guns. This is an illustration of a very serious nature of public opinion towards ex-service men. It points the necessity for every one of you to join the only ex-service men's organization in this part of the country for the purpose of reminding the public and showing them that we are ready to serve again."

On motion, Captain Claude Rogers, M.C., was appointed marshal of the parade, with Major G. G. Winterbottom, M.C., Bar, D.C.M., to assist. The question was raised, just before the meeting broke up, whether the City Council had jurisdiction over the guns, and whether the men would be doing an illegal act in retrieving the trophies.

"The guns have been abandoned and scrapped by the City Council," replied Col. Ackerman, "and in recovering them we are within our legal rights."

John Playford enquired whether there was the possibility of police intervention, to which there was a general response of "No chance."

The Parade.

"Falling in" on Murray Street, opposite the Cenotaph, the veterans were given their first taste in many years of "Form fours" and "Re-form two-deep." When they had finally found their places, they marched off towards George Street, the Legion Union Jack leading. With their first steps they broke into "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," and though many had lost their youthful staying power, they made a creditable showing in the other old-timers—"There's a Long, Long Trail a-Winding," "Mademoiselle From Armentieres," "Old Soldiers Never Die," and "Who's Your Lady Friend."

Take five hundred

As they swung down George, constantly adding recruits to their ranks, they were cheered by many on the side lines, and from many windows on the street sympathetic citizens leaned to wave. It was like the days of 1914 to 1918. It was the biggest parade of soldiers on Peterborough's streets since that time.

On Simcoe street an advance party had already hauled the guns from their ignominous resting place among the ashes, with the aid of trucks loaned for the work. Drag ropes were attached to the hubs, many hands held up the heavy trails, and with many a "heave," and "are we downhearted?" ald cheers, the triumphant procession got under way

Up George street again, with the same vocal evidences of the support of the citizens, went the parade. Some sat on the muzzles of the guns to take the weight of the trails; scores pulled on the long ropes; dozens pushed Everybody did something to help.

At the Legion Hall the guns were wheeled around to the back of the Cenotaph, the men lined up for a photograph, and the gathering, which had opened the evening by recalling in two minutes' silence the 60,000 Canadian war dead, fittingly broke up with a demonstration of its loyalty by gathering around the Cenotaph to sing the National Anthem.

Many Join the Legion.

There was a general rush to join the Legion, its usefulness made evident by this incident of the guns, and many names were added to the list of members. Legion officers are confident that many more ex-service men now see the necessity of a united organization to give effective representation to the returned soldier's ideals and needs.

Not the Moving That Hurt.

"It 's not the fact that they moved the guns, although that should not have been done," one returned soldier told The Examiner last night. "It was the insult they piled on this injury by throwing them on the junk heap. Is that what the public men of Peterborough think of the trophies that signalize victory in the Great War? Why, those guns mean more than the war memorial can ever mean. Someone said something about 'how horrible to have the guns here that maybe killed some of our Peterborough boys.' That's absurd. The much-vaunted War Memorial is far more horrible than the guns—it portrays the German war spirit, double eagle and all, on the rampage. To be sure there is also on the memorial's pedestal a figure of the ideal Canadian Knight—but don't the guns recall as vividly those young heroes who captured them?

I, myself, have some little trophies I brought home with me—and do you think I shudder every time I look at them? They remind me of old times, old comrades, and great victories of which every public-spirited and patriotic-minded man should be proud. It should be the same with the guns, and no man or body of men should be allowed to trample on the pride of a nation and the pride of a city by consigning them to the garbage dump" night that there had been no such extension was considered as a very favorable sign.

The official bulletins are still somewhat brief but the fact that the exact temperature was given for the first time was held to indicate that the public will be given whatver information may be needed to allay the anxiety.

Crowds Before Palace

Smartly-dressed men and fur-clad women rubbed shoulders with shabbily-attired working men in the crowd which all day yesterday pressed close to the railings before Buckingham Palace, to read the terse sentences of the official bulletin on the King's condition. The bulletin was for the first time displayed to the public, typewritten within a wooden frame suspended on the railings, and it had an unfailing attraction. Few motor cars or taxicabs driving past, failed to stop for their occupants to peruse the bulletin.

Activities as Usual

Queen Mary and the Duchess of York went for a motor drive in the afternoon. The ceremony of changing the guard at the Palace was carried out as usual, the Coldstream Guards' fine band playing cheerful selections.

In view of the brevity of the official bulletins from His Majesty's physicians, Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn, the London newspapers gave prominence to the opinions of outstanding medical experts who were agreed that a spread of pleurisy and fluctuations in His Majesty's temperature were in keeping with the natural progress of the malady. It is also considered of paramount importance that His Majesty is physically younger than his 63 years. To the men in the street the most alarming feature of the bulletins had been the indications of a spread of pleurisy.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 27 (A.P.).—There has been no indication here that Prince George, youngest son of King George of England, is planning to return home because of the illness of his father. H.M.S. Durban, on which he is serving, is in port here and the Prince is staying at the Admiralty House.

VANCOUVER LEADS IN DOPE PEDDLING

Accounted For By Large Oriental Population in Western State.

VANCOUVER, B.C., November 27 (Canadian Press). — Fifty-five per cent. of the convictions for dope peddling in Canada are made in British Columbia, and one-third in Quebec, according to Lieut.-Col. H. W. Cooper, former warden of New Westminster Penitentiary. The large percentage on the coast is accounted for by the large Oriental popluation.

"Dope peddling and the use of narcotics have been distorted by moving pictures and fiction writers and surrounded with a glamor that I will do my best to strip," declared Col. Cooper, who added:

"A drug addict is nothing but a shell from which all the manhood and humanity has been extracted. He will sell everything and everybody in his passion for drugs."

Col. Cooper told of the length to which some addicts will go in their desire for drugs, and explained some of the devices employed by those smuggling drugs into prisons. Sometimes the cuffs of shirts sent out to be laundered would be washed in a drug solution, sometimes the powder would be contained under the postage stamp on a letter, and almost every conceivable method was employed to get drugs across to the consumer.

The only solution he could see to remedy this world-wide problem of drug addiction would be through the League of Nations, with a system of international police. Sixty per cent. of the people who became drug addicts developed the habit through association with users.

New Invention Will Usurp Steam Power

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 27. —(Canadian Press.)—Invention of a new automobile fuel of dry powder named carbonal phine, promised by its inventor to simplify auto engine construction and practically usurp steam power was announced in a paper presented to international conference on bituminous coal here today.

The author is Dr Jacobus Aarts, of the Netherlands. Fuel is made by changing coal into carbon dioxide, then into carbon monoxide and this into carbonal phine and carbon dioxide. The fuel is claimed to be the finest structure imaginable, with low combustion point and a great lubrication power. It can be used in liquid, plastic or solid form.

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION:
I am so pleased to have so many of the good things on the same page for I like to keep your page also the Lyrics of Life, also the Horoscope and Dr. Thompson's writings. I always keep Allan Fairbairn's page, but it is a page by itself. To-night we have yours and lyrics and horoscopes and woman's page all in one which is splendid. 'Cinders' has said just what I would wish to say, only said it so much better than I could have done.

Now, I want to tell you something that may make you smile. One of my sons, or rather my stepson which is about the same, says that no woman is able to write as you do, that altogether likely you are a man who has borrowed a woman's name, for only men according to him are smart. Not very flattering to mother is it? However, I think you are, Marion, and all the Marions I have known have had a power to make me glad. When, in former days I went to the late George Powell's to pay my husband's Forester dues, I sometimes met Marion and always did feel glad for hours after. Marion Sloan of this city was the same, both have changed their last name and I do not remember their present name, but they are Marion still, I know, with kindly friendly eyes and smile.

I fancy you did look pitying and kind even when advising the 16-year-old girl not to go to the boy's home. How grand it is that young girls can now get advised like that, for perhaps some parents cannot constrain their daughters to do wisely. It is not always the parents' fault. As you, I think, know, I have no daughters but I have granddaughters that I love very much and for them I am more than glad of your grand work. Long may you continue it and reap a reward of joy in your own heart past all expression.

I have no special desire to see my opinions in print but if there is any part of it you wish to use all right, sure use it.

I found in a trunk not long ago an Examiner 10 years old, some difference, I find.

I will always remain,
Just Thankful."

I am very glad to hear from you again, "Just Thankful." To tell the truth, I kept that poem of yours in the drawer of my desk, looked at it many times, and every time thought "she wouldn't really like to see that printed." You see, I was right, wasn't I?

It IS funny that your stepson should think me a man—but isn't it just like the lords of creation to think no one can do anything but themselves? Ask him if he will come and run the page for a week!

People like "Thinker" (whose letter was printed on Saturday— make me tired. It's high time we women started to show what we can do.

And, do you know, it's not difficult to show up these men. Ever since The Examiner started there has been a column, "Voice of the People," open to the men, in which they might express their opinions—but in this mail column of mine there are more letters printed in a week than the men contribute to theirs in a year. Which surely indicates a paucity of ideas among men!

Thanks, "Just Thankful," for the nice things you say. I certainly appreciate your letter, and hope you write soon again.

"Dear Marion:
I was interested in the letter of "Ruralite" in this evening's Examiner and your "slam" at the women's organizations of Peterborough. I would like to say that the local Council of Women have had the matter under discussion for some time. We feel that the construction of a Rest Room is a matter for the City Council rather than for a few women. Then the raising of the money will be one for the whole community rather than a tax on those who are all the time giving to philanthropic enterprises.

The writer visited the Women's Rest Room at Smith's Falls last summer. It is kept up by the town, while the Local Council of Women keep a supervisor. It has been found of great value to both town and rural women.

I think you will find the Peterborough Local Council of Women as anxious to do their part as those of any other community.

Yours sincerely,
Urbanite."

I have no doubt, "Urbanite" that local women have as good ideas as any women anywhere—my remark was that though the Rest Room has been discussed for years nothing has been done. That is an unanswerable fact. I don't know enough about civic politics to decide what elected body is responsible. If, as you say, the City Council should look after the matter, why don't the women see that the City Council does so? To my naive mind it appears the Council is elected to do what the people want—I stand willing to be corrected, however.

"Dear Marion:
I am a new-comer to your fair city and am enjoying your page in The Examiner very much, using some of the recipes and taking in all the various helps and hope to have something to send in myself some day. I am enclosing the coupon for the Christmas ideas with a couple of others marked, and hope I am not asking too much at once.

Thanking you in advance, I am,
Sincerely yours,
Mrs. W. B."

Welcome to our city, "Mrs. W. B.," and I hope you enjoy your residence here I'm glad the neighbors have been able to help—and anything further any of us can do will be gladly done.

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

THE VEGETABLE DIET

Some time ago I wrote about two powerful men, one a vegetarian and the other a meat-eater.

As to strength and physical endurance they appeared to be equal. They were the two outstanding men in the gymnasium in all-around ability. The vegetarian ate eggs and milk, which in a sense are animal foods, and also ate plenty of cereals.

Dr. McCollum of Johns Hopkins says: "It is not true that vegetarianism is a 'physiologic impossibility.' Thousands of vegetarians stand ready to refute such an assertion by the example of their own experiences." He says, however, that it is possible to make a fairly satisfactory diet of foods derived almost entirely from vegetable sources, but it is not easy to do so.

As you know, the white rat is considered the best animal on which to work out diet experiments, as its diet is practically the same as man's. Now, as the diet of the majority of Chinese people is largely vegetarian, the Peking Union Medical College in China experimented with vegetable diets on white rats.

In order to get proteins to make up for lack of meat, eggs, and milk, they experimented with peas, beans, and cereals. As these lacked certain vitamins and minerals, leafy vegetables were used to help out this part of the diet.

All the common cereals, peas, beans, and twenty varieties of vegetables were experimented with, but no combination of them were as efficient as the diet now used by the Chinese, which includes milk and eggs.

The Peking investigators therefore conclude that no vegetarian diet is known at present which would afford the best diet for the white rat. Since the building up and tearing down processes in the cells of the white rat have been shown to be similar to that of a human being, and the white rat has for many thousands of years eaten the same things as human beings, it seems justifiable to conclude that the best nutrition of human beings cannot be obtained by purely vegetarian diets.

In the handling and conditioning of men for a number of years, I have found that meat or eggs are essential where the individual does heavy work or exercise.

For the office man or woman it is "possible" to work out a diet without meat as research men at University of Michigan have stated, but eggs and milk simplify the proposition.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

THIS is the second day of this column, suggested by our neighbor, "Mariana" for the Women's Page. Although I am conducting the column, it is expected that the neighbors will suggest short pieces of prose and poetry to be used in it. Each day's instalment will be dated, for reference in your scrap book.

NOVEMBER 27, 1928

To-day's poem, "Husband, Husband, Cease Your Strife," by Robert Burns, is suggested by "Mariana," to whom is due also the credit of planning the "Daily Reading" column. Robert Burns was born January 25, 1759, and died July 21, 1796.

"Husband, husband, cease your strife,
Nor longer idly rave, sir!
Tho' I am your wedded wife,
Yet I am not your slave, sir."
"One of two must still obey,
Nancy, Nancy!
Is it man or woman, say,
My spouse Nancy?"

"If 'tis still the lordly word,
Service and obedience,
I'll desert my sovereign lord,
And so goodbye, allegiance!"
"Sad will I be so bereft,
Nancy, Nancy!
Yet I'll try to make a shift,
My spouse Nancy!"

"My poor heart, then break it must,
My last hour I am near it:
When you lay me in the dust,
Think, how will you bear it?"
"I will hope and trust in heaven,
Nancy, Nancy!
Strength to bear it will be given,
My spouse Nancy."

"Well, sir, from the silend dead,
Still I'll try to daunt you:
Ever round your midnight bed
Horrid sprites shall haunt you."
"I'll wed another like my dear
Nancy, Nancy!
Then all Hell will fly for fear,
My spouse Nancy!"

I think that's a real family fight, don't you? And I don't like the way the man had the last word—and certainly he put a sting in it!

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

Dear Marion,
Before pouring milk in a pan in which I intend making custard or milk cocoa, I always grease the pan slightly with butter. I find this makes it much easier to clean—you know how the heated milk does stick!

Yours gratefully,
Mrs. A.A. B."

NEW BABY DISTURBS TIRED OFFICE WORKER

"When my oldest boy was just a few weeks old he was badly constipated from my milk," says a Nebraska mother. "He kept us awake so much, my husband almost slept over his desk at the office. Then my doctor got us to give Baby some Castoria and the next day he was much better. His stomach and bowels began acting perfectly and he gave us no more trouble." Avoid imitations of Castoria. The Fletcher signature marks the genuine, purely-vegetable, harmless Castoria, doctors everywhere advise for those ills of babies and children, such as colic, constipation, colds, biliousness, etc.

Princess Mary Sets Example On Smoking

LONDON, Eng. Nov. 27) By the Canadian Press).—There was an interesting incident at a luncheon at Ipswich recently at which Princess Mary, who had visited the town to open several local institutions, was a guest. After the loyal toast, the customary announcement was made: "Ladies and gentlemen, you may now smoke." There was a general laugh in which the Princess joined.

A waiter with boxes of cigars and cigarettes passed behind the head table. He held the cigarette box close to Princess Mary, who glanced at it, made no sign, and turned away her head. Other women guests took cigarettes from the box, but presumably affected by the Royal example, were not seen to light them.

Women Plan To Learn The Art of Aviation

EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 27 (CP).—With names of 20 prospective women fliers on hand, arrangements are being made by Instructor S. A. Yorke and other officials of the Edmonton Aero club to organize a special training class in the ground school for these applicants. Widespread interest is reported, and it is felt certain that within a short time this will be one of the most popular sections of the organization.

WOMAN GAINS BIG FORTUNE

At 70 Years of Age, Mrs. Pringle Is Heir To $60,000.

STILL KNITS.

ARDEN, Ont., Nov. 27 (CP).—Mrs. Wm. Pringle, 50 years resident of this city, is heir to $60,000. At almost 70 she still lights a coal oil lamp by which to do her knitting. She is crippled with rheumatism.

Before her marriage she was Jenny Crosier, one of a family of 10 sons and daughters of a pioneer settler in Olden Township. By the will of her sister, the late Mrs. Emma Dodge, widow of W. F. Dodge, New York publisher, the surviving members of the family inherit the bulk of a million dollar estate.

Alexander (Sandy) Crozier, who inherits $85,000 from his sister's will lives on one of his holdings, a beautiful 200-acre farm north of the Kingston Highway and east of Napanee. He is the seventh son of a seventh son, and relatives tell of his marvellous ability at curing strange diseases. Talking about "Sandy," his brother-in-law related instances of curing "thick neck" by touching the spot with his hands. He told of several people who had been so cured. "And they never knew when it went away," he assured.

YOUR HEALTH

MACARONI, SPAGHETTI AND NOODLES

With the coming of the winter months, the average person will be able to digest and assimilate larger quantities of the starchy foods. Among the more wholesome starches we find the Italian pastes, macaroni, spaghetti, noodles and a host of similar products manufactured out of white flour and water into hundreds of shapes such as stars, crescents, shells, the alphabet, sheets, etc. Sometimes eggs are added to these pastes, but this type is actually not so desirable as the cheaper brands manufactured without eggs.

The invention of these products is generally credited to the Italians, but the records of history show that the Chinese were the real inventors, and that the idea for these pastes was introduced into Italy by a party of German traveling merchants. However, it was the Italians who realized the value of the idea and finally, the manufacture of these products became a secret process, jealously guarded by Italy for fully a hundred years but, of course, this secret could not be maintained forever.

The flour from hard wheat is most commonly used for manufacturing these pastes and it is mixed with a small amount of boiling water and mixed and kneaded by powerful machinery until the dough is smooth and tough. It is then forced out of a cylindrical press through the small holes of a perforated iron plate. The shape of the holes regulates the mold of the product, the smaller kinds being sheared off by rotary knives.

In Italy many colored varieties are manufactured, being colored yellow with eggs, green with spinach juice and red with beet juice. The latter two types are the more wholesome.

Recently many firms have manufactured wholewheat, macaroni. This has a slight dietetic advantage, since it contains some mineral elements that have been removed from the white flour. However, all of these pastes should be eaten with meals containing non-starchy vegetables, and the latter will supply the mineral element to make up for the deficiency of the flour.

Since these products are highly starchy foods, they should not be combined with cheese or tomatoes as is done in the average recipe. The malic acid of the tomato is very powerful and does not form a good combination with any starchy food. The best way to prepare these pastes is to cook them in unsalted boiling water. Care must be taken that the water is thoroughly boiling, not merely hot. When cooked, they should be separated from the water and seasoned with butter or cream.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Rheumatic Fever.

Question: G. W. asks: "What are the symptoms of rheumatic fever?

Answer: The principal symptoms showing the approach of rheumatic fever are soreness of the joints or muscles, loss of appetite, fever which usually varies from 100° to 101° except when it occasionally, at the start, goes as high as 104. Constipation, and coated tongue are usually present and tonsils are generally swollen, but these organs may be inflamed as a result of the general toxemia and cannot usually be considered as a cause of the fever, although a fever from acute tonsilitis often resembles rheumatic fever.

The Lunchbox.

Question: Mrs. G. W. J. asks: "Will you kindly give me a few suggestions as to what would make a wholesome and nourishing lunch? My husband works in a sawmill and takes a lunch with him in the morning. Up to the present it has consisted of bread and meat or jam sandwiches. I am quite aware how faulty that is considered, so would appreciate your help very much."

Answer: You can put up a good lunch with real wholewheat bread sandwiches, and also add some non-starchy vegetables which can be kept in a thermos bottle. Be sure to get the real wholewheat bread. At lunch time the sandwiches may be freshly buttered, and peanut butter or lettuce added. Such vegetables as the following may be used in the thermos bottle: spinach, asparagus, string beans, squash, celery. In addition to these cooked vegetables, add to the lunch some fresh lettuce or celery. Wrap these fresh vegetables in a damp cloth and they will remain fresh until lunch time. I will be glad to send you an article on the subject of packing lunches if you will send me a large self-addressed stamped envelope.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

It is the opinion of many a veteran fisherman that the more simply fish is cooked the better, but the fact remains that most of the most famous fish dishes are decidedly complicated. And in Provence, France, where fish cookery is one of the fine arts, their complexity is often amazing.

No fish dish has ever been praised more in song and story than the bouillabaisse—that famous fish dish of Marseilles merely to taste which tourists galore make special trips to the French city on the Mediterranean. The saying is that to go to Marseilles without tasting this famous dish would be like going to Rome without visiting St. Peters. And yet to make really good bouillabaisse it is necessary to use no less than ten different sorts of fish including lobsters and crabs. To produce the peculiar flavor so much admired by gourmets the seasoning must include onion, garlic, tomato, saffron, bayleaf, thyme, fennel and orange peel.

Filet of sole as cooked by the famous Provencal cooks is rolled in bacon and cooked in olive oil over a charcoal fire. Stuffed tomatoes, pine nuts and mushrooms are a necessary addition for the sake of flavor. There is another famous dish called sartanade, consisting of a mixture of a variety of small fish, like sardines, anchovies, shrimps, etc., served with a marvelously flavored sauce. Another rare dish consists five different kinds of fish boiled gether and served with mayonnaise dressing seasoned with mashed garlic.

In this country clam chowder is a famous example of the complicated sort of fish dish and it is only because we are familiar with its complexities that it does not seem as much of a jumble as bouillabaisse. Clam chowder, by the way, is of French origin, having been introduced in this country in early days by French colonists who applied their own knowledge of fish cookery to such fishes and seasoning as they were able to obtain in the new world.

ACUTE NERVOUS INDIGESTION

It requires steady nerves and a cool head to mount tall ladders and frail flag poles and do a good job of painting. This is why the "big boss" of the Dyer Painting and Decorating Company, 27 Railway Street, Hamilton, is so grateful to Tanlac. This grand medicine enabled him to go on with his work, after he had suffered for three years with acute Stomach Trouble. "What little I ate seemed to lodge in the pit of my stomach and besides causing intense pain and bloating would make me so nervous on a ladder or scaffold that I was always fearful of falling. Lack of food and sleep, and excessive nervousness, kept me tired and run-down, and I was so miserable that I lost many a day's work. But thanks to Tanlac, I am my old self again, and life is very good to me. I eat and sleep fine; and am free of pain. The stomach trouble and nervousness have disappeared; I have gained eleven pounds in weight; and it would be no job at all for me to paint the City Hall flag pole."

All over Canada, Tanlac is helping men and women to win back their health. It is wonderful for Stomach Trouble and Rundown Systems, relieving gas, pain, unstrung nerves and dizziness. Tanlac contains no mineral drugs—just roots, barks and herbs—so you know it is pure and good. It costs less than 2c a dose—and your money refunded if you are not perfectly satisfied. WEDDING BELLS

LITTLE—CROWE

A very pretty wedding took place on Saturday at George street Methodist church, when Gladys Edith Lavinia, second daughter of Mrs. J. Crowe of Peterborough and the late John Crowe of Cavan, and Russell John Little, second son of Mr. and Mrs. John Little of St. James street, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the pastor of the church, the Rev. J. E. Todd. The wedding music was played by Mr. G. F. Liddle.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. Ernest Perritt, wore a pretty gown of poudre blue georgette trimmed with cream lace and a picture hat of blue velvet trimmed with gold. She wore black satin pumps and flesh-colored hose and carried a bouquet of Madam Butterfly roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Violet Saunders, was becomingly dressed in coral taffeta with hat of black and silver, black slippers and flesh-colored hose and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses.

Mr. James Mann acted as best man and ushers were Mr. Clarence Swan and Mr. Vivian Mills.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, where supper was served and decorations were carried out in pink and white.

Mr. and Mrs. Little, who received a large number of pretty and useful gifts, will live at 461 Lansdowne Donell street.

MILLER—MORTIMER

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Mark Street Parsonage on November 22, by the Rev. A. E. Thornley, when Dorothy, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Mortimer, became the bride of William, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Miller, both of this city.

The young people were attended by Miss Mildred Mortimer, sister of the bride, and Mr. Harold White.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller will live in Peterborough.

BIRDS HOLD RECORDS FOR FLIHTS ACROSS THE OCEAN

The first trans-Atlanticflyers were the birds. A British ornithologist, T. Coward, has made a collection of the records of their feats of over-sea flying, which show the remarkable stamina of the feathered voyagers and their uncanny ability at navigation.

A tern, banded in Maine, was found at the mouth of the Niger River in Africa. A lapwing, banded in Ireland, was caught in Newfoundland the following year. Three kittiwakes found living in Newfoundland, had been marked on an island off the Northumberland coast of England. These birds, of the gull species, could rest on over-water flights, it is said, as they are strong swimmers and sea-sleepers. A relative of theirs, a black-headed gull, that had been banded in Prussia, was seen on the eastern coast of Mexico, says Popular Science Monthly. Two American species of the cuckoo sometimes reach the British Isles.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This wine-red leather coat has a gray fur collar and is lined with woolen plaid in which red predominates.

If I still believed in Santa Claus and if I thought that I had been such a very good girl ever since last Christmas that I deserved something very nice this year, I'd write and ask him to give me a red leather coat with a woolen lining. In fact, I think I'd send him the sketch from which today's drawing was made so that he would make no mistake about it. "And please have a gray fur collar, dear Santa, and have the cuffs the sort that may be strapped so that the wind can't go up the arms, and be sure to have a plaid lining."

This season there really is nothing at all giddy about a red leather coat because red is worn so much for all sorts of occasions that it ceases to startle one in the least. In those days shortly after the war, when women just couldn't snap out of the depression that they had been fighting against during the actual conflicts—and everyone wore browns and grays and blacks even for evening—then red was rather startling because so few women wore it.

A new handbag designed by Chanel of Paris is of antelope kid with gilt frame and is provided with a secret, opening which should be the despair o pickpockets.

Beauvais embroidery is used for some of the smartest evening and afternoon bags. Sometimes fine Beauvais embroidery is combined with very fine gilt bead work. These bags are usually made on fine gilt frames with chain handles.

To the woman of really good taste there is just one sort of worth-while accessory neckwear. It must be of the best quality of its sort. Lace must be real lace or at least the very best sort of machine lace. There must be nothing of the slap dash about it, and it must be adjusted with perfect precision to the gown it accompanies.

A KITCHENETTE THANKSGIVING

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

Paula looked about her tiny apartment with dismay. Just imagine trying to get up a Thanksgiving dinner in a space no bigger than one single room back at the old Vermont homestead! Fancy roasting a turkey on an electric grill, making a festive board out of a card table!

Yet that was exactly what was expected of her by the dear home folks who didn't in the least realize under what conditions their busy city daughter lived.

She got out the letter wh ich had come that morning and re-read it.

"Dearest Paula,

We understand just how it is about your not being able to get sufficient time off to come home for the holiday, and we are looking forward to accepting your invitation to visit you there. But, dear, let's not eat out as you suggest. I'll get up a regular old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner right in your flat. After cooking a turkey every November for thirty-five years, I just know I'd miss it like everything!

Love from your father, Mother."

"I should think," declared Paula crossly, "that any woman who had cooked a turkey each year for thirty-five years would fly at the chance to eat one cooked by somebody else!"

How could one disappoint a beloved mother who had seemed a shade frailer on the last trip home and a dear father who still preferred his wife's cooking to the finest concoctions of any chef? And yet—how could she do otherwise?

Perhaps it was her casual glance into an electrical equipment shop the following morning that decided her to attempt the impossible. For there, displayed in the show window, was a very large wax turkey roasting himself nicely in a special sort of "top-of-the-stove" baker, especially adapted, so ran the placard, for "kitchenette cooking."

She stopped in on her way home and purchased one of the utensils. She bought an extra card table also, to put end to end with the other one. She ordered at the uptown corner grocery everything she could recall that was connected with Thanksgiving, from red candles for the mantel to sage for the stuffing.

Her mother's delight when she arrived more than repaid her. "I really didn't realize how cramped you are for room, but we will manage somehow!" she assured her daughter.

One thing still troubled Paula. She had been rather hoping that Bruce Wayland would call her up as he had on other holidays and at least give her an opportunity to dine with him had she been free. Bruce was too delectable a catch for her to feel at all sure of him so long as there had been no mention of an engagement, let alone marriage, between them.

The day before Thanksgiving Paula was unusually rushed at the office and afterwards delayed by the increased crowds in subway and elevated.

"Tired to a frazzle" as she expressed it when at last she reached her apartment, sank into a chair and rested her head against its cushioned back.

"I've made pies and cranberry sauce and dressing and everything," announced her mother complacently, "and we're having company."

Paula sat suddenly upright. "Company!" she exclaimed. "But who on earth—"

"Two friends of yours," went on her mother, "that you have written me about as being all alone. Each called you around s x and I just di I as I would at home. Invited 'em to dinner tomorrow then and there. They were Bruce Wayland and Evelyn Endicott."

"Bruce and Evelyn!" What a fiend' ish combination! The beautiful, man-chasing Evelyn and the one man she had ever met that she wanted to marry. Not for worlds would she have brought the two face to face unless Bruce's wedding ring was on her finger.

With a groan that her mother ascribed to fatigue, she leaned back in her chair with closed eyes.

Snow, powdery but persistent, fell during the night. Paula woke to see a world of roof tops, chimneys and aerials decorated for the holiday. But she knew no festive spirit in her heart.

Gallantly, however, she helped her father decorate the walls with greens, got out linen and silver for her mother, even made tiny place cards for the table.

And then, when Evelyn came in, a few little words changed the entire day for Paula.

"You don't know how I appreciate your dear mother's asking me to dinner. It promised to be such a lonesome day. You see Don won't get in until late tonight. Oh, I forgot. Don is the man I met in California last summer and he is coming on to marry me Wednesday. That is what I telephoned to tell you!"

But Bruce's words spoken when dinner was long a thing of the past, were best of all. "That was my idea," he told Paula, "of a real Thanksgiving. A n old-fashioned dinner, hospitality, an the companionship of—well, the one girl out of all the world. Shall we spend all the rest of our Thanksgivings together?"

Paula thought they could.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

Although Christmas is yet four weeks away, we have been urged through advertisements and in other ways, to do our Christmas shopping early.

• • • • • • •

Perhaps it is because we are urged so much, and for so long a time ahead, that we fail to take any heed. Even if the busy housewives in Peterborough do not seem to take heed, they are nevertheless, preparing in their own way.

• • • • • • •

I happened to be talking to a woman who lives near Peterborough, and who is known because of the fact that she never leaves things until the last minute.

• • • • • • •

This is what she is doing now in her spare moments. She is getting her Christmas card list ready, because she says when the time comes to send them out, there is always so much to do that half of her friends might be forgotten.

• • • • • • •

Perhaps you are one of those methodical housewives who saved last year's list and have added those names which you forget in your hurry last Christmas. Then, too, you must not forget to send cards this year to those who sent you cards, but whom you did not remember.

• • • • • • •

But even if you did save the list, ten chances to one you cannot find it now, so this will me a good time to start another. You have made many new acquaintances this year when on your vacation, whom you will want to remember.

• • • • • • •

Many in Peterborough send cards to relatives living in England and, of course, these have to be sent out well in advance. This is another advantage in making your list out now.

• • • • • • •

Some people have specially engraved cards, and then there are those who purchase many different cards. There is an excellent collection of cards to be found at The Examiner just now; formal, informal and the gay cards which you like to send to the younger folks.

• • • • • • •

I do not know whether there are many in Peterborough who do this, but I know of some organizations which spread Christmas cheer in this way, and it is very greatly appreciated.

• • • • • • •

Through the heads of local institutions the names of old people, friendless folk, are obtained. A card is sent to them, and it goes a long way to making their Christmas a happier one.

• • • • • • •

And you could, too, by spending a little extra time and money, send a ray of sunshine to those who have to spend their Christmas season in jail. It would be a very easy matter to obtain their names if you desired to do such a little act of kindness.

• • • • • • •

And in speaking of Christmas, this week's help contains instructions for entertaining in the Christmas season. Do not hesitate to send in the coupon early.

• • • • • • •

When washing cut glass or even the decorated variety, use a small brush and soapy water. The brush will cleanse the tiny crevasses in a way that the cloth will not do.

• • • • • • •

A little ammonia added to the water will make cut glass shine. Wipe it with a clean towel without rinsing off the soapy water.

• • • • • • •

Of course one cannot enjoy a meal when the hostess is always going back and forth between the kitchen and the dining room. It is annoying, too, to have different members of the family getting up for something.

• • • • • • •

During the course of the meal there may be three or four members on an errand at the same time, leaving only one or two to carry on the conversation. Much of this jumping up could be done by using just a little more care in setting the table.

• • • • • • •

The different courses of the meal, too, can be arranged to save getting up so many times. Here is where that time saver and step saver the tea wagon—comes in.

• • • • • • •

The dessert course can be put on top and the used dishes can be put on the lower shelves by passing them to the one sitting nearest it. With the use of covered dishes on the table, more of them could be set on the table when the family sits down.

One of the efforts of this week by ladies' organizations is the fowl supper to be held on Tuesday evening by members of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Andrew's Church. This is an event always looked forward to eagerly by church members on account of the excellence of the supper and the program which follows it.

This Ladies' Aid Society is one of the oldest of such groups in the city and is probably the oldest under that name of feminine societies banded together to assist in parochial work. In the early days, Crown grants of Churchlands were made to the three leading denominations of that time, a hundred years ago. Parcels of land at the head of Brock, Hunter and Simcoe streets were allocated as church grounds to the Presbyterian, the Roman Catholic and the Anglican church authorities. St. Andrew's Church rose on the brow of the hill at Brock street and St. Peter's was built at the head of Hunter street. But the Anglican people did not like their site as well as the land which is now occupied by St. John's Church and the beauty of the latter edifice and its grounds is a vindication of the taste of those older residents of the city. So they took up their present place and residences were built on the ground at the top of Simcoe street. It was nearly a century later that Trinity Church, a branch, in a way, of the old Charlotte street church, was erected on the old Crown Church lands and the will of the ancient authorities had its way at last.

So the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Andrew's Church has a long and honorable history of endeavor behind it. Doubtless the first members had their fowl suppers too, serving as community gatherings of a pleasant type.

There are between one hundred and twenty-five and one hundred and fifty members on the roll and the funds derived from their efforts are used in the upkeep and preservation of the church and the Manse. Decorations and necessary repairs are made to the latter from time to time by this society, and the church is looked after in the same way. In one year, the ladies surpassed themselves by gathering over $3,000 and spent a portion of this in carpeting the church. Last year, they installed a great convenience for deaf people in the church, in the form of an Acoustic on to benefit those of poor hearing.

During the war, the members were constantly busy, knitting and sewing for the soldiers and making money to buy them Christmas gifts and other comforts. Mrs. F. L. Robinson is president.

It was a benign and beautiful picture of peaceful rest that Miss Mayme Montgomery drew for those who lost men in the war, when she visioned for them so realistically the little cemetery, one of many, that she visited near Paris, during her stay in France last year.

These dead soldiers rest well in their foreign graves. In the small cemetery of Villers au Bois, near Arras, lie the bones of Canadian and Australian fighters. Over them rises in serried ranks little crosses of the French marble which Miss Montgomery described as being so very white and dazzling. Above each Canadian is the maple leaf and above each Australian the kangaroo, emblems of their countries. In front of them, instead of grass, are beds of flowers in bright shades and between the long lines of headstones is a strip of green grass. Three English gardeners are in charge of this cemetery and a one-eyed Canadian veteran takes visitors to look at this quiet, peaceful City of the Dead.

MARKET HALL IS CENTRE OF LARGE BAZAAR

Annual Sale in Aid of St. Joseph's Hospital Opened Last Night.

MANY BOOTHS.

Hot Meals Are Served at Noon and Night During Big Week.

The big bazaar in aid of St. Joseph's Hospital opened in the market hall yesterday and will continue until Friday evening of this week. It is held under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League, with the ladies of the three city parishes and from the country districts, co-operating in putting the event over and gaining as large a fund as possible to aid the work of the Hospital. Mrs. John Lynch, president of the Catholic Women's League, is in charge of general arrangements. Members of the Knights of Columbus, the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs are taking dinner at the bazaar on different days through the week. Hot meals are served at noon and at night in a large dining-room curtained off from the main hall, the tables provided with many home-made delicacies and arranged with white cloths and vases of cut flowers. Little flags decorate the exterior of the dining-hall.

The various booths, arranged in close formation about the walls of the big enclosure, are decorated brightly with colored paper and present a very attractive appearance. They are filled to capacity with everything in the line of dainty and useful articles, Christmas gifts, clothing, new and old, the latter taking the form of a rummage sale to be held during the two last days of the bazaar, candy, tobacco, fancy work of every type, religious articles in a special booth devoted to this purpose, and the many fine things to be disposed of at the Country Store, including clothing, fancy work, bags of flour, hams and bacon and groceries. There is also a fish pond stacked with pretty things designed to please the juniors who patronize it, a bingo game and the game of the "little horses." A checking booth is a convenience and a smoking room provides a comfortable resting-place.

St. Peter's Parish in Charge

On Monday and Tuesday, days devoted to St. Peter's parish, Mrs. Costello and Mrs. Leo. Fontaine have charge of the dining-hall. On Wednesday and Thursday, ladies of the Sacred Heart parish, with Mrs. J. Feeley as convenor, look after arrangements for meals and on Friday, the Immaculate Conception parish is represented, with Mrs. J. Flynn in charge.

Take 2 Market Halls

Mrs. Joseph McCarthy and Mrs. Thomas Turcotte have the sale of clothing and the rummage sale, in a booth decorated with brown and yellow paper streamers; "hot dogs" coffee, soft drinks and cake are sold in a pink and white refreshment booth conducted by ladies of the East City parish, with Mrs. W. Moher and Mrs. D. Hummell in charge; a yellow and white section where religious articles are on sale is in charge of Mrs. J. F. Mackenzie, Mrs. J. T. O'Connell and Miss May Sullivan; red, black and green paper trims the lottery booth conducted by Sacred Heart parish ladies, in charge of Miss A. Gordon and Miss M. Theobald, and the Sodality of the Sacred Heart Church has a blue, white and tinsel decorated section where dolls are sold, in charge of Miss Gertie Bacon and Miss Stella Woodhouse.

Has a Pretty Booth.

The Sodality of the Immaculate Conception Church has a pretty booth where towels and aprons are on view, in charge of the president, Miss Stella Brady and next door is the pink and white booth maintained by the Hospital for drawings, in charge of Mrs. J. Murphy. In the far corner is the large booth, decorated in black and orange, where candy and ice cream are dispensed. This is the section of the Sodality of St. Peter's Cathedral, and is in charge of the president, Miss Irene O'Brien.

A little resting room and smoking booth has been formed with a tent-like top, fringed with evergreens. Here there is comfortable wicker furniture, lighted lamps and fern boxes. Supplies of tobacco, cigarettes and chewing gum are sold. This is in charge of Mrs. W. O'Brien, Mrs. Thomas O'Brien and Mrs. J. P. O'Brien.

The Country Store, where supplies are excellent and varied, is in charge of Mrs. Thomas Lynch, assisted by an energetic corps of ladies. Mr. Thomas Turcotte is in charge of the sale in the evenings. Decorations are carried c in red, white and blue.

A fish pond, always a popular drawing card for the children, has plenty of splendid articles in its large stock. It is in charge of Miss Annie Simons, assisted by Mrs. T. Lane, Miss Nell Simons, Miss Agnes Burns, Miss Ada Meagher, Clara Grisdale and Agnes Weyer. Miss Margaret Lynch, with Mrs. Joseph Kelly supervises the "little horses" game and the bingo game is in charge of the Knights of Columbus and Grand Knight D. A McKinnon.

Mrs. Frank Lynch looks after the checking booth, with its red and green decorations.

Near the entrance to the dining hall, the F. R. J. MacPherson Store has a display of their stock of "Easy" washers, in a booth arranged with dark blue streamers.

YELLOW AND RED RAYS FROM SUN ALSO VITAL TO HEALTH

All the colored rays of sunlight, and not merely the invisible ultra-violet, or "health" rays, are needed to make your body grow. That is the conclusion of Dr. Charles Sheard, of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., who tried raising two broods of chickens, one in light from which colored window panes removed the red and yellow rays only, and the other in light with the green and blue rays removed.

In both broods the overworked parathyroid glands, which have an important part in converting food into tissue and energy, says Popular Science Monthly, became abnormally enlarged in an effort to make up the deficiency. Cod liver oil in small doses remedied the trouble.

LEAF PLAYER SHARES N.H.L. SCORING HONORS

Horne and Clancy in Tie For Leadership of Canadian Division

CANADIAN LOOP LEADERS HAVE EACH TOTAL OF FOUR GOALS AND ONE ASSIST

Bill Cook, George Hay and Frankie Boucher, With Two Newcomers, Are Named Among the Leaders of the Americ an Section.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—The first official scoring list for the National Hockey League, including games of Sunday, November 25, present a rather unusual appearance.

In the Canadian division of the league, a player who came up from the minors, after brief previous major league experience, is tied with a defence player for the leadership. In the American division, the leadership looks quite natural in the hands of Bill Cook, brilliant right wing of the world's champion New York Rangers, coupled with George Hay, crack left wing of Detroit Cougars, and Frankie Boucher, also of the Ranger forward line. Two newcomers to the major league appear in the first six in the American section, however.

"Shorty" Horne, the little Hercules of Toronto Maple Leafs, a player who had brief major league experience with Montreal Maroons and then was farmed out to the Canadian Professional League, is tied with Frank Clancy, dashing defence player of Ottawa Senators, for the lead in the Canadian division. Each has four goals and one assist.

Has Scored Three Goals

Bill Cook, the Ranger star, has scored three goals, but Hay equals him on points with two goals and an assist. Frankie Boucher is also on even terms with the other two. He scored one goal, but this forward furnished the assists in two cases. Victor Ripley, the blonde youngster who was secured by Detroit from the American association, and "Butch" Keeling, the forward sold by Toronto to the Rangers, are tied with two goals each.

Much emphasis has been laid on the fight qualities of the New York American team, so that it is noteworthy that the leader in penalties in either section is Lionel Conacher, the "big train" who captains the New York club. The heavyweight defence star has had 11 minors and 1 major for a total of 27 minutes. Eddie Shore, the rugged Boston Bruin defence star, has had 19 minutes in penalties, leading the American section, while Aurel Joliat, diminutive Canadien left winger, has the same amount. "Hooley" Smith, Montreal Maroon forward, has 18 minutes.

Ching Johnson, burly defence star of the Rangers, is second to Shore in the American section, with 14 minutes, and still another defence player is third, this being Lionel Hitchman, who has had 12 minutes in the cooler.

HAMILTON WINS FIRST GAME 5-3

Defeats Bisons in Battle That Brought Out Best in Both Outfits.

WINNERS IMPROVE.

HAMILTON, Nov. 27.—Hamilton's Canpro puck chasers broke into the win column for the first time last night, incidentally transforming a lukewarm crowd of about two thousand into a howling mob of real enthusiasts, when they defeated the Buffalo Bisons by a score of 5 to 3 in a hectic battle that brought out the best in both outfits.

Faced with the necessity of winning or imposing upon themselves a real handicap, the Tigers stepped into action in the opening minute and carried a strong all-round game to their faster-skating opponents. They were leading by the tender score of 3 to 2 at the end of the first period and after Buffalo had knotted the count in jig time after the second started, the locals scored two more and were never headed then. The final period, which produced some ding-dong hockey, went scoreless, although the Bisons fought hard throughout.

It was a vastly different Hamilton team that faced the home fans last night. Manager Morris decided to get into action and Eddie Baker, a star with the Radios in the senior city league here last night, made his debut, which was entirely successful. The locals showed a changed line-up, with Marty Lauder and Reinnikka dividing the centre ice duties, Duncan and Brophy sharing the job at left wing and Manager Morris and Stewart Duncan playing bang up games at right wing. Bennett and Baker were the defence regulars after Quennville had started.

OSHAWA BLUE DEVILS WILL NOT PLAY C.N.R.

OSHAWA, Nov. 27.—The executive and players of the Oshawa Blue Devils, intermediate champions of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, at a meeting held here last night, decided not to continue in the Canadian Rugby Union playdowns. Therefore the conquerors of the Sarnia Wanderers will not go to Montreal on Saturday to meet the Canadian National team, Quebec Union champions, for the Canadian intermediate championship.

The Oshawa officials and players regret that this action had to be taken but a check up of the injured members of the team brought out the fact Scott Hubbell, star punter; Alex. Park, the captain and quarterback; Cook and Carver would be unable to make the trip and their absence would leave Tribble as the only backfield player available.

Hubbell and Park played in the second game with London, and in the two with Sarnia, under difficulties, and were further injured Saturday. The club doctor reported last night that not one of the four players, Hubbell, Cook, Park and Carver, would be sufficiently recovered from their injuries to permit them playing against C.N.R.

Consequently the game was definitely called off insofar as the Blue Devils are concerned. As Loyola College, intercollegiate intermediate champions, decided some time ago not to take part in the C.R.U. playdown, the Canadian intermediate title will not be decided this fall.

TORONTO JUNIORS DEFEAT INVADERS

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—Toronto's Big Four teams turned back the challenge of out-of-town teams for the Sportsmen's Patriotic junior trophy at the Arena Gardens last night, Marlboros disposing of Niagara Falls, while Toronto Canoe Club defeated Kitchener Waterloo, both games ending in the same scores of 5 to 3. The invaders provided a real threat in the preseason series and only the better condition and early experiences gave the locals their victories. The games were more of a mid-Winter style than second round S.P.A., and were undecided until the closing periods.

As fast as new teams enter the S.P.A. competition the prediction that junior hockey is in for the best year in its history becomes more evident. Niagara Falls had practically the same machine that gave the mighty Marlboros a battle last year and they provided the same sturdy argument last night, while Kitchener-Waterloo, with last season's team intact, extended Toronto Canoe Club until late in the last period. The best crowd to attend a junior double this year, was treated to two well-played and interesting games.

The bitter feeling that was born in the O.H.A. play-offs last year was revived last night, when Marlboros and Niagara met again, which added excitement to the struggle. Marlboros were without Charlie Conacher, their brilliant wing man, who was injured in the last game, and without him the locals lacked a good deal of their offensive punch. The Falls had the same shifty squad, which had speed to burn and worked tricky combination on offensive thrusts that had the O.H.A. champions in a precautious position. The driving power and punch from the Duke's backdivision decided the issue, for it was the individual charges of the defence that scored the needed goals.

"Ice-Water" Boat Can Attain Speed Of 40 Miles Hour

KINGSTON, Nov. 27.—An ice-water boat is being built at Alexandria Bay, N.Y., for river service. It is hoped to have it make the initial trip during Christmas week. The craft will be 24 feet long, 10-foot beam and 3½ feet deep and driven by motors of 350 horse power combined. The cabin 17 x 9 feet, is enclosed in glass, heated from motor exhaust, lighted by electricity, and has seating capacity for thirty-five persons. The craft, it is expected, will run 35 miles an hour in water and 40 miles an hour on ice. Storage capacity is made to run the boat for eighteen hours at a

WINDSOR WINS FROM CATARACTS

Secure Three Goals Before Homesters Score—Losers Make Strong Rally.

NIAGARA FALLS, Nov. 27. — The top position aspirations of the Falls Canpros received a setback here to-night when the Windsor Bull Dogs stepped in and carried off a 3 to 2 victory. A crowd of 2,000 fans witnessed the encounter. Windsor had a big margin on the play for two periods and carried their edge over into the early stages of the final stanza, when the Lalonde-coached team staged a rally, scoring two goals and were getting their share of the play at the finish. On the night's play, Windsor deserved to win by a bigger margin than one goal.

The visitors looked better than the locals in every department except goal, where Beaudry gave a wonderful account of himself and was the main factor in keeping the score down, though erratic shooting on good chances by the invaders was greatly responsible for their failure to score more goals.

Stan Brown, on the Windsor defence, was probably the shining light of the evening's performance. His rushes were fast and dangerous at all times and only tough breaks kept him off the score sheet. Bellemer also went good defensively for the invaders, while Rene Fournier gave valuable service going both ways when relieving on the defence. Up front, Neville, Carson and Emms or any combination of vanguard performers in action for the Bull Dogs, had the Falls front-liners outspeeded, and outchecked at most stages. "Mickey" Roach showed cleverness on the attack, while Greff, Sorrell and McGuire all turned in strong games. McBride did some useful body checking when on the defence.

"Dutch" Cain, "Shorty" Quesnell and "Butch" Kelterbourne were best for the Falls. George Herrington made his first appearance of the season and gave a couple of flashes of his speedy stuff.

SOAPSTONES IN CANADA

Soapstone was produced in Canada for the first time in 1922, the material being taken out in block form and consigned to kraft paper mills for furnace linings; this stone came from a deposit at Robertson, Quebec. Other deposits have since been opened up in the same district; and important developments are also reported from Vermilion Bay, Lake of the Woods region, Ontario.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

The M.A.A. boasted one of its greatest teams the fall following the close of the World War. So had the Hamilton Tigers and the Argonauts. McGill won the Intercollegiate Union with its great backfield players, Flanagan, Anderson, Heney and Montgomery.

McGill, following its custom, did not meet the interprovincial champions, the M.A.A. team, for the Canadian championship in the fall of 1919.

Hamilton, November 6, was the feature game of that year. The Montrealers lost to the Argonauts in Toronto 4-3, and the Tigers' chances looked good to win on their own grounds. The M.A.A. team won the game 12 to 6, dealing the Yellow and Black team and friends one of the hardest blows in a long and eventful career. It was the first time the M.A.A. had won in Hamilton since 1907. Seven thousand people saw Jacque's wonderful punting that afternoon defeat their favorites. Moe Herscovitch, the Montrealers' demon line plunger, was in rare form, although his best efforts against the Tiger line generally went for small gains.

The M.A.A.'s punt formation is diagramed below:

The forwards stood shoulder to shoulder. Nos. 5 and 6 went down the field under the punt. McGill No. 1 passed the ball back to Jacques No. 2 in the diagram who drove the ball high and far down the field. The line-up:

FRANKIE COLLINS ON TORONTO TEAM

Former Local Senior Player Signs With Willowdale Intermediates.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—The stock of the Willowdale entry in the O.H.A. intermediate series, has taken an upward bound with the signing of Frank Collins, former Peterborough seniors' left wing, and Mike Underwood, defence player with the Marlboro seniors last winter. Manager Bill Hines now has a formidable front line ready with "Shrimp" MacPherson available for centre ice duty and his brother, Johnny, from Marlboro seniors, to patrol the right boards with Collins on the left flank.

Manager Hines has Underwood for one defence berth and several other experienced prospects in view He has three goalers on his list and all have seen O.H.A. service. This radial line club is not going to half measures in staging their comeback to the O. H.A.

CANADIANS TURN TO FLORIDA FOR A CARE-FREE WINTER SEASON.

Semi-tropical Florida is again drawing large numbers of Canadians for the winter season. It is becoming more popular every year—principally because it is so near, its climate is so inviting, and it offers such an array of interesting sports and pastimes peculiar to that part of the country.

Where else but Florida can one enjoy better such an exciting novelty as Tarpon fishing, or aquaplaning, or speed-boating, or polo? Where else can one motor for miles through avenues shaded by graceful palms—by great citrus groves of ripening oranges and lemons—or along the shore of the Atlantic. There's golf, too—all winter long

Arrange now to spend your winter months in Florida—any Canadian National Railways Agent will gladly supply you with information about rates, routes and its resorts.

FOUR TEAMS TO FORM LOOP

Winners of Group Will Enter Ontario Interscholastic Basketball Series.

SIX GAMES FOR EACH.

Basketball in the Collegiate this year will be far ahead of any year in the past. The team is entered in a league similar to that of the Rugby with teams from Lindsay, Cobourg, Oshawa and Peterborough, giving each team six games. The winners of this group will go into the Ontario Interscholastic basketball series. The local basketball fans will thus get a chance to see some good basketball, as these High School teams put up some wonderful games. P.C.I. should put out a good team as they have several of last year's team back in school. These include Keith Copping, captain and forward; Wilfred Preston forward; Howie MacDonald, centre; Pat Hall, defence, and Hedley Vickers. With the addition of a few like Dick Green, who played defence for one of the Ridley College teams last year, and Wilfred Warde, who looked promising at the practices last year, they ought to put out a smart team, that would hold their own with any outside squad. The new gym. will help the team along as they will be able to have more pratices. The gym is one of the best in the district, having a large floor space and all modern gymnasium improvements. The girls' team will also be likely to be in a group similar to that of the boys.

APEX OF EDUCATION NOT IN UNIVERSITY

Archbishop of York Stresses Value of Adult Education Outside.

YORK, England, November 27. — (Canadian Press.) — "We must get out of our minds that false metaphor which has been so continually used, of the apex of our educational system being in the university," said Most Rev. Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of York, who is succeeding Most Rev. Dr. Thomas Randall Davidson as Archbishop of Canterbury, at a recent conference held under the auspices of the British Institute of Adult Education,, and the British Broadcasting Corporation. There were only a comparative few who were qualified to receive a university education, the Archbishop continued.

The ultimate end of education was the culture of the whole of the people, the Archbishop said. He did not in the least bow the knee before the supposed significance of a degree. He had the best of reasons himself for knowing how very easily that particular attainment could be achieved and how little it represented—no particular attainment except a certain capacity for memory and reading of a most limited kind, and no particular proof whatever of all that we should mean by education.

More and more it should be realized that adult education was the key to the whole problem of education, said the Archbishop, and therefore it would be an immense thing if we could employ and multiply opportunities of putting the key of knowledge before our people in every part of the country; and here it was that there came into our hands this new and marvellous and most interesting method of broadcasting, ready to hand, which seemed just to do all those things for adult education that those who regarded themselves as its pioneers longed to be able to do.

Bridgenorth won the final game in the Lakefield Softball League defeating Harrison's team, 18 to 17.

That was some exciting game that Harrison's and Bridgenorth staged in the Lakefield rink last evening. Bridgenorth came to bat in the first half of the ninth with the score 17 to 15 against them. They slammed out three runs and then held Harrison's scoreless, to win the game. The two pitchers, Len Forsythe and Cliff Carruthers, pitched great ball. Forsythe had fifteen strikeouts but he walked quite a number.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

JOHN BARRYMORE IN 'TEMPEST'

The New York Telegram called the picture "Tempest," in which the romantic actor, John Barrymore, has the stellar role: "The answer to the modern movie maiden's prayer." And as far as romance and stirring action goes, the description fits very well. Any girl who isn't satisfied with the love scenes in this picture would be hard to suit. They have a "St. Elmo" flavor in the portrayal of conflict between the star, a Russian dragoon of peasant birth, and the princess to whom he aspires and who he finally wins, by way of the "Red Dawn" route.

Barrymore is Ivan Markov, a Russion soldier of 1914, who receives a commission after much hard work, and then finds the enmity of his aristocratic brother officers raised against him, because of his lowly birth. He falls in love with the daughter of his General, the Princess Tamara, a role taken in exotic fashion by the superb German actress, Camilla Horn. His "buddy" is Sergeant Bulba, played by Louis Wolheim, he of the broken nose and protruding eyes.

Markov, with his dumb adoration and irritating demeanor, comes into conflict with his lady love, a maiden of high temper and great beauty and pride. She taunts him with his peasant birth and then, after he has come in drunken misery to her room, to leave there a bunch of roses and a message of his love, she has him disgraced and stripped of his newfound honors. He is confined in solitary punishment while his comrades go to war. But the "Red Dawn" in Russia brings him freedom and he forms one of a committee of cruel men who condemn their former rulers to death. In this role, Barrymore gives a more convincing picture of manhood than in the first portions of the picture and the final scenes of quick-witted desperation are splendidly done.

It is a romantic story with a background that is picturesque and dramatic and a very fine cast to carry out a thrilling love tale.—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT.

BARTHELMESS SCORES NEW TRIUMPH IN VIVID UNDERWORLD SCREEN DRAMA.

The versatile Richard Barthelmess has a vehicle worthy of his extraordinary talents in "The Noose," which opened at the Regent Theatre last night.

"The Noose" is a highly dramatic vehicle of which the star and director have fully availed themselves. It teems with sure fire situations and is unquestionably one of the finest stories Barthelmess has had in years. First National Pictures has supplied a remarkably well-balanced cast of first rate artists, a splendid production, excellent photography and a scenario, with the result that patrons of the Regent Theatre are offered an entertaining and thrilling photo-dramatic evening.

Richard Barthelmess enacts the role of Nickie Elkins, a youth raised in an underworld environment, who is caught in the ironic meshes of a very melodramatic combination of circumstances. To tell you what the situation is would be to spoil your enjoyment. Sufficient to say, it is gripping and unusual. Barthelmess avails himself of the broad opportunities for histrionism and achieves the dramatic heights of which he is so capable.

Opposite the star appears Lina Basquette, former Follies dancer, and it is safe to say that she is a genuine sensation. Her interpretation of Dot, the cabaret dancer, is admirably done. Alice Joyce, as the governor's wife, and Nickie's mother, gives a convincing and edifying performance. Montagu Love, as the boy's father, and head of the bootlegging gang, enacts some of the most perfidious villainy of his cinematic career.

John Francis Dillon directed "The Noose," and it is the opinion of this reviewer that he has topped his finest work.

"Bud" Fisher, the net guardian of Toronto's team, the "Millionaires," in the Canadian Professional Hockey League, is no stranger to sport fans, having played for Grimsby in the Allan Cup playdowns last year.

BRIDGENORTH WINS LAKEFIELD SOFTBALL LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP

Harrisons Put Up Game Battle, But Lose Out By 18-17 Score.

PITCHERS GOOD.

Melville McWilliams, Manager of Winning Team, Presented With Trophy.

(Examiner Correspondence).

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 27.—Bridgenorth won the Rink Company's Cup on Monday night after a hard won battle, a veritable Waterloo, with Harrison's, While the game was keenly contested and both teams were out to win, it was a gentlemen's game, and both winners and vanquished were sportsmen to the very last. There was a large and particularly enthusiastic crowd, with plenty of fans for each team as the vociferous applause testified.

Every man did his best, and the exhibition of softball was well worth seeing. Forsythe struck out thirteen men and walked eight, while Carruthers struck out five and walked seven. Bradshaw's homer in the seventh innings was a feature in Bridgenorth's game. Max Wilson had the record for runs, scoring four during the game.

The game began with Bridgenorth well in the lead, but in the fifth innings Harrison's pulled ahead and held their lead till the ninth, when Bridgenorth scored the winning run, and though Harrison's batted last, they were out of luck, and the game ended with a score of 18-17. It was close to the very last second, and as soon as the game was over Forsythe, Bridgenorth's pitcher, was seized and carried off the field shoulder high by enthusiastic fans. As soon as the play ceased the teams and interested fans gathered in the arena, while J. A. Porter, president of the Rink Company, addressed the team, briefly saying that the last game, clean and closely contested, was a fitting climax to the season's schedule. Personally, he had not seen all the games, but in those he saw, like this game, there was a good exhibition of sportsmanship. The attendance this year has not been as good as last, and in consequence there have been lower gate receipts, but, like the teams, the Rink Company are good sportsmen, and, win or lose, they play the game. Mr. Porter referred to Harrison's team as good losers, and hoped that both the teams will play in the League again next season.

W. G. Morrison presented the cup to Melville McWilliams, the manager of the Bridgenorth team, who made a graceful reply, thanking the Rink Company, the umpires, score-keepers, and all who helped to make the games go so well.

Percy Harrison, manager of Harrison's, led the cheering for Bridgenorth, and the best game of the season wound up pleasantly, a real gentleman's game with no "crowing" on the part of the winners and no whining from the losers, the kind of a team which adds friends to each team's list.

The line-up:

Bridgenorth—Pitcher, L. Forsythe; catcher, Connors; 1st base, H. Dormer; short stops, G. Dormer and M. Wilson; 2nd base, Shearer; 3rd base, Bradshaw; field, J. Gillespie and Baker; subs, Jopling and Griffin.

Harrison's—Pitcher, C. Carruthers; catcher, M. Dobson; 1st base, A. Smith; short stops, P. Calladine and R. Greene; 2nd base, B. Ross; 3rd base, Dorrington; field, E. Vinnette and Clarke; subs, H. Vinnette and T. Montgomery.

The score by innings was:

Bridgenorth.. .. .. .. 222110433—18
Harrison's .. .. 020434400—17

It was announced at the close of the game that a benefit game for Reg. Dyer, who hurt his finger very badly on Friday night last, will be held on Thursday night between Bridgenorth and an All Star team, the entire proceeds to be given to Mr. Dyer.

SIR ARTHUR CURRIE DELAYED BY FEVER

Disease Contracted On Riviera —Patient Gaining Strength.

MONTREAL, November 27. Canadian Press. — Sir Arthur Currie's progress towards his former robust health was described to-day by W. M. Birks, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, who has just returned from a visit to Europe, where Sir Arthur has spent some months.

The former commander of the Canadian Corps in France, went overseas early in the summer on a health trip, following a severe illness. While on theRiviera, Sir Arthur contracted a fever which the doctors later diagnosed as typhoid. He immediately returned to England. Mr. Birks said that for each week over a period of five or six weeks before he left the Old Country he had seen a marked improvement in Sir Arthur's condition. Mr. Birks reported that Sir Arthur was becoming stronger each day, and was now enjoying a little golf. Mr. Birks said that Sir Artur's doctors were convinced that if he took things easily and didn't tire himself, he would be as well as ever he was within a few months.

DO THINGS RATHER THAN LEARN THEM

Alberta University President Urges More Practical Education.

EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—Stressing the practical side of education rather than the theoretical, Dr. R. C. Wallace, president of the University of Alberta in a recent address at a teachers' convention at Vermilion, made a somewhat radical departure from the idea of education on which the present system is based. Declaring practical men dealing with practical problems were needed in the educational system and that subjects in the curricula of the schools not of a practical nature must be replaced by something of more value, Dr. Wallace said:

"People are paying big money for educational purposes and they want their children fitted for the accomplishment of something tangible, something practical. The time taken in learning long lists of spelling for instance might better be utilized otherwise as a person's vocabulary is strangely limited after all. The new theory embodies the art more of doing things than of learning them. That is real education after all to know how to do things. If a boy or girl is not interested in a particular study it is a waste of time to try and teach them. The mind goes only where one's interest is. Lecturing is not educating. The old-fashioned way of teaching is becoming antiquated. Students must be taught to acquire knowledge by practical means. We cannot teach unless we interest the pupils. Pupils are not interested in theories, but in practical things."

RHEUMATISM SAID: "YOU STAY AWAKE!"

Rheumatism had settled in Mr. W. G. Burrow's thigh—apparently to stay. The pain was awful. He was wild with it. Sleep was impossible. Desperate, one night, he limped out of the house to get some Oil of Wintergreen. The druggist suggested Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules, if the other didn't work.

"Well," writes Mr. Burrows, "I might just as well have taken so much water as Oil of Wintergreen. I didn't sleep. Next day I went back to the drugstore and said I wanted to try T-R-C's. I took a dose then and there. In half an hour all the sharp, stabbing pain had gone, leaving only a little soreness in the muscles. Two more doses cleared away every trace of pain. It has never returned."

"So many medicines good for one trouble make a pack of other troubles—but T-R-C's don't . . ."

Are you in misery with Rheumatism? With Sciatica? Lumbago? Neuritis? Neuralgia? Why? Your druggist has T-R-C's ready and able to give you speedy relief—with absolute safety, too, as T-R-C's are entirely free from habit-forming or dangerous drugs. A wonderful remedy. Proved in use by thousands of grateful people.

There is no mystery about the action of T-R-C's. They enter the bloodstream. Go to the root of the trouble. Help your body throw off the poisons that are making your life wretched. Get a box of T-R-C's. Enjoy good health once more. 50c and $1 at all druggists. 104

ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY IS DISCUSSED BY HON. G. N. GORDON

Development Means Expenditure of $2,500,000,000, Declares Speaker.

INTERNATIONAL MEASURE.

"The Journal of Electricity estimates that for each new 1,000 horsepower developed 385 workmen, representing with their families, 1,925 people are given employment and the development of 4,000,000 Canadian horsepower means the maintenance of 7,000,000 new Canadians," declared Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., speaking before the Men's Association of St. Paul's church last evening. "The development of that 4,000,000 new horsepower means an expenditure of 2 and 1-2 billion dollars in new machinery."

The St. Lawrence Shipway, as discussed by Mr. Gordon assumed a new significance for the gathering of men who enjoyed also, a splendid supper provided by the Ladies' Aid of the church, and a brief musical program that included vocal numbers by Miss J. Pattison and Mr. Flowers. At the close of the meeting, the Rev. William Allan voiced the appreciation of his listeners to Mr. Gordon while Alderman McDonald thanked the ladies who had provided the supper and all who had taken part during the evening's program.

"I propose to address you upon a great and urgent undertaking which confronts the people of the North American Continent; that is, the construction of the shipway from the Great Lakes to the Sea—a project larger in its undertaking and potentialities than the Panama Canal. The wholeway would be 2,000 miles long—1,100 in Canadian boundary, and 900 in the U.S.—from the head of Lake Superior to the sea.

The Canadian National Advisory Committee's recommendations for the development of St. Lawrence Power indicated a sense of loyalty to Canadian interests, and a caution in safeguarding Canadian rights.

Only two main features present themselves, in the report, which are:

Development of Canadian sections by Canadian interests, through public or private ownership.

Absorption of the power thus developed by Canadian users before the international development is undertaken.

The Committee's report to the Government is briefly, Canadian development of the sections within Canadian territory first, and these recommendations, the Government apparently feels are acceptable.

"It cannot be seriously questioned that the provinces possess the right to develop power from the waters flowing within their boundaries. Such being the case, Quebec naturally wishes her power development undertaken through private interests, as the Quebec people have never been sympathetic to public ownership schemes. Any attempt to enter upon the scheme as a publicly owned undertaking, paid for from the Treasury of Canada, and from the taxation of Canadian business, would create immediate hostility in Quebec. The Quebec Government's plan of development, is for private interests to develop the power, construct the canals for navigation purposes, along the lines required by the Dominion Government for shipping, and then to hand over the canals to the Crown without cost to be used in the proposed shipway scheme. To protect the public interest, the Government will control the form and manner of construction, and will generally safeguard, not only Provincial rights, but also the Dominion requirements.

"That private capital will be used instead of borrowing and adding many hundreds of millions to Canada's national debt, has unquestionably met the approval of the leaders of financial and business affairs in Canada. Senator McDougald, the chairman of the Montreal Harbor Board, and a noted authority upon shipping, recently declared that 4,000,000 potential horsepower of electric energy running to waste, existed upon the Canadian side of the St. Lawrence, while upon the United States shore, there was 1,000,000 horsepower.

"In view of the fact that Senator McDougald is a member of the St. Lawrence Development Advisory Committee, appointed by the Federal Government, and the other important positions which he occupies, his views carry the greatest authority and undoubtedly command a great deal of respect.

"The Governments of the Province of Ontario and Quebec, through their respective Prime Ministers, at the Inter-Provincial conference held at Ottawa last summer, asserted very emphatically their claims to the ownership of the power generated from the flowing waters within the confines of their respective provinces.

"The Dominion Government, through the Honorable Ernest LaPointe, Minister of Justice, discussed the matter, but he did not admit Provincial ownership of these waters. Prime Minister Taschereau and Prime Minister Ferguson clearly indicated that they were united in their claims of Provincial ownership and intended to contest any claim that the Canadian Government might make to the ownership of the potential power.

"As a consequence the two Prime Ministers obtained the legal opinions of two eminent counsel, Aime Geoffrion, Esq., K.C., and W. N. Tilley, Esq., K.C., who stated, in effect, their opinion that the provinces did own the power generated from the waters, providing that the development of such power did not interfere with the right of navigation upon the waters.

"I think it may be assumed that, generally speaking, the opinion of such outstanding counsel as Messrs. Geoffrion and Tilley, might be accepted as being of much weight. From my study of authorities, I feel that their opinions are sound

"If they are, then only one result follows: The provinces have the right to develop their own power, if provision is made that no interference with navigation takes place.

Build Canal by Sections.

Building the canal in sections in Canada and developing the power as needed, would remove too the objection that the spending of approximately five hundred million dollars upon the whole work and awaiting a power market, would run up costs to such a figure as to make the cost of power prohibitive. By this method the Canadian sections would cost the public treasury nothing at all.

The St. Lawrence development as an international undertaking is the United States way. Isaac F. Marcosson, an eminent American journalist, in the Easter Saturday evening Post, states that the scheme is backed by twenty-two States of the Union and affects nearly half of the United States' population in some way.

"Ontario, as to power development and distribution, is generally sympathetic and friendly to public ownership, along the line of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. The commision owns power undertakings of over $200,000,000, and has an annual revenue from its capital investments of about $35,000,000.

"There is one million horsepower for Ontario, and one million horse power for the United States, on the international section, while all the rest is in Quebec, and there is no reason why Ontario cannot buy its power from developments in Quebec at $15.00, which is cheaper than she can develop.

"It may be taken for a certainty that the St. Lawrence development, estimated at $582,000,000 will cost $800,000,000 to one thousand million.

"Hydro-Electric enterprises in Canada represent a greater investment than any single manufacturing industry, the total installation being approximately 5,000,000 horse power, representing an investment of over $900,000,000, and the estimated possible installation through Canada is over 43,000,000 horse power, or about nine times our present installation.

Toronto	169,44 H.P.
Hamilton	28,453 H.P.
London	20,350 H.P.
Peterborough	4,904 H.P.

From these figures one can see how great a development is possible as we expand industrially.

Procedure Suggested

The Committee is cognizant of the fact that the plan of procedure herein outlined necessarily involves consideration of the problems of the Province of Ontario from the standpoint of power supply during the interval between the development of the national section and of the international. We believe the situation justifies consideration of the present problem from the broad national standpoint of both the provinces concerned, and that in the national interests such arrangements should be made as will enable Ontario to secure her power requirements for eastern territory from the purely Canadian section of the river pending the development of the International reaches. We are of the opinion that, in the light of the good understanding presently obtaining between the two provinces, this would not be difficult of arrangement, and that power could be thus secured at rates which will compare most favourably with present cost of Ontario power.

"In consideration of the economic aspect, we have given some thought to the question of possible export of power. As to that we say that we are in complete accord with the feeling throughout Canada that export of power should not be permitted."

"Canada is rich in power, the United States is not. The hour has struck for Canadians to preserve their richest heritage and insist upon our own power developments wholly within Canadian territory before any International arrangements are made. By this method we may develop our resources without using our energy to develop the wealth of the great nation to the south of us.

"Power is the life of the nation," concluded the speaker. "Without it industrial life is dormant, with it, we can develop teeming cities, of great proportions, and, if not, outstrip our southern neighbor, we can at least enter the race with the handicap not against us.

SIMPLE TRICKS IN MAGIC by JACK MULHALL

Featured with Dorothy Mackaill in "Lady Be Good," a First National Picture

—Divination. The two coins to be held by the spectator. The hands closed, spectator is asked to lift one hand while performer's back is turned and held it up for a minute.

Give a half dollar and a quarter to a member of your audience and ask him to note the dates and value of coins and to fix his mind on them. You then request that while your back is turned, he concentrate on either one of the two coins, holding a coin in either hand. You note the disposition of the coins, of course. You ask that he hold the one he is concentrating upon close to his forehead, letting the other hand with its contents rest on his knee.

For a few moments you stand with your back to him and then tell him to drop his hand as you have read his thoughts. Turning immediately, you tell him which coin he thought of.

It is very simple—the whiter of the two hands will be the one which he held to his head, hence the one upon which he concentrated.

PROSPECTORS FACE DISAPPOINTMENT

Gold Seekers To New Guinea Require Ample Capital To Prospect.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—Most of the prospectors who have stampeded into Edie Creek, New Guinea, following the discovery of gold there, are doomed to disappointment, according to travellers returning from that territory.

"Unless prospectors possess ample capital they should stay away," investigators say. "Most of the people going into the wilds have no idea of the terrible hardship they are facing. They are going in poorly equipped and there is not the slightest doubt that many of them will never return alive. Tropical diseases are rife in the country where gold has been found and opportunities for effective medical aid are naturally very limited.

"The area is large and practically undeveloped with no roads at all—merely rough trails that in places are almost impossible to negotiate. There is no doubt that the gold is there, and probably in large quantities, but it is foolhardy for anyone to attempt to find it in paying amounts unless he makes thorough preparations and is backed by ample capital. It is essentially a proposition for the big operators. As in all gold rushes, and because of these attractions a great many men have lost all they had. Even those who have lived a long time in New Guinea are unable to withstand the jungle climate, and many have perished."

to have done," stated Brig. Gen. John A. Gunn, honorary president of the Canadian Legion. "If the city does not want their war trophis I am sure the Legion will find a home for them."

Alexander Shields, provincial secretary of the Legion, said: "They ought to have been ashamed of themselves for dumping the guns. We will take care of them if nobody else will."

Capt., the Rev. Sydney Lambert, beloved padre of Christie Street Hospital, voiced what he said were the sentiments of every veteran in the hospital when he declared that his sympathies were altogether with the Peterborough soldiers. "These guns are trophies of war, aren't they?" he asked "Then why should they be disposed of in this way, consigning them like so much rubbish to a public dump. It is unthinkable."

"I'm For It, Too."

Harry Bray, of the executive of the Canadian Legion, also spoke strongly in the matter. "I could well understand a soldier taking the view that the guns were reminders of war horrors, but it is difficult to think that a civilian could take such action," he said. Informed that other officers of the Legion favored taking the guns over, Mr. Bray said: "I'm for it, too."

Lieut. Col. Parsons, General Staff Officer of Military District No. 2, stated to The Examiner that he had never heard of a similar case in Canada, although there had been several reported from the Old Country.

PRESTON, Ont., Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—Mrs. Adolph Sefeld, over eighty, sustained burns about the face and hands from which it is feared she will not recover, when she became trapped in a fire that destroyed her home, one mile west of Blair early last night. Her husband was also burned, but will recover.

ing Officer of the Regiment, and asked permission to place the guns in front of the Armouries, and he refused consent. I asked Captain Abraham, President of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Legion, for permission to place the guns on the Legion Hall grounds, but again consent was not given.

"Instructions were then given to move the guns to some temporary place until Confederation Square was fitted up and a permanent location for them decided upon. For this purpose they were taken to the east end of Simcoe street(not on the dump, which is farther south), and there they would have remained until the work on the Square was completed and the most suitable site for the guns decided upon.

"I feel sure that if this had been understood there would have been no feeling exhibited, and that all the Veterans would have recognized that the committee was giving their time and working in the best interest of all concerned, as we did so earnestly when the Great War was in progress."

Held Back Comment

Though Alderman J. M. Greene declined to make any statement on Monday regarding the removal of the guns, he explained his silence and his stand generally on the situation while in conversation with an Examiner reporter shortly after noon to-day.

"The reason I made no comment yesterday was because Mayor Denne was out of the city and as I was on the committee working with him, I felt that it was not opportune to do so during his absence," said he.

"Some time ago, a committee, comprising, the Mayor, Aldermen C. H Ackerman, Hamilton and myself, was appointed by the city council to work in conjunction with the memorial committee. On account of my being chairman of the Parks committee, the details of the work fell, to a certain extent, on my shoulders."

"Who gave the order for the removal of the guns?" asked The Examiner.

"We were carrying out the wishes of the people and the Mayor, accordingly, ordered the removal of the guns from the park. When the matter was discussed last summer, and since then, I heard not one dissenting voice to the proposal of removing the guns until now, when we take action.

"We were spending a large sum of money to improve the setting for the memorial, the shrubbing, levelling and additions to the cement walks costing in the neighborhood of $2,500. We want to have everything in keeping with the spirit of the memorial and accordingly, the mayor gave the order to remove the guns.

"Did he specify the place where they should be taken?" asked the reporter.

"Not that I know of. As far as the place where they were put is concerned, it was merely a temporary location until we could find a better place for them."

People Do Not Forget

"The only comment I desire to make on last night's proceedings is to show my gratification that the spirit of comradeship amongst ex-service men is just as keen now as it was during the war," declared Alderman Ackerman. "It demonstrated too that the citizens of Peterborough generally have not forgotten their pledge of allegiance to those men who went out to assist in fighting their battles.

"Ex-service men generally are sportsmen in the highest sense of the word, and as sportsmen they quite naturally treasure and respect the three guns that were taken from their positions or respect and dignity in Confederation Park and placed not at the end of Simcoe street or at a convenient parking space beside the Armouries for the time being, but actually upon the city dump.

The guns have been reclaimed and placed as they are in position behind the simple dignity of an inexpensive but, nevertheless, impressive cenotaph and they will probably remain there for some time, and the circumstances in connection with their new resting place must serve as a reminder that the citizens of Peterborough have kept faith.

"I never knew a thing about it and the moving of the guns had not been mentioned in my hearing" replied Alderman G. A. Macdonald to The Examiner's question of his knowledge of the action of the disposal of the guns on the city dump. "Personally I think Confederation Park is the proper place for the guns, and no one had the right to move them without getting the general opinion on the matter."

Quite Surprised

"Its all new to me and I didn't know a thing about it" answered Alderman Malcolm McIntyre to The Examiner. "You reported me correctly yesterday, that I was quite surprised at the news. Personally I think the moving of the guns was out of place and showed great disrespect to the memory of our soldiers. No wonder they took immediate action. The park is the proper place for the guns as they are as much a part of the city's memorial as the bronze monument at present in the park."

"We don't know anything about it in the City Council," said Alderman Walter Stocker. "We had nothing to do with it. It was all in the hands of the War Memorial Committee and was done without our knowledge. I am on the Park's Committee and I didn't have the least inkling that the guns were to be moved and I don't know who sanctioned their removal to the dump. To my way of thinking it is a shame and a disgrace and they should never have been even moved out of the park without the proper authority, let alone being thrown on the dump."

Alderman Nagel Phelan was out of the city and The Examiner could not locate him by phone.

Call Meeting of Citizens

Alderman R. S. Cotton said that during the three years that he has served as alderman there has been nothing mentioned in the city council about the guns. Mr. Cotton said that he did not know anything about the guns until he received a phone call at three o'clock yesterday from the press. He said that if the guns were to be moved that a general meeting of the citizens should have been called to find a different location for the guns.

Had Nothing to Say

Alderman Stanley Lowe, when questioned by The Examiner about the guns replied, "I have nothing to say. I think all the explanations will be contained in the Mayor's statement. I do think that The Examiner must have been short of news to print the story about the guns. They should have waited until matters were explained by the City Council at their next meeting. It was cheap publicity and the story about placing the guns on the dump will blacken Peterborough's name throughout the country."

When asked if he did not think the action of placing the city's war trophies on the dump did not deserve publicity and the raising of public opinion, he answered, "No, the matter should have rested until the explanation came out."

Ald. C. H. Huffman told The Examiner last night that he knew nothing whatever about the proposal to move the guns. "I have attended all Council meetings," he said, "and it was never even mentioned. I certainly think such a thing should have been given consideration, and in any event, even if it were necessary to move the guns, a suitable place should have been found for them."

DID PROPER THING.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P. stated, "I think the removing of the guns to the city dump was the craziest action I have ever heard of. The war veterans did the proper thing. If there was no place for them on Confederation Square they should have been moved to Armour Hill or some other suitable place and there permanently placed in honor. But no action should have been taken without everyone having an opportunity of learning of what was contemplated."

Tempest in Teapot.

"It's only a tempest in a teapot," was Alderman James Hamilton's only reply to The Examiner when questioned on his stand about the guns.

Never Came to Legion

"The proposal to have the Legion take over the guns never came before the executive of the Legion or a general meeting," a member of the executive told The Examiner to-day. "We had no opportunity to discuss whether we would accept the guns or not, and any statement made to anyone to the effect that we would not take them, was made on the responsibility of the individual."

Forcing Opinion

"For some years a certain class of people have been forcing their opinions on the province," said J. H. Burnham. "This doctrine of force very appropriate when necessary, is not advisable in times of peace. Depriving a people, however, of its means of defence is a very serious matter. Whatever tends to diminish courage in a people is treason. On both counts, therefore, this action is not anly reprehensible but punishable."

FLOODS FOLLOW HEAVY STORMS

Lowlands Along Belgian Coast Inundated—Sea Walls Demolished By Waves.

MANY LIVES LOST.

LONDON, November 27. Canadian Press. — Floods followed to-day in the wake of the gale which caused the loss of a score of vessels in western European waters, and took a toll of a hundred lives.

From Belgium north to the Frisian Island, lowlands were inundated as the sea was driven in on them by the raging winds. Dykes and seawalls were demolished by the waves. At Ostend, water ran down the streets and flooded the ground floors of the buildings. A number of houses at Rotterdam, Holland, were abandoned. To-day's gale had somewhat abated in Western Europe, but was raging with undiminished vigor over the Mediterranean, repeating disastrous shipping damage, which characterized its passage over the west coast.

The losses in Great Britain alone, from the recent storms, were estimated at a million pounds sterling.

ELECTROCUTE RATS.

Electricity is fighting man's battles against insects and rodents in an increasing number of ways. In Switzerland it has been used to save a field of tomatoes from grub which formerly ruined 50 per cent. of the crop. Brilliant electric lights, with reflectors directly towards the soil, were placed at intervals in the field. They attracted the moths which lay egg from which the grubs appear. Basins placed below the lamps, and filled with water and gasoline, caught and drowned thousands of them. As a result fields in which the experiment was tried had an almost perfect crop, while those nearby lost from thirty to sixty per cent. of the tomatoes. The same method has been tried with equal success in melon fields.

The perfect hen's egg should weigh slightly over two ounces.

RETURNED SOLDIERS CALLED TO RALLY AGAIN TO-MORROW FOR DISCUSSION OF AFFAIRS

Meeting Will Be Held in Canadian Legion Hall at 8 O'clock.

MORE OPINIONS.

Citizens Tell Ideas of Disposition of Peterborough's War Trophies.

There will be another meeting of all returned soldiers in the Canadian Legion Hall on Thursday evening at eight o'clock, for discussion of matters affecting veterans. This information was given The Examiner to-day by Lt.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, who intimated that there will probably be an important speaker from Toronto.

Col. Ackerman requested The Examiner to extend an invitation to every returned soldier in the city and district to be present at the meeting.

In view of the necessity for the veterans to get together on important matters, it has been found necessary to postpone the euchre planned for Thursday night.

Alderman Nagel Phelan

The only member of the city council who escaped interview with The Examiner on Tuesday, was Alderman Nagel Phelan, he having been absent from the city on business. His discussion of the removal of the guns this morning clearly defined his views.

"I think it was a terrible mistake on somebody's part," he declared. "The man or men responsible for the order to move the guns showed very poor judgement and especially so in placing them on or near to the dump."

Did you know anything of the order previous to the actual moving of the guns," asked the reporter.

"Not any more than at a meeting of the Board of Works it was mentioned, I think, and I believe it was left with the chairman of parks to look after as he would be the logical official. It was a big surprise to me when the thing suddenly flamed up as it did on Monday night and Tuesday.

Do you think a special meeting of the council should be held to settle the matter?

"I do. In order that something may be done regarding their final disposition.

Mistake Been Made

The Honorable G. N. Gordon, K.C., when asked for an interview regarding the removal of the guns from Confederation Square, stated in his opinion a mistake had been made in moving the guns without the consent of the War Veterans, who were very active in obtaining the trophies for Peterborough, and which had been officially accepted by the City of Peterborough, and placed in a position which was considered the most prominent, and the best selection in the city.

If any temporary removal required to be made, for the preparation of Confederation Square, the guns could easily have been shifted to another position on the Square until this was done.

The ex-Service men have a right to expect the City Council to place these guns in the same position they were before, and make amends for what has been done, until some agreement has been made between the parties interested as to the proper position of the war trophies.

Fred L. Roy

"If the guns are going to cause heartache to the mothers who lost their sons in the great war, then they should not be put back and I think that that was the primary reason for moving them" said Fred L. Roy, well-known local photographer in an interview with The Examiner this morning.

"It seems pretty well established that behind the removing of the guns, there was not the intention of totally discarding them, which hasty idea seems to me unfortunate. Of course there had been no discussion of the removal, either through the press or through a public body such as the city council, unless the Memorial committee may be considered a public body, but notwithstanding all this, I don't think that anyone can question the motives of Mayor Denne and Alderman J. M. Greene who have been most enthusiastic and valuable figures in the municipal life of the city.

"Certainly it is not difficult to see the justification in the action of the veterans for it would be hard to call the temporary resting place of the guns anything but the city dump. The present dump may be further down, but the place in question is just that part which has been filled in by dump material. I think last night's paper cleared the air considerably though."

"What do you think of another meeting of the veterans or of a public meeting to discuss a site for the guns, even considering their former location in Confederation square?" said The Examiner.

"That," said Mr. Roy ,"might be a good idea, though it must be remembered that even though the

Prince Is Returning On Own Initiative

LONDON, Nov. 28 (A.P.).—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin last night received a telegram sent by the Prince of Wales at Doduma, Tanganyika, saying: "In view of the illness of His Majesty the King, my brother and I are returning to England as soon as possible." It was understood that the Prince had taken this action on his own initiative, and that it was not the result of any message recalling him to England.

DR. BLAGRAVE IS RE-ELECTED TO PRESIDENCY

INTEREST INCREASES.

The Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave was re-elected president of the Children's Aid Society at the annual meeting of that organization, held last night in the City Council Chambers. This was one of the most expeditious annual meetings probably ever held in the city. It was only a few minutes over an hour from commencement when the business of the meeting was concluded and the decks were swept clean for action for another year.

The report of the Nominating Committee, as presented by the convenor, Mrs. J. Fanning, was adopted as read. Officers will be: Honorary presidents, Mayor of the City, Warden of the County and B. F. Ackerman. Honorary vice presidents: E. A. Peck, M.P., W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., J. Wearing, the Hon. G. N Gordon, K.C., J. H. Burnham and Mrs. Birdsall; president, the Rev. R. C. Blagrave, D.D.; first vice president, Mrs. W. H. Gibbs, second vice president, Mrs. James Fanning; secretary, John Edgar; treasurer, C. S. Cummer; and Board Members: Mesdames J. Welsh H. W. Darcy, R. J. Devey, W. Oke, J. J. Lynch, J. Knox, S. Newhall, C. Wiggins, H. W. Nigh, E. Daynard, Dr. D. W. Clark; Dr. E. H. Wood, the Rev. J. H. Dudgeon, the Rev. P. Costello, the Rev. J. H. Sutcliff, Alderman W. Stocker; F. H. Dobbin, J. Abraham, R. H. Parsons, J. A. McNabb and Ensign Green.

After the reading of the minutes of the last annual meeting by Mr. Edgar, the president, the Rev. Dr. Blagrave, spoke briefly, prefacing his remarks with a reference to the late late G. W. Powell, for so many years agent of the society. Dr. Blagrave spoke of him as "one of the stalwarts of the generation gone by and one whose heart was in the work of the Children's Aid Society." The president also welcomed back Mrs. Gibbs, who has been absent for some time on account of illness.

Speaking of the past year as one of the most successful in the history of the organization, Dr. Blagrave spoke of the increasing interest shown by the public generally and the authorities in the preservation and conservation of child life.

Increased Grant

Dr. Blagrave said he would like to see an increased grant from the city and county alike, because both bore a share of the responsibility of such work. Referring to the criticism which is sometimes levelled at the society and its agent, he said this was inevitable, on account of the nature of the work carried on. The agent of such an organization had to assert determination and resolve in carrying out his duties and he was sure that Mr. Edgar combined these qaulites in a high degree. Here, he read a letter from J. J. Kelso in Toronto, speaking of the high esteem in which Mr. Edgar is held by those in authority over the Provincial work among children.

Dr. Blagrave also spoke with gratification of the excellent service rendered by the caretaker and the matron at the Shelter.

He said he had often been impressed, both at general and at annual meetings, by the lack of attendance among the members and thought those who accepted membership on the Board should be alive to their duty in this regard.

Dr. Blagrave spoke of the re-

SWEDISH COUNT ARRIVES TO WED MANVILLE HEIRESS

Royal Party Will Be In Attendance at Big Wedding.

SET FOR SATURDAY.

Couple Expected To Live in a Stockholm Flat—Cost $750,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Final details of what promises to be the most costly international wedding, whereby a New York girl becomes the niece of a king, were being agreed to last night, immediately after arrival of the bridegroom, Count Folke Bernadotte, of Sweden.

With the members of his wedding party—fifteen in number—who accompanied him here on the steamship Gripsholm—a retinue consisting of men and women of royal or noble birth, including the heir apparent of the Swedish throne, the count went into conference with H. Edward Manville, his prospective father-in-law. His daughter, Miss Estelle Manville, becomes the bride of the nephew of the Swedish King next Saturday, at the Manville estate at Plessantville, N. Y.

Wedding to Cost $750,000

After the wedding, which society hears is going to cost the Manvilles close to three-quarters of a million dollars, the couple are going to live in Sweden. He said:

"We are going to Stockholm to live, where I have a flat. I intend to have a radio, an electric refrigerator and a vacuum cleaner, just like all other folk have. I am not in business, you know. I am a lieutenant in the Swedish Horse Guards and I shall continue my military career for a while."

It was love at first sight for the girl from the hills around Pleasantville and the nephew of King Gustav of Sweden. This the Count admitted when interviewers sought him out on the Gripsholm, before the ship reached the dock He said:

"Miss Manville and I first met early this year at Monte Carlo, where I had gone to visit my uncle, the King. She was there with her father and mother. We saw considerable of each other, until Miss Manville had to go away. During the summer I came to America and visited with them."

When Miss Manville, with her father and mother, finally got up on the ship, after being harried by guards because they had no official pass, the ship's band played the 'Star Spangled Banner." Prior to that they played the Swedish National anthem

Mid strains of music, the Count rushed into the arms of his bride-to-be, hugged and kissed her. Then, following Swedish custom, he kissed his bride's parents.

HOG CHOLERA BREAKS OUT ON FARM OF HERBERT WITHERS

MUST DISINFECT PENS.

Government Will Probably Recompense Owner To Two-thirds of Loss.

Hogs, numbering over a hundred, owned by Herbert Withers, Armour Road, were killed and destroyed by inspectors of the Department of Agriculture, the other day because they showed signs of hog cholera.

Mr. Withers has been in the practise of keeping a large number of hogs for a number of years. Recently it was noticed that some of them showed signs of being sick, and were wasting away; on close inspection it was found to be a slight attack of the dread disease, hog cholera. The inspectors came down from Toronto, and immediately on finding definite signs of the disease, destroyed the hogs.

Mr. Withers will now have to disinfect his pens thoroughly in efforts to stamp out every germ of the contagion. He will likely be recompensed to the extent of the value of two-thirds of his hogs. This is given by the Government in cases where any stock has been destroyed on account of disease. Certain requirements as to the kind of food fed the animals must be approved.

Hog cholera is a contagious disease in swine. It does not appear to affect other species of animals, and is characterized as very contagious with a high death rate. It is known in every part of the world, and is prevalent in the United States to an alarming extent, causing enormous losses. In Canada the disease appears from time to time in various parts of the country, where the infection has been brought in one way or other.

Feeding has no Bearing.

The disease is always carried by a germ and the feeding of the hogs or conditions under which they are kept, will have no bearing on causing it. When the hog has the disease it loses its appetite, becomes sluggish, and soon becomes thin and weak, walking with a staggering gait. Another visible sign of the disease is red

War Memorial Committee In No Way Responsible For Moving Of Trophies, Declares Judge Huycke

His Honor Judge Huycke made the following statement to The Examiner this afternoon:—

"As I understand from a recent edition of The Examiner the government gave these guns to the city of Peterborough. The council was authorized to hold them in trust for the people of Peterborough and keep them in repair for perpetuity. It would also be understood that they were to be kept in a suitable place. This being so the council would be in duty and honor bound to keep them in a proper place.

"I wish to emphasise the fact that the Memorial Committee is in no way responsible for the present troubles or the cause of them. The reason is simply this, that the Memorial Committee has absolutely nothing to do with these guns or their custody. They were appointed for another purpose which they have tried to complete. It is true that at a recent meeting of this Committee one of its members who is also on the city council, stated that he thought the council would move these guns from their present position, but he did not say when, where or how. He asked Captain Abraham what he thought the veterans and the Legion would think of this proposition. Captain Abraham replied that he had no authority to speak for anyone but himself on this matter, but further said that personally if the guns were removed to some other suitable place, he would not object. All the other members of committee, who were present said nothing. Probably for the obvious reason; it was none of their business. It is not true as has been stated in the Toronto press that at this meeting some mother who had lost her son objected to the guns' position in the park.

Motion Picture Stars Ill With Influenza

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—Thirteen motion picture stars and two directors were confined to bed to-day with influenza. What was described as a "mild epidemic" struck the film colony yesterday. In the metropolitan district of Los Angeles, five hundred and two new cases were reported yesterday, bringing the total for the month to 2,162. Deaths to date total forty-one. Clara Bow and John Gilbert are among film stars suffering.

The average length of life of a business man is said to be two-thirds that of a farmer.

LORD DAWSON OF PENN REPORTS CONDITION OF HIS MAJESTY TO BRITISH CABINET COUNCIL

"The citizens of Peterborough, Canada, extend sympathy, and earnestly hope for a speedy recovery."

EIGHTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED

J. M. Davey Has Good Spirits and Enthusiasm of High School Boy.

U. S. LOYALIST STOCK

Grandfather Settled in Upper Canada When Out of United States.

Hale and hearty and enjoying the good spirits and enthusiasm of a High School boy, J. M. Davey celebated his eighty-sixth birthday yesterday. When The Examiner called on Mr. Davey yesterday morning to express congratulations on his ripe age, the reporter fully expected to find a man borne down with his many years. But instead a man old only in length of years was encountered, an old man who gripped the reporter in arms of real strength while he illustrated how to do the 'hip-lock" in wrestling.

"I come of United Empire Loyalist stock," said Mr. Davey. "I was born on the ancestral farm near Ernestown in Lennox County. The farm was granted to my grandfather by His Majesty George III. My grandfather settled in Upper Canada after leaving the United States during the Revolution."

Family of Four.

Mr. Davey's family have all had long life. His mother died at the age of ninety-seven in Peterborough. The first trip she ever made on the train was in moving from the old home near Kingston to Peterborough. She used to take walks in the fresh air, which gave her much pleasure, right up till the time of her death. Mr. Davey is one of a family of four now living, and all are over eighty-four. The oldest brother was a veteran of the American Civil War. He was famous as being the oldest living veteran in the United States. He died two years ago at the age of ninety years. Mrs. Louis Amey, a sister of Mr. Davey, will be one hundred years old in June, and the two remaining in the family, one is older than Mr. Davey and one two years younger.

"I have always been a Methodist, and now I am a member of George Street United Church, but there is nothing sectarian about me. I have a love and respect for all churches: Methodist, Baptist, Anglican, or Roman Catholic."

Mr. Davey dearly loves to work in a garden. He has always had one, and he spoke of the fine cabbages he grew in his garden last summer. He spent most of his life on the farm before coming to Peterborough twenty six years ago at the age of sixty.

Mr. Davey extended an invitation to the reporter to join him in a fishing expedition, and he whispered the information of knowing a great many of the good spots. He has always been a great fisherman, and recounted some stirring stories of big catches.

Mr. Davey has three daughters, two are married and living in Saskatchewan and Miss Ada, who keeps house for him.

JACOBS HELD FOR RANSOM

ABDUCTED FROM OFFICES.

DETROIT, November 28. — Canadian Press. — Belief that Benjamin Jacobs, aged 38, head of the bottling works here, who was kidnapped from his offices late yesterday, by three men, is held for ransom, was expressed to-day by the police. No word has come from Jacobs or his abductors since the kidnapping, and no motive except that of ransom has been advanced. Samuel Jacobs, brother of the victim, witnessed the kidnapping. He said three men entered the offices, drew revolvers, and forced his brother to accompany them to an automobile. They then drove away.

"His Majesty Passed a Less Disturbed Day," Says Official Bulletin.

HAS RESTFUL NIGHT.

Medical Exports Agree Every Day Without Relapse Is Favorable.

LONDON, Nov. 28. — (Canadian Press).—A letter from the king's physician, Lord Dawson of Penn, submitted to the cabinet this morning and ordered published, said His Majesty was suffering from inflammation congestion of the right lung, with an extensive plastic pleurisy on the right side. There must be anxiety, the letter said, due to the infection which is serious. Condition of lung, however was somewhat improved and it is pointed out that the king's strength is maintained. Lord Dawson stated that the illness thus far was being controlled and he hoped its duration could be curtailed.

With the Prince of Wales about to undertake a long journey home from East Africa to be at the bedside of his father little change was indicated in the king's condition by to-day's medical bulletin. King had more restful night but his temperature and general condition was unchanged.

Temperature Lower Last Night

Coupled with last night's bulletin which said the king's temperature was lower and his strength maintained, the bulletin gave additional encouragement to millions of anxious subjects. General feeling of satisfaction with the morning's bulletin appeared among the palace officials. The physicians, Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn remained in the palace only about an hour and a half.

Official circles in London, reiterated that the decision of the Prince of Wales to return had been taken on his own initiative and that he had neither been instructed nor advised from London to cut short his hunting trip.

Prince's Progress Slow

Despatches from Africa to-day told of the departure of the Prince of Wales from the big game hunting ground of Tanganyika, to the bedside of his royal father. Progress of the Prince's train, drawn by a woodburning engine, which had to halt every hour for fuel over narrow gage track was related by Sir Percival Phillips, special corresponent of the Daily Mail and Evening News with the party in Africa.

When dawn broke to-day the Prince looked out of the windows of tiny car on the parched Africa desert, which stretched for endless miles beneath sunless sky. His night had been sleepless and the train, though making the best progress possible must have seemed to him to be literally crawling toward the coast.

On arrival at Dodoma where he boarded the train last night, the Prince was delighted with the news that his father was not in danger. Soon afterwards, cipher messages arrived which caused him concern. He ate no dinner but refused to allow the cancellation of the informal dance which was plannd at the hotel.

Board Governor's Launch.

DARES SALAAM TANGANYIKA, Nov. 28.— (Canadian Press.)— The Prince of Wales is expected to arrive here at eight o'clock this evening. He will board the Governor's launch, Asania, at once(eventually transferring to the cruiser H. M. S. Enterprise, which will take him to London. The Prince travelled by special train from Dodoma after notifying Premier Baldwin that he was returning to England as soon as possible.

The whereabouts of his brother, the Duke of Gloucester, or the point at which he will join the Prince are not known here. The two parted some weeks ago in the course of a hunting trip in Africa.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A message from the Prince of Wales to Premier Baldwin that he and his brother, the Duke of Gloucester, are returning from the African wilds as soon as possible—a trip that will take them three weeks—came at the end of a day whose developments are mildly hopeful.

It is noticeable, however, that despite the King's vigorous fight against the disease nothing has been officially issued that indicates hope, just as the laconic bulletins issued during the week of his illness have never expressed anxiety nor offered any opinion on the outcome of the Monarch's malady.

Factories Make Perfect Record

NO SECOND-GRADE CHEESE TURNED OUT DURING 1928 THROUGHOUT MADOC DISTRICT

98.5 Per Cent. is Grade Reached by Cheesemakers of 26 Factories.

ANNUAL BANQUET

Section Shows Most Enviable Progress Over Season of 1927.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Nov. 28. — Madoc's small community hall, was tightly packed on Monday evening for the first annual banquet of the Madoc District Cheesemakers' Association. The proceedings were somewhat delayed at the start through a regrettable accident to President W. E. Brennan, who fell outside the building, dislocating his shoulder, and necessitating his removal to Dr. Eagleson's hospital for treatment. After the splendid repast served by the W.M.S. had been done ample justice to, and the Madoc male quartette had given a pleasing number, Instructor H. Bailey, acting temporarily as toast master, proposed the principal toast to the "Cheesemakers."

He mentioned that out of 26 factories in his area, two in Tweed, one in Marmora, and another in Fort William districts, had attained 100 per cent. this year. He told of the questions which had to be answered in filling out reports to the Government as first class certificates were applied for. He also stated that there was no second grade cheese turned out in his district other than that thus graded on account of flavor; 98.5 was the grade reached this year in Madoc district.

Mr. Brennan returned to the banquet hall and replied to the toast.

"It is especially a pleasure to reply to this toast, when the cheesemakers of this district had received such honors," said the speaker. "They were not the first, but they came so near being that that the highest would have to move."

Progress Through Co-operation.

Progress had come through the co-operation of the cheesemakers and the assistance of instructors and patrons. It was not long since the cheesemakers were dubbed as hired men. Their authority did not extend far and everything was referred to the president. Now they were factory managers to determine what quality of milk would make first-class cheese. It was truly a banner year for the Madoc district. Knowing the troubles, and where to look for assistance, he reminded his hearers were vital factors in the success of the industry.

R. McLaughlin, of Sidney township, champion maker of Central Ontario, was the first to respond. He never knew a section where the makers were so young. He congratulated the makers and patrons and expressed heartfelt wishes that the same success would be continued another year.

H. Henderson, another maker who replied, said he was proud of the way the Madoc District came through, rising from 93 per cent of last year to 98 per cent this year in their grade of cheese.

He said, in part: "If there is one class of men in the community who have the honor of putting the cheese industry where it is to-day it is the instructors. We have been fortunate for the past twenty-five years in having instructors who were all past masters of the game before they started."

Replies to Toast.

Instructor John Murray first to respond, said that as far as the work of a dairy instructor went it did not look so bad at long range, but close up it was as exacting as anything required of men. He was glad to hear that the Madoc District had done so well. He did not know where his district would be in the final score, but anyway they were up a little.

Charles Linn, also reponding, referred to the ups and downs of his profession and declared that the farmers were sending their milk to the factories in better condition.

Mr. Bailey as instructor, had done his job well, and everything showed that everyone had worked hard all summer.

Two duets were next pleasingly given by W. Hawthorne and J. Gillespie.

The chairman then called upon James Irwin, grader, to speak as a free lance.

Having spoken a word of praise concerning President Brennan, the speaker remarked that Hastings county was recognized as one of the best cheese producing counties in the province. The hub of the county is Belleville, where the cheese business is conducted. He was pleased to meet the cheesemakers and congratulated Mr. Bailey and every other dairy instructor in the ten districts of Ontario.

ominous warning issued by the Daily Mail yesterday that "up to the present there has been no progress toward recovery" was too pessimistic.

The Prince of Wales, reached by courier in the wilderness probably, with news of the situation yesterday, has told the Premier that he is returning, but at last accounts his train has not left Dodoma in Tanganyika for Dar-Es-Salaam, where the admiralty announces the cruiser Enterprise has been ordered to await him

In view of the mysteries surrounding the King's actual condition, opinions in to-day's newspapers expressed in large type and possibly inspired, may be significant.

The Daily Mail does not attempt to encourage the public, stating, "Everyone in the Empire will be thankful the doctors had not to report loss of ground. The night bulletin is generally considered as satisfactory as could be expected, despite the fact that it is couched in guarded language and said nothing as to His Majesty's general condition, which has been serious for many days. A stern fight is being waged in the sick room"

Pneumonia Discussion.

The Daily News for the first time in the London press discusses the question of the King's pneumonia in view of the current reports and the fact that pneumonia has not been mentioned officially. The paper says:

"In the attempt to overcome microbes, fluid may be poured out through the walls of distended blood vessels into air cavities of the lung, and as this fluid solidifies the air is crowded out and the affected portion of the lung becomes almost solid. This condition, on however small a scale, is technically recognized as pneumonia, but its presence would not necessarily mean that the illness is acute or dangerous. The disease to which the name of pneumonia is generally applied by the public, as an acute fever in which large areas of the lung are thrown out of action as a result of infection, usually by a particular kind of germ, the pneumococcus. Scientifically speaking, the line between an infective congestion and a patient of pneumonia may be rather fine, but the existence of congestion in one lung certainly does not imply that the patient is suffering from pneumonia in the usual sense of the word."

OTTAWA IS SUGGESTED AS PLACE TO HOLD NAVAL PARLEY

Chairman of U. S. House Committee Hopes to Adjust Existing Discord.

HELD ON MARCH 4.

Both Nations Would Meet To Discuss Equalization of Sea Power.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—A joint meeting of the House Naval Affairs Committee and a committee from the British Parliament has been suggested by Chairman Britten of Illinois to Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin to discuss equality of sea power between the United States and Great Britain on all classes of war vessels not affected by the Washington Arms Conference.

The meeting was proposed in a cablegram made public yesterday. It would be held in Canada after March 4 next, and the committees would report with recommendations to their respective Governments on the results of their discussions in a manner similar to the methods used by the Interparliamentary Union.

Chairman Britten said his cablegram was prompted by Prime Minister Baldwin's statement, on Nov. 13, expressing the desire for more frequent personal discussions between United States and British representatives to lead to a better understanding and feeling between the peoples and Governments of the two countries.

Proposal Unusual.

The House Committee head declared that, though his proposal for a conference of this character was unusual, he was entirely within his Congressional authority, and "there should be no misconstruction of my purpose."

The text of the cablegram was:

"Recalling your publicly expressed desire of Nov. 13 for more frequent personal discussion between American and British representatives ,remembering very pleasantly my personal

WORK IN YUKON IS DESCRIBED BY MISSIONARY

Rev. George Pringle Delivers Instructive Address in Havelock United Church.

TRAVELS UP COAST

Speaker Has Spent Twelve Years in North—Several Overseas.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, Nov. 28. — Rev. George Pringle, B.A. Marine Missionary from off the coast of Vancouver, delivered a very instructive address in the United Church on Sunday evening in the aid of the mission fund of the church.

Rev. Mr. Pringle has spent twelve years in the Yukon, several overseas during the war and for the past eight years a marine missionary going up and down the coast of British Columbia on a boat visiting the lumber camps on the islands which dot the Pacific Ocean in that region. He gave many interesting stories of his experiences including temptations which he had had to face in his young days in the Yukon, and advising the young people present that the only way to meet temptation was to never lower the flag of their finer instincts one inch. "You will have to meet temptation," he said, "and you may feel embarrassed and uncomfortable at the time."

Very Discouraging

His work on the coast of British Columbia had in the early stages of his ministry there been very discouraging owing to the fact that the lumber camps had no use for church or ministers after the war and although he had been on the point of giving up he had found the darkest hours had just been before his efforts had been crowned with success. In closing he said that everyone could not be a missionary but there was just as fine work here to be done. Help God do His work, he advised.

"But once I pass this way, but once, but once. And then no more I pass this way, so while I may I will assuage comfort and delight for no man passes twice this same highway from dark to light."

Two anthems were given by the choir under the direction of R. Bonney namely: "Nearer My God to Thee" alto duet part being taken by Mrs. E. Fennell and Mrs. R. J. McCutcheon and "Near the Cross of Jesus," Mrs. G. W. Chiles taking the solo, and duet parts by Mrs. Chiles and Mrs Fennell and Mrs. McCutcheon and Mrs. Fennell.

Murder Conviction Of Former Keeper Is Linked With Death Of Sacred White Elephant In London Zoo

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(Associated Press).—The mysterious tragedy in the London Zoo last August, which Oriental tradition linked with the death of the sacred white elephant Pa Wa in Calcutta, reached a new stage yesterday, when San Dwe, Burmese elephant keeper, was found guilty at the Old Bailey, of murdering Said Ali, Mohammedan elephant trainer, and was sentenced to death.

Coincident with the death in Calcutta on August 24, of Pa Wa, Said Ali, a noted mahout, was found horribly mutilated in his quarters at the London Zoo. His room-mate, generally known as Sandy Wee, was found injured under Ali's window. Several days later, Sandy Wee was charged with murdering the mahout and remanded to jail. At the time of Said Ali's death, persons least addicted to superstitions thought of the ancient belief of the East that misfortune follows with certain footsteps when a sacred white elephant is taken from its own country. Two years previously, Pa Wa was brought to the London Zoo from the East with Sandy Wee as his keeper. Eventually Pa Wa was sent back to Calcutta while Sandy returned to the London Zoo.

DISAPPEARANCE FAILS TO EXCITE MAN'S PARENTS

Mother and Father of Missing Weston Citizen Live in Campbellford.

TOOK ONE CHILD.

Had Been Employed By Dominion Stores Limited For Two Years.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 28 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barrie, Front street, are not greatly concerned over the sudden disappearance of their son, Gordon Francis, from his home in Weston on Thursday of last week. Mr. and Mrs. Barrie were following their usual daily customs last night and when interviewed were just bidding farewell to some friends who had called for a social hour and pleasant chat with the elderly couple. Mr. Barrie did not care to discuss the matter before his wife and when he was alone with the reporter told of several instances which would lead to the conclusion that his son had not enjoyed the happiest of married existences.

Mr. Barrie believed that his son was making good at his trade and was well thought of by his employers, the Dominion Stores, Limited. He had resided in Weston for the past two years and previous to that had been in business for himself. Since leaving school here, Gordon Barrie had been constantly engaged in the grocery business either as an employe of another business or in his own interest. He was generally considered to be well versed in the trade.

As nearly as can be learned, Barrie left his home on Thursday, November 22. He resided at 25 MacDonald avenue, Weston. He was driving a Ford coach with marker number 434-171. Before leaving he said something about going to Detroit, but did not, apparently, make any definite statement to this effect. He took with him his three-year-old daughter and two Boston bull dogs. The girl was dressed in a white toque, green coat and tan shoes and stockings. Barrie wore a grey fedora hat, blue suit and black overcoat. He is a tall man, about six feet, and of dark complexion. He carried a brown club bag. The two dogs are described as one being blind in the left eye and the other was named "Gil."

Mr. and Mrs. Barrie of Front street, the parents of the missing man, were in regular communication with him up until a few days ago. They did not suspect anything unusual, they said. They agreed that their son was of a more or less nervous temperament but would not describe it as a highly nervous state. They did not think that he was in any financial difficulties that would cause him to suddenly disappear, but were of the opinion that there were domestic affairs which worried him. Mr. Barrie believed that his son had been offered a position recently in the city of Detroit, but did not divulge its nature. He was of the opinion that his son might have accepted the offer. In that case, he would not have left his wife destitute, but would have provided for her. At the present time, Mr. Barrie was unable to say what provision had been made along this line, but he believed that the wife and small daughter left behind by the missing man had been left with sufficient funds to live on.

Gordon Barrie had been married a little more than six years. During that time there had been domestic complications, it was learned last night. There were two children, the eldest aged three, taken by the father, and the other daughter, a child of a few months, left with the mother.

YOUTHFUL AVIATOR FORCED DOWN WITHIN 90 MILES OF GOAL

Illness Brings Halt To Non-Stop Walkerville-Havana Flight.

CONTINUES TO-DAY.

Youth Took Capsules Containing Caffeine To Keep Him Awake.

KEY WEST, Fla., Nov. 28 (A.P.).—Leonard S. Flo's attempted non-stop flight from Walkerville to Havana, Cuba, failed late yesterday when the youthful aviator was within less than a hundred miles of his goal.

Seized with illness, after his long vigil at the controls, Flo was forced to land here at 4.23 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and was taken to a hospital. The aviator refused to go to bed on advice of a physician, and went instead to a hotel.

Before turning in for a rest, Flo told the manager of the hotel he would fly to Havana today, and after arrival in the Cuban capital would make a non-step flight from Havana to Detroit.

The landing was made at the airport about six miles from the city and hospital authorities said the aviator reached there about 5.30 o'clock.

A physician said Flo's illness was due to effect of capsules, containing caffeine, taken by the youth to keep him awake.

After taking off from Walkerville Monday night at 11.07 o'clock, Flo flew steadily toward his goal. Early yesterday morning he passed over Atlanta and shortly after noon passed Tampa where he flew low, waving to persons below. The course, thereafter, lay along the sparsely settled peninsula and across Florida Bay and the keys into Key West.

Key West is only 90 miles from Havana where Flo had hoped to land at dusk on Columbia Field.

Before turning in for rest, Flo left orders not to be disturbed. He left a note for newspapermen in regard to his plans, which stated briefly that he would fly to-day to Havana and plan a non-stop flight from there to Detroit.

MISSED NEXT DAY

OMEMEE, Nov. 28 (Examiner Correspondence).—While Mr. and Mrs. Percy Race were absent visiting at the home of a friend in the village and their daughters were at church on Sunday evening, some one entered their home, by the use of a skeleton key and relieved their purses of about thirty-five dollars. Nothing was disturbed and the money was not missed until Monday morning, when Mr. Race was starting on his milk route. He found his purse empty and upon investigation, the other members of the family found their purses open and empty.

Mr. Race is treasurer of the United Church, and had left the church money, after the afternoon service, on the dining room table, and either the thief did not observe it, or his conscience pricked him, as it was undisturbed.

STIRLING DISTRICT CHEESEMAKERS HOLD BANQUET

PERFECT RECORD IS MADE BY NINE CHEESE FACTORIES

Six Others in Stirling District Has One Vat Poor in 1928.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Eighty - five Attend Annual Cheesemakers' Banquet—Many Guests Present.

(Examiner Correspondence).

STIRLING, Nov. 28.—At a meeting of the cheesemakers of this district, held on Friday night, John N. West, of the Evergreen Factory, was elected president for the coming year.

The cheesemakers of this district, under the supervision of C. F. Lewis, have been holding monthly conferences during the past season, and ended these by planning one when their wives could attend. This was in the form of a banquet provided by the Ladies' Union of St. Paul's United Church, and held in the basement of the church. More than eighty-five were in attendance, including instructors, inspectors, makers and their wives.

Reeve Montgomery and Councillor Meiklejohn represented the village council. Instructors were present from Madoc, Campbellford, Prince Edward County and Peterborough district; produce grader, James L. Irwin; managers of the Royal and Montreal Banks, and Messrs. Smith and Scaulan, representing firms who do business with the cheesemakers, were present. R. J. McLaughlin, the champion cheesemaker of Central Ontario, and president of the Cheesemakers' Association of the Stirling group, was in the chair. All the 24 factories in the group were represented. The following are the makers and factories represented: Hiram Rodgers, Shamrock; Russell Embury, Frankford; William Christie, Acme; R. J. McLaughlin, Sidney Town Hall; G. W. Henderson, Foxboro; D. H. Carleton, Eclipse; M. J. Johnston, White Lake; Charles Lough, Springbrook; Morris Rose, Holloway; Harry Juby, West Huntingdon; John Ackers, Kingston; George Sherwin, Moira; J. H. Dudgeon, Moira Valley; J. M. Wilkinson, Roblin; Frank Palmer, Glen; Charles Spencer, Beulah; William Mitchell, Bell; E. K. West, Maple Leaf; J. Remington, Harold; J. Bateman, Stirling; J. L. Donohue, Enterprise; J. N. West, Evergreen; H. Rowe, Central, and Thomas McCaughen, Plum Grove.

Prizes Presented.

During the evening the prizes won by several makers during the past summer for quality of product and conditions at their factories were presented. Quality of cheese counted 75 per cent., conditions inside factory 15 per cent., and outside conditions 10 per cent. A beautiful cup with miniature, donated by the Royal Bank, was won by R. J. McLaughlin, and presented by Mr. Murdoff, the manager. The second prize was five gallons of rennet, and was won by Mr. Mitchell, of Bell Factory, who has only been seven years in this country, and run a factory but four years. The third prize, a half dozen knives and forks, donated by Lindsay Meiklejohn, was won by Johnston Bateman of Stirling Factory. The fourth and fifth prizes, donated by Howe and Hagerman, of Belleville, were won by John Wilkinson, Roblin Factory, and G. W. Henderson, of Foxboro Factory. The presentation was made by Terry Scaulan.

Election of Officers.

During the year almost 37,000 boxes of cheese had been produced in Stirling section, and more than three hundred and twenty-seven thousand dollars obtained from cheese and whey, cream and butter.

Mr. McLaughlin, in opening the program, stated this had been the best in the history of the group. He also expressed words of praise for C. F. Linn, the instructor, accounting for the success attained in the district to the harmony and sincere co-operation of makers and instructor. Mr. Linn proposed the toast to the cheese makers and stated that he would have been satisfied if his group attained 97 per cent., but 99 per cent. was reached, nine factories scoring perfect and six factories with one vat off. He stated that there was more undergrade cheese in one factory in 1927 than in all the factories this year, which is certainly a wonderful record. John West proposed the toast to the instructors and spoke of the goodwill and fine spirit prevailing between the makers and instructors. John Murray, Campbellford; W. I. Hicks, Prince Edward County; W. J. Moore, Peterborough district, and H. Bailey, of Madoc, each spoke of the great advancement made, due to the grading of cheese.

James L. Irwin, chief produce grader, in his remarks, stated there had been more than three hundred thousand boxes of cheese sold in Central Ontario this year, with a valuation of more than six million dollars. He stated that at the Royal Winter Fair, there were 200 cheese shown, but only five or six exhibitors were from Eastern Ontario, and he advised the makers of this section to get into this competition as no better cheese was made anywhere in Canada than right here.

Thomas McCaughen proposed the toast to the guests and W. S. Martin, Stirling; G. A. Bailey, Reeve of Rawdon, and others replied.

The toast to the ladies was proposed by Reeve Montgomery, and replied to by Mrs. Morris Rose and Mrs. C. F. Line.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson entertained with violin and piano duets.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—With around 4,000 head of cattle held over, trade opened very slow. The lower and slow trend of the market is spreading to sales of hogs. There was a possibility of another heavy hold-over last night, as very little enthusiasm is shown in picking up cattle by buyers.

Indifferent attitude is shown in purchasing of butchers cattle unless of finished quality. Choice steers and heifers bring $9 to $9.25 with a few higher. Run is composed chiefly of common and medium, which are draggy at $6.50 to $7.50.

Weaker feeling is shown on cows, some choice reached $8.25 but are few. The majority of the best sell for $7 to $8. Medium $5.50 to $6.50.

Easier trend is noted on bids for stocker and feeder cattle. Choice stocker steers are selling between $8 to $8.50.

Common and medium springers and milkers fell to a poor demand and in cases had to go over the scales. Choice forward springers $90 to $125, fresh milkers of choice quality are $75 to $90.

Lambs sold Monday at $11.50, and weighing of Monday's sales is occupying most of the morning. No bids have been placed yet, but there seems to be a tendency toward lowering levels.

No hog tickets marked, as packers placed bids at $8.75, while salesmen endeavor to hold steady at $9 f.o.b. selects.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—Prevailing prices at the dressed poultry fairs held at Kemptville, Merrickville and Jasper last week were as follows: Turkeys, 35 to 40c; geese, 18 to 20c; ducks, 20 to 25c; chickens, 25 to 35c; fowl, 20 to 25c.

Toronto.—The local egg market situation is unchanged with fresh extras very scarce and firm.

Chicago spot.—Unchanged; Nov. 30⅝c; Dec. 29⅞c.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—The foreign trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was quiet and the only business transacted was a few sales of wheat and oats.

A moderate amount of business was done in the domestic market in cash grain including sales of No. 3 Northern wheat at 7⅛c per bushel over the Winnipeg November option, c.i.f. Montreal, and sales of feed wheat were made for shipment from Fort William at 73⅛c per bushel, track shipping point, while No. 1 feed oats sold at three cents per bushel under the November option, and feed barley at 1⅛c per bushel over c.i.f. The trade in car lots was also good and values were steady.

The demand for Spring and Winter wheat flour was fair and values were unchanged.

An active trade was again done in all grades of fresh and storage eggs and the undertone to the market was firm. Receipts were 676 cases.

Owing to the continued indifferent demand from foreign buyers the undertone to the cheese market was easier and prices were reduced ¼c per pound. Receipts were 4,796 boxes.

Little business was transacted in butter but the undertone to the market was steady. Receipts were 144 packages.

Canadian beans continued to sell at $5.25 per bushel, wholesale, delivered in bags. They are also being offered at 9½c per lb.

Potatoes were unchanged. New Brunswick Green Mountains sold at 50 to 55c per 90 lbs, in bulk; Prince Edward Island Cobblers at 70c in bags, and Green Mountains at 80c per 90 lbs, in bags.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 28. —(Canadian Press). —Notwithstanding that Dr. J. W. T. Duval, head of the grain futures administration at Washington, says wheat is selling 10 cents to 15 cents a bushel too low, wheat and all other grain went downward in price yesterday at the last. Offerings both of wheat and corn future deliveries became of greater volume than could be readily absorbed, and early advances were more than wiped out.

Announcement was made that the world's available supply of wheat had increased 8,818,000 bushels for week and is now 390,713,000 bushels against 284,333,000 bushels a year ago.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ½c to ¾c below Monday's finish. Corn closed ¼c to ⅝c down, oats ⅛c to ¼c off and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 2c.

According to Dr. Duval, who was in Chicago yesterday and who said he was here to see what was the matter with wheat, there is not much more bread grain in the world at present than a year ago.

Wheat, he explained is only in different positions than was the case last year. Price downturns in the wheat market yesterday were in the face of word that export purchases yesterday of wheat from North America were larger than of late, some estimates putting the total at 600,000 bushels with talk current that more export business was being done than is admitted.

Wheat price advances which were witnessed earlier went hand in hand with news that wheat is deteriorating fast in Bahai Blanca, Argentina, because of excessive heat and damaging winds. There were also indications that foreigners were buying Chicago future deliveries of wheat, and that traders generally were taking note of steps toward facilitating farm legislation at Washington. In the end, however, early buyers turned to the selling side, and the market failed to get new support.

Some of the late selling in the corn market yesterday was associated with chances of much lower temperatures ahead likely to hasten the movement of the corn crop. Earlier, there was rather persistent buying on acount of a forecast of widespread rain and snow. Oats paralleled the action of corn, with outdoing at one time the high price record for the season.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—A fair movement of butter required for immediate wants at steady prices was reported from wholesale and jobbing sources yesterday. The local situation for the week to date is very little changed from last week. There is no bearish background to the market just now and hardly likely to be any with stocks of butter relatively low and demand healthy. The usual expansion is expected by the trade when New Zealand butter arrives here about the middle of next month for distribution. Corrective movements may appear then, but there is no suggestion that they will be violent. Prices now are ruling higher than a year ago.

Dairy farmers face the normally reduced winter make of butter and cheese after experiencing a prosperous summer. Throughout the season pasturage was excellent and live stock enter winter quarters in good condition.

Butter imports for October reached a value of $277,004 compared with $130,049 for September and $117,229 for October last year.

In the absence of any notworthy feature the spot market for cheese yesterday was moving along slowly with no quotable change in prices reported. Business volume was distinctly small, with jobbers quoting 21¼c to 21½c per pound for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government graded, delivered Toronto.

Cheese imports last month were valued at $94,172 against a total of $40,624 for the preceding month and $54,608 for the month of October a year ago.

On the local curb market fresh eggs were being steadily cleared at firm prices. Dealers have again raised their bids to country shippers for fresh supplies of extra grades, and quotations in a general way are one cent per dozen in advance of last week's values. British Columbia henneries are helping to relieve the Eastern fresh egg markets at the moment. Withdrawals from local storage stocks are on the increase as business in a jobbing way continues to cater to a good domestic demand.

Imports of eggs last month amounted to $121,399. The total for September was only $34,283 and that of October last year $54,749.

LEARNING CANADIAN HISTORY.

The proposal made during the Ontario Conservative convention last week that scholarships be offered for proficiency in Canadian history has been applauded by several newspapers.

Commenting on the idea that the cost be met by subscription from those interested and financially able to contribute rather than placed upon the shoulders of the Government, the Border Cities Star, for example, says that "if there is no response however, Mr. Ferguson might well consider the suggestion as a Government enterprise."

Certainly there seems to be need for encouraging the study of the history of our country, a history that is full of color and romance, and yet to many of our citizens a history that is but a blank page.

The Diamond Jubilee celebration probably did more to stimulate an interest in the story of Canada than any other single event in our history.

It taught people something of the past, something of what we owe to the pioneers, something of our debt to the early statesmen.

These history scholarships would undoubtedly do something along the same line, and, as the Border Cities Star truly says, "there is no better grounding for good Canadianism than a thorough knowledge of the history of the nation."

A SERIOUS STATEMENT.

The statement from Rev. Abbe Casgrain, Roman Catholic chaplain attached to the immigration service at Quebec, that young girl immigrants from Central Europe entering Canada as domestic servants sometimes fall into the hands of persons of ill-repute and never reach their intended destination, is a serious charge that demands investigation.

Abbe Casgrain describes the system by which young foreign girls are brought into the country as traffic and not properly organized migration.

Certainly the efforts of immigration authorities should be directed to something more than simply bringing new people into Canada.

An immigration system that does not also help to see that they are given a fair chance to succeed here, and in the case of young girls, to make sure that they are protected, is not properly discharging its duty.

It is disquieting to find on the statement of such an authority that there is an increasing number of young girls who fail to arrive at their destination, but apparently have been swallowed up after leaving the Port of Quebec.

Undoubtedly Abbe Casgrain's charge should be the cause of a searching inquiry into the operations of the immigration department in so far as its responsibility toward immigrants after their admittance into Canada is concerned.

THEY ARE WANTED HERE.

One of the many unfortunate features of the gun episode is the impression that has gone abroad and is apparently shared by Government officials, that Peterborough does not want the war trophies presented to this city eight years ago.

The Examiner believes that the great majority of Peterborough citizens would not want to give up the captured guns, eagerly received in 1920 as symbols of Canadian victory and as a State recognition of the gallantry of Peterborough soldiers.

It surely has not been forgotten what keen rivalry there was after the war among Canadian cities, towns and villages to share in the division of captured German guns, and with how much satisfaction the news was heard here that Peterborough had been awarded three enemy field pieces?

Other communities not so fortunate are still seeking such war trophies, and undoubtedly would be delighted, as the Deputy Minister of Militia and Defense said yesterday, to accept the guns that have been the storm centre of the local controversy.

But whether they are eventually returned to Confederation Square or located in some other site, the citizens of Peterborough have no mind to surrender these symbols of victory to any other place, and it would be well if somebody in authority lost no time in informing the Federal Government of that fact.

WHAT'S THE NEXT STEP?

The disposition of the captured German war trophies will have to be fought out in the City Council, where, as a matter of common sense, it should have been decided before the guns were removed from Confederation Square.

It would, therefore, seem logical to suggest that before the Council is called upon to deal with the matter the war veterans of the city should arrive at some definite conclusion as to where the guns should be placed, and that citizens generally should have some opportunity of expressing their opinion as to the same question.

Should the war trophies be returned to Confederation Square and kept permanently there, or should some other site regarded as more suitable be selected?,

These are questions to which there should be a clear-cut answer given before the City Council has to decide what must be done.

Public opinion is practically unanimous in the belief that the removal of the guns was a mistake, the apparent scrapping of them at or near the dump another, and the failure to secure the approval of the whole Council a third; but now that the whole question is to be thrown open, what is to be done?

A public meeting of citizens and a general meeting of the war veterans might help to solve this question and give the Council a clear lead to what the community wants.

It has been shown that it does not want these war trophies tossed away.

Back to Confederation Square, or some other site?

LIVES CAN BE SAVED.

In the year 1927 no less than 21,160 persons were killed by motor vehicles in the United States. California had the highest death rate from this source, 36.7 per 100,000, while Michigan was fourth with a figure of 28.2. In Detroit alone there were 403 auto fatalities last year. New York and Chicago were the only two cities to lead this figure.

The death total from this accidental cause is appalling, but perhaps not so large after all, when one considers the millions of motor cars in use across the line and the congestion of city traffic, due, as much as anything, to the fact that few of the principal thoroughfares in either large or small centres were designed for anything but horse-drawn vehicles. Had towns and cities been laid out in the first place, with a view to motor cars and trucks being used, there is no doubt that the accident total of the present would be considerably less, for over-used streets play a large part in the situation.

Personal carelessness, of course, is the prime factor. There is carelessness on the part of motorists and carelessness on the part of pedestrians. One is perhaps as much to blame as the other, though many persons claim that the deaths of pedestrians are usually the fault of pedestrians. Every day one sees evidences of this personal carelessness, either in the car or on the part of the person who is walking. It is not to be doubted, however, that safety education in recent years has done much to reduce the automobile death and injury total, materially. One cannot check up, of course, on the actual accomplishment, but we must all appreciate that it is not inconsiderable. Because the totals are still far too large, however, it is necessary that safety organizations everywhere keep hammering away at the general idea. Lives can be saved.—Border Cities Star.

THE KING.

In a room in Buckingham Palace, London, England, an elderly English gentleman lies ill. But all over the face of the earth, on two hemispheres, on every continent, over more than a fourth of the habitable earth and wherever wireless can reach to the Seven Seas, men wait with hope and anxiety for bulletins from that bedside.

This is the British Empire! Days were when kings were feared, not loved, by their peoples. That, indeed, is still true of some lands where the monarch system holds. But the British monarchy—and this should be said without complacency or boastfulness—is different. In all of human history there has been nothing like the trust and loyalty and affection which countless millions of all racial origins and creeds scattered all over the world give to England's King. It is not a loyalty of duty or compulsion; its strength and maintenance do not depend upon treaties or pacts or paper parchments. It is a loyalty and affection compelled by consciousness of what the Monarchy of Britain stands for in the world; what it stands for in justice and human liberty and decency among nations and men; and it is an affection compelled also by the nobility and fine human qualities of the man who for the past eighteen years has sat on England's Throne.

Judged by the old standards of history, George V. may not rank among the great rulers of the world's story. If, indeed, the standard of appraisal applied be love of pomp and power, greed for conquest, ambition to extend empire and to pose and posture in shining armor, he has no place at all. But if the test be the characteristics of a true English gentleman, of a lover of peace among his own people and with all the world, of one who, recognizing perfectly his constitutional position, strove with a complete lack of vanity or arrogance but with the highest sense of duty to promote the well-being of his subjects, then, by such a test, George V. has been a great King.

Some outside the British Empire, failing to comprehend its deeper meaning and the secret of its unity, ask why a King? If, they enquire, the King has no power or voice in your government, why maintain an institution that is obsolete and useless? What they fail to understand is the mighty part which a monarch of the character of King George can play in providing a common rallying ground for the patriotic sentiments and loyalties of widely-scattered peoples. Government, after all, is not wholly embraced in elected representatives, executives, bureaucrats and administrative machinery. There are as well those mystical, imponderable, sentimental things which challenge human emotions and rally and compel human loyalties, things which, rising above the din of party factions, cause men to unite.

The British Royal Family to-day represent the best of the background and traditions and characteristics of the British people. This is not a Court where powdered courtiers cringe and posture, or where spurred and booted diplomats click their heels, or where women and men intrigue through days and nights of revelry. Than King George himself there was no more hard worked citizen of the British Empire. Devoted to his duties, mindful always of the well-being of his people, entering with heart and soul into their joys, their failures, their vicissitudes and their triumphs, allying himself with no party or clique or faction, he has been the model Monarch. If to-day he lies stricken it is because of the sense of duty which, only two weeks ago, led him to stand amid one of London's fogs at the foot of the Cenotaph with his people paying homage to their dead.

And thus it is that to-day the prayers of countless millions ascend to Heaven for the recovery of George V. Thus that from Australia, "down under," on far Pacific isles, across India, through Africa and over most of this continent and Europe men breathe the invocation, "God Save the King."—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Toronto fire department had two calls in quick succession to a Yonge street music store. That is the trouble with that "hot" music.

The orderly manner in which Peterborough's war veterans salvaged the captured German guns reflects the greatest credit upon the ex-service men. The operation was carried out without the least sign of disorder.

The gun incident has provided Peterborough with considerable publicity, but, unfortunately, it is of the wrong kind.

The next "show" in connection with the war trophies will be fought out on the floor of the City Council chamber.

As a recruiting agency for the Canadian Legion the controversy over the war trophies has proved a huge success. War veterans are apparently realizing the wisdom of standing together.

This is summer time in New Zealand, and the people have naturally discarded their Coates.—Brantford Expositor.

A Thought

PLAYFULNESS

Playfulness is a good means of softening social distances. A stiff, grave man is always in danger of being feared too much. On the other hand, as the self-love of many people is suspicious in the extreme, you must expect that your innocent playfulness will often be mistaken for ridicule.—Helps.

GOD'S MINUTE.

By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.—For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.—Heb. 11-8,10.

Our Father, Who are in Heaven, we thank Thee for Thy presence in our hearts and in our home, for Thy loving kindness and Thy tender mercies. We desire to give Thee the largest possible place in our life, that Thine ideals for us may be realized and that we may fulfill our little part in Thy great plan. So humbly pray Thee to pardon anything in our lives that hinders our fellowship with Thee or our usefulness to our fellow-men, and correct in our characters whatever is not Christlike. Teach us to trust Thee for all our needs, both of soul and body.

Defend us in the time of temptation and help us to realize that we are citizens of the spiritual kingdom. Bless all our fellow disciples the world around. Empower Thy Church that she may win great victories over evil, and at last receive us to be with Thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

DAD'S ENSEMBLE

Father has a brand new hat
(Mother madehim purchase that),
Trousers with a wider hem
(Sonny talked him into them),
Father has a louder tie
(One that caught his sister's eye),
And some gloves of lighter shade
(That's a change that Daughter made).

Sonny says he's dressed to kill,
(Father says he thinks he will),
Looks just like a college ad,
(Father says, "My gosh, that bad?")
Wife and Sister both agree.
("Well, that's something—I can see").
Daughter says he's smarter now.
(Father says he is—and how.)

Did I say he has? He had.
(Hear what happened to poor Dad).
Dad came home the other night,
(Rover wasn't tied up tight),
And poor Rover's not to blame
(Father didn't look the same)
For his error, foolish pup.
(Chewed Dad's whole ensemble up.)

"Shoot the creature!" yelled his wife.
(Father said, "Not on your life.")
"But he's ruined this new hat!"
("Well, I'm much obliged for that.")
"Thought a tramp had come along."
("Yes, and Rover wasn't wrong.")
"Well, what are the proper clothes?"
("Go and ask some dog—he knows.")

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

THE STORY THUS FAR:

GILES CHITTENHAM returns to London from the United States—where he has contracted a secret and unhappy marriage with SADIE BARROW—to help wind up the affairs of his younger half brother, RODNEY ARDRON, who has recently killed himself for love of JULIE FARROW. In Switzerland, through his friend, LOMBARD, Giles meets Julie and determines to make her love him and then spurn her to avenge his brother. But later, after they have found out that they really love each other, he finds out that she is a cousin of the other Julie Farrow whom his brother loved. As he cannot marry her, she plunges into a wild, reckless life, and finally decides to marry a rich, older man named SCHOFIELD. Lombard tells Chittenham that unless he gives him money he will tell Schofield that Chittenham and Julie spent a night together in Switzerland. Chittenham decides to get a divorce from Sadie and marry Julie, and Julie tells Schofield she cannot marry him. But then Sadie goes blind, and Chittenham feels that he cannot leave her.

When Giles Chittenham got back to his mother's house she met him in the hall. She seemed to have recovered her usual butterfly spirits—she was smiling and composed and daintily dressed.

Giles looked at her with weary eyes. For a moment the absurd idea flashed across his mind that perhaps the crowding events of the afternoon had only been a dream. It seemed impossible to believe in its tragic happenings when one looked at Mrs. Ardron. She even smiled in her usual butterfly fashion as she came up to him and, standing on tip-toe lightly kissed his chin.

"Dear boy, how tired you look! Where have you been? I waited dinner nearly half an hour for you, but I was so hungry I couldn't wait any longer."

Chittenham smiled grimly.

"I'm glad you haven't lost your appetite," he said with dreary humor.

Mrs. Ardron glanced up at him with rather timid eyes. She was often afraid of Giles just as—although she would never admit it—she had once been afraid of his father.

"You're not very kind, dear," she said deprecatingly. "After all it's not my fault that things have happened as they have. You must admit that you kept me entirely in the dark about your marriage."

She followed timidly when he walked past her into the drawing-room. She closed the door behind her and stood leaning against it with an almost girlish air of embarrassment. After a moment as her son did not speak she said hesitatingly. "Giles dear!"

"Well, mother?" He turned round, an impatient line between his eyes. "Well, what is it?" he asked more kindly, vaguely conscious of the appeal in her face.

"Be kind to me, dear," she faltered. "Oh, Giles, do say you wish me happiness."

Giles stared at her with blank eyes. "Wish you happiness? What on earth—?" Mrs. Ardron did her best to blush. She cast her eyes down prettily and twisted an absurd handkerchief.

"I am going to be married again, Giles," she whispered.

"Married again? What the devil—?" He caught her by the shoulders. "To that damned Jew fellow?" he demanded savagely.

Mrs. Ardron gave a cry of indignant protest.

"How unkind you are, Giles! What does it matter what he is if we love each other?"

"Love! Rubbish!"

Chittenham released her roughly and turned away.

"Good Lord mother, you must be out of your mind, or he must!"

She began to sob.

"I thought you would be pleased to see me settled in life again—after all I am a lonely woman, and now you are so happily married—"

There was a vixenish little sting in the last three words.

Giles laughed mirthlessly.

"Happily married! You've got a sense of humor, my dear."

She went on sobbing.

"It's very cruel of you, and when I was so happy. Marco rang me up on the 'phone just as I had finished dinner. He said he was anxious to know how I was after all the trouble this afternoon—I thought it so kind and thoughtful of him, and I told him so. I told him that nobody else troubled about me in the least, which is perfectly true—"

She was sobbing now in self-pity. "And then he said he would like to trouble about me always—to take care of me and protect me, and I said I wished he could, and then—oh, Giles, how cruel of you to laugh!"

Giles checked his mirth with difficulty.

"I'm sorry, but that man of all men in the world!"

There was a profound silence, broken only by Mrs. Ardron's weak sobbing.

She had been seeing herself for the third time as a heroine of romance, until she came face to face with her son's accusing eyes, and now in spite of her unquenchable vanity she was beginning to feel slightly absurd. After all, Marco Esen was fat and very fond of his food—such a very different type from Giles's father and Rodney's father. They had both been such fine men, so cultured. She had loved them both so devotedly. And at the touching memory her tears broke out afresh.

"You are very cruel to me, Giles, and as my only son—"

"For God's sake stop crying, mother. Nothing I can say really matters. You'll marry the man if you want to, and nobody can stop it. But don't rhapsodize about it—at any rate to me, and can I have something to eat?"

"Of course you can. Dinner is being kept hot for you. Oh, and Giles—" She stopped him as he turned to the door—"I forgot to tell you that your wife has been asking for you all the evening. I said I would send you up as soon as you came in." Again that malicious little inflection crept into her voice and Giles flushed dully. For the moment at any rate he had forgotten that Sadie was still here under his mother's roof.

"I don't know when it will be convenient for you to take Sadie away," Mrs. Ardron went on plaintively, "but really it is rather upsetting to have a sick, hysterical woman and a nurse monopolizing my best rooms. And the doctor talks of two nurses, and says she must not be left night or day. Of course, I sympathize utterly with the poor creature—blindness is a perfectly ghastly thing, but after all, Giles—"

"I will take her away tomorrow morning," Giles interrupted ruthlessly. "I would do so tonight, only it's late, and I must make proper arrangements."

"Tomorrow will do perfectly well," Mrs. Ardron said sweetly. "My heart aches for you, Giles, but—"

"I'll get something to eat," Chittenham said curtly. But when the food was brought he could not touch it.

His head ached miserably and his nerves felt strained and on edge. What was to be the end of everything, he asked himself hopelessly? How could he go on living with Sadie when every thought of his brain and every beat of his heart longed for another woman. If Sadie had been difficult before, what would she be like now with this new and terrible affliction? Blindness! He shut his eyes and tried vaguely to realize what it would mean to her, she who had been so care-free and gay.

The doctor had said it was not quite hopeless—nowadays one heard of such miracles and yet at the bottom of his heart Giles had no hope. This was his punishment for what he had done to Julie. Everything in the world had to be paid for, and in full, and this was to be the payment demanded from him—eternal separation from the woman he loved, and lifelong bondage to a woman for whom he cared nothing.

"If you please, sir, when you are ready will you go upstairs to Mrs. Chittenham?"

Giles started and flushed.

So already everyone knew of his marriage! Of course that would be his mother's doing—she could never keep anything to herself for more than a few seconds.

He answered heavily: "Very well," and the servant departed, leaving him alone once more.

Looking back to the early days of his marriage it seemed now to have been the most preposterous folly. Why had he ever been drawn into it? He had never loved Sadie—he had never loved any woman till that night when he first held Julie in his arms.

That moment had been happiness such as he had never dreamed of. He wondered if he would ever forget the clasp of her arms about his neck, and the soft feel of her hair against his cheek.

So many times since in aching imagination he had heard her whispered words: "I am thinking how happy I am. It's like a beautiful fairy story with a happy ending."

And then again:

"It's possible to be just as happy down on earth as it is up on the heights."

But they had come down to an earth which held only sorrow and parting and disillusionment—an earth which had nothing more to give them—an earth which was only an inexorable taskmaster demanding payment to the uttermost farthing for those few hours of happiness.

What would be the end of it?

He could not go on living without Julie—he knew as he sat there in the silent room that in spite of all his boasted honor where Sadie was concerned, it would not be humanly possible for him to put Julie out of his life for ever.

He had been a fool to believe that he could—a fool ever to tell her so. Life was so short and happiness so rare, what wrong could there be in snatching at the small share which came a man's way?

Already he had forgotten his wife—Julie alone mattered. He was a rich man—Sadie would always be generously provided for. He would go back to Julie now—and he would never leave her again.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 192

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Saturn is in an aspect favorable for retrospection, and for that reason the planet may be said to cast a sadness over the minds of the aged.

Women today are subject to the best possible planetary government, which encourages hospitality and makes the task of entertaining seem light.

Reunions of friends are subject to a good direction of the stars, but it is well to cultivate tact where contacts with relatives are concerned.

Owing to the tendency to look backward there may be an inclination to count years that have gone and this is held unlucky—especially where women are implicated in recollections.

There is a good sign for recreation and sociability, while the stars that are supposed to affect food preparation are in benefic aspect.

Under this sway love affairs should be most fortunate and engagements to marry made today should bring happiness.

The stars are believed to impart to both men and women the power to discern the best, while this rule prevails and for this reason kindliness should mark all social intercourse.

Theatres and places of amusement should profit from some unusual condition making for large assemblies of the people.

Much is to be heard of the new freedom at this time when both men and women will seek liberation of thought from outworn limitations.

Craving for novelties, however, should be guarded against when it reaches extremes in books or plays, the seers advise.

Reactionary forces which have been at work for many months will eventually bring about the elimination of erotic tendencies in literature and will replace them with fine aspirations, it is forecast.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will have a year of eventful experiences. The stars seem to indicate upheavals in one's life and fortune.

Children born on this day probably will have a great desire to travel. Boys may be especially fond of adventure. These subjects of Sagittarius usually are lucky in money matters and can earn expenses for any expedition they may long to undertake.

Uncle Wiggily

UNCLE WIGGILY'S THANKSGIVING.

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Such a hurry and scurry and hustle and bustle as there was in Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow! Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy had tied her long tail in a knot so it would not be stepped on as she hurried about the kitchen, into the pantry and up and down cellar. Mrs. Longears was spreading jam on tarts and washing carrots for the pudding.

The little boy and girl rabbits were running in and out of the bungalow, laughing and shouting, for there was no school and the next day was going to be Thanksgiving, when they could have as much lettuce pie and carrot pudding as was good for them.

Uncle Wiggily sat in an easy chair, now and then twinkling his pink nose as he smelled the good things cooking in the kitchen ready for the feast next day. He was a happy old rabbit gentleman, for Christmas was coming and Thanksgiving was just around the corner.

He heard a voice.

"Aren't you going out to look for an adventure, Unkie Wig?" asked Baby Bunty when she had run in to warm her little toes, which were cold, because there was snow on the ground.

"Oh, yes, Bunty, I am going adventuring very soon," said Mr. Longears. "I think I shall hop out now and see what will happen."

So, putting on his warm, fur coat, the old rabbit gentleman jumped down the front steps and hopped carefully along the walk, for there the children had made a slippery slide and Uncle Wiggily didn't want to fall down.

Pretty soon Uncle Wiggily was in a field where, in the summer, much green corn had grown, the tall green stalks waving in the wind. But now the corn had been cut and piled into shocks like little tents, and, later, the farmer would haul the corn into his barn.

As Uncle Wiggily passed one of these little tents of dried and rustling stalks of corn, he heard a voice saying:

"Oh, mother! How hungry we are! Do you think we shall ever have anything to eat?"

"I hope so, my dears," was the answer. "If only the wind will blow hard enough it may shake down some grains of corn for you to eat. If I were not sick I could climb up the stalks and gnaw corn off for you. And if your father had not been caught in a trap he would bring in enough corn so we should have a grand feast for Thanksgiving. But if the wind doesn't blow I'm afraid you will have nothing to eat."

"Oh, dear!" said the tiny, wee voice.

"Dear me!" thought Uncle Wiggily. "This is too bad! Some family is going to be hungry over Thanksgiving unless the wind blows. I wonder who they are?" So he looked amid the stalks of corn and there he saw a mother field mouse and seven little baby mice who were too small to run about or climb up the tall stalks of corn to gnaw for themselves some kernels off the ears which were in the shock.

"Well, this ought not to be hard for me!" chuckled Mr. Longears. "I can pretend to be the wind and shake this shock so hard with my paws that a lot of corn kernels will rattle down into the nest of the little mice. Then the sick mother can pick up some to gnaw and there will be plenty for the little mice. I'm sorry Mr. Mouse was caught in a trap, for I should like him to have some of the Thanksgiving dinner I am going to make for his family."

So Uncle Wiggily gave the shock of corn a hard shake. Down rattled many yellow kernels that had been loosened by the frost. Into the nest of field mice the food fell and many little voices squeaked:

"Oh, mother! Now we have lots to eat! And some for you! Now you will get well and strong!"

"Yes, my dears," said Mother Mouse to her little ones. "How lucky it is that the wind blew, for it made corn rattle down!"

One of the little mice peered out from the warm nest of milkweed cotton and, seeing Uncle Wiggily standing there, asked:

"Oh, Mr. Rabbit, are you the Wind?"

"Yes," answered Uncle Wiggily with a laugh, "I was the Wind! See!" Again he shook the shock of corn and more kernels rattled down so the field mice had enough to last them all winter.

"Thank you," squeaked Mother Mouse. "We shall have a fine Thanksgiving!" And next day, when Uncle Wiggily sat at his table and listened to every one else laughing and talking his wife asked him:

"What are you most thankful for, Wiggy?"

"I am thankful that I could pretend I was the Wind and feed the hungry mice," he said, and no one knew who he meant until he told this story that I have told you. So everything came out all right.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY IT IS HARD TO LOCATE SOUND

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author of The Springs of Human Action.

Try this experiment on some congenial and unsuspecting friend. Let him be seated comfortably. Then blindfold him and snap your fingers or use some other convenient means of making a noise to the right, to the left, overhead, in back and in front of your subject. Ask him to locate the sound after each trial. He will have no trouble locating sounds issueing from his right or left. But if he guesses the source of the sounds from in back, in front and on top of his head it will be purely accidental.

The reason for this peculiar situation is that sounds coming from either the right or the left hit the two ears with different degrees of intensity which is the way we have of telling where the source of the sound is. But when the noise issues from the median plane half way between the two ears it hits both ears with the same degree of intensity and there is no way of telling the exact location. This is why you turn your head in various directions to locate a sound. You are unconsciously experimenting until you get the sound either on your right or left and away from directly in front or behind.

The ear is not as effective as the eye. We judge distances and distant objects much more accurately than we do sounds. If the eyes were as poorly equipped for objects, and especially for moving objects, as the ear is for sounds we would not be able to use automobiles.

Perhaps the superiority of the eye over the ear prevented the development of the ear to as fine a point as the eye. The eye has always aided the ear in the struggle for existence. From this it is safe to infer that our ancestors did little or no fighting at night. Perhaps there were few if any occasions for fighting or defense at night. The type of shelter that the greater intelligence of man would enable him to make for himself was evidently fairly secure from serious attacks in the dark. Or it may be that this lack of ability to locate sounds forced primitive man to his shelter at every sunset and the approaching dusk spelled horror and torment.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

NEW ZEALANDER HAS NOVEL IDEA

Buys Fruit Boxes for Boys to Play With in Aberdeen Streets.

ADVERTISING PURPOSES

AUKLAND, N. Z., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press.) — New Zealand has found a new way of advertising itself in the old country, and it remained for G. L. Savage, of Wellington, to discover it. He was travelling in Aberdeen and while chatting with a fruit merchant a group of small boys entered the store and asked him if they could have a couple of empty boxes.

Savage saw his chance and he paid the shop keeper for six empty cases that had held New Zealand apples and presented one to each of the delighted boys. Before they went off with their prizes Mr. Savage gave each boy twopence, after having extracted from him a promise that he would not remove the New Zealand label from the box.

A few days later Mr. Savage saw a whole procession of these six boxes, mounted on wheels, being dragged by the proud owners through the streets of Aberdeen. In these days boxes mounted on wheels are used for many purposes, including that of the family perambulator—so Mr. Savage seemed satisfied New Zealand was getting some publicity.

TIT FOR TAT.

Peekskill, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Because members of the local fire department refused him permission to sleep in their quarters for the night, Thomas Glenn 49, turned in a fire alarm to prevent them from sleeping. The judge gave Glenn thirty days to catch up with his sleep.

Wheat Market Easier, Corn Becomes Firmer

CHICAGO, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press). — Reports that rains were needed in Argentina tended to ease down the wheat market to-day during the early dealings. On the other hand corn developed firmness owing to unfavorable weather in the corn belt, likely to hinder the movement of the crop. Opening at 1 decline to ⅛ advance, wheat kept near to the initial figures. Corn started unchanged to ¼ off, and subsequently scored something of an advance all around. Oats followed corn.

New York Stock Exchange Continues Upward Advance

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—Faced with the prospect of relatively firm call money rates for the balance of the year, the stock market nevertheless resumed its upward movement to-day, with the advance reaching violent proportions in some of the high-priced specialties. Considerable irregularity developed in the early trading as the result of the rather heavy pre-holiday profit-taking which followed the marking up of call money renewal rate of eight per cent, and a slight hardening of time money rates, but in most cases the offering were well absorbed.

Shortly after mid-day, powerful pools again stepped into the market with large buying orders and the "bull" movement was again in full swing. The day's news was largely favorable.

With the heavy holiday demands beginning to make themselves felt, little hope is held out by bankers for easier rates unless there should be drastic reaction in stock prices.

Radio was again the sensational performer in to-day's market, soaring 35½ points to a new high record at 400. Brooklyn Edison ran up twenty-five points to a new top at 325. Motor Products soared 21 points, Wright Aero, 20¼; American Express 16¼, Gold Dust, 11¼; Adams Express and Brooklyn Union Gas 10½ each, and Peoples' Gas, Consolidated Gas, American and Foreign Power, International Telephone, Keith-Albee Preferred, Mexican Seaboard, Burroughs Adding Machine, Curtiss Aeroplane sold five to eight points higher, several of them at new highs.

Towagamac seven to 2.98 while Hollinger Consolidated, McIntyre, Vipond and Wright-Hargreaves were firm. Hudson Bay advanced 40 cents to 21.40 and Abana thirty to 3.85, while Coast Copper dropped 1.50 to 60.00 and Central Manitoba one to 75. Mandy Mines was up nine to 1.45.

According to the president, H. H. Vaughan, work is being aggresively pushed at this property. The shaft has been completed to the 200 foot level and crosscuts driven north and south to the ore zones. This work took longer than was originally anticipated and has not yet reached a stage to warrant a definite report from the consulting engineer, Capt. Ross. It is reported that the north vein has not yet been encountered. However, a vein on the south side was cut which had only shown as a narrow shear zone on the surface, and at the 200 foot level was 13 feet wide, and it is stated carried commercial values over five feet on the hanging wall side. This has been drifted on ten feet east and 30 odd feet west, samples showing an average value of $15 over a width of five to six feet.

Macassa.

The latest developments at the adjoining Kirkland Lake Gold Mines have tended to turn the attention of the Street to some extent to Macassa Mines, who already have a shaft down to the 500 foot level. For some time the owners have been waiting to see what the results of Kirkland Lake's development at depth would prove to be. As they are now reported as having more than 700 feet of good commercial ore over fair width at the 2,850 foot level and the drift carrying this ore is heading for the Macasa line, which is still more than 200 feet distant, it is a very interesting condition for the Macassa people.

Noranda.

As will be seen from a survey of production figures at Noranda, present earnings are close to $2.50 a share net, which of course does not take into consideration the extraordinary captial expenditure such as shaft sinking and smelter additions It will be noted from this when the second reverbatory unit is put into operation, which will probably not be until the No. 4 shaft has been completed just what the possibilities of this company are from present smelter facilities. In the meantime, underground development work is going ahead rapidly and new ore is being put in sight daily. In fact it is reliably reported from Rolyn that new ore bodies are so common now that they are only taken for granted. While the stock may have its ups and downs on the board, it is our opinion that those who are willing to stick with it will be handsomely rewarded for their indulgence. The present price does not appear to nearly discount the potentialities of the property.

McIntyre Porcupine Has Encountered Five Ore Bodies at 3875 Horizon —Drive is 2700 Feet Long

The long drive at the McIntyre Porcupine Mine at the 3875-foot level has a length now of approximately 2700 feet. Of this 1700 feet is west of No. 11 shaft and the 1000 feet east of this shaft. This drive will be carried throughout the length of the property at this level, a distance of some 8000 feet. It will be seen from the above development alone that, while the management are saying little extraordinarily headway is being made.

It will be recalled tha near the end of the crosscut south from the No. 11 shaft at 3875 feet depth No. 13 vein was encountered and followed for a considerable distance. This proved to be high grade and compares favorably with values found in the same ore body at the 3375 and 2375 foot levels. This No. 13 vein is one of the three ore lenses referred to as having been found at the 3875 foot level in the crosscut that passed south through the schisted zone. The schisted zone has a width of 150 feet. The other two lenses are farther into the schist and will be developed in good time.

In carrying the drift east, after diverging from No. 13 vein, and at some distance from it, another ore lense was encountered which looks like a normal McIntyre ore body, but still awaits development. In the drive west of the No. 11 shaft at 3,875 feet, still another ore lense was encountered, which, while it has not been followed up this year appears to stand up well, showing good values.

The management are itching to get at these lenses, but are adhering to their policy of carrying the drift throughout the property and ore development along these lenses would interefere. The two ore bodies cut were encountered incidentally in sending the drive straight along the schisted zone.

McIntyre has already encountered five ore lenses at the 3,875 foot level, and all of them look good. Work is also being carried on at the seven levels between 3,875 and 1875 feet depth.

East of the No. 11 shaft, and a separate development from the workings south of this shaft, two ore bodies have been developed; one of these known as vein No. 17. These workings have been carried east on the 1875, 2375 and 2875 foot levels, and are believed now to be the downward extensions of the ore bodies opened up on the Jupiter above the 1200 foot level. If this proves to be the case, McIntyre has huge assets in this section.

McIntyre is moving rapidly towards the time when a definite decision can be reached as to new mill plans.

COMMENT ON THE MARKET

A Special Service to The Examiner.

Algoma Steel Benzol Plant—All Mills Working at Capacity

The new benzol plant of the Algoma Steel Corporation will evidently become an important minor factor in the company's revenues. The capacity of the plant, according to official advices, is 6,000 gallons of motor fuel per day and the present output is 4,200 gallons daily.

Officials estimate that shipments from this plant for the year 1929 should be approximately 1,800,000 gallons.

The Financial News Bureau is advised that benzol sells at 55 cents per gallon, or higher, according to the volume purchased. Placing profits to Algoma Steel Corporation at as low as 10 cents per gallon, the total profit from this source in 1929 should be $180,000.

The president of Algoma Steel Corporation reports that all the mills are working to capacity now on rails, fastenings and material for car companies.

Construction plans are completed for the time being.

Exceeds Last Year's Figures

NEW YORK—General Motors sales of cars to overseas dealers in the first nine months of this year amounted to 210,290 units, exceeding sales for any previous year's figures, and comparing with 193,829 for 1927. The total for the nine months is nearly as great as the combined total for 1925 and 1926, which amounted to 291,685 units.

Sales in the third quarter of 1928 exceeded those of the same quarter of 1927 by 23,935, or 49 per cent.

Big Developments in Hupp Motors in Windsor Looked For Strong possibility that Windsor may obtain an important addition to its automobile factories, is seen in the purchase of the Chandler-Cleveland Motor Corporation of Cleveland, Ohio, by the H. Hupp Motor Car Corporation of Detroit. Hupp has acquired control of Chandler by purchases of stock in the New York market, and negotiations were reported under way with large minority shareholders of the Chandler concern to sell out to Hupp.

One of the first automobile plants to be established in Windsor was that of the Hupp Corporation, located on the Giles Boulevard at the Essex Terminal railway tracks. For years it has not operated for the actual assembly or manufacture of automobiles, although some work is understood to have been done there on the Hopmobile cars sold in Canada.

With the acquisition of Chandler, Hupp becomes one of the largest independent producers, and efforts which have been made by the Border Chamber of Commerce to obtain an extension of their operations in that centre are seen as more likely of success.

The shares of capital stock to be paid to Chelmsford have been purchased by Canada Dry in the open market. The company will change hands on December 20. The earnings of the New England Company will, however, accrue to Canada Dry from September 30.

MINING BRIEFS

THE COPPER GROUP.

Dividend increases or resumptions by copper production companies were almost a daily occurrence in the last week, says the New York Times, giving further evidence of the improved position of the industry which has followed the steady enhancement in the price of the metal. Comparisons show that November dividend payments announced by a representative group of these companies are about 35 per cent. above the total for the same month in 1924. It is pointed out in the financial district that the copper price increase is not the only factor in the higher earnings and dividends. Depressed prices of the metal in recent years induced most companies to effect operating economies which now result in substantial additions to the earnings. The companies also have been building up ample reserves in many instances and improving their financial structures, so that increased earnings can now be passed on to stockholders with relative speed.

ANACONDA COPPER MINING CO. TO EARN IN 1929 ABOUT $11.50 A SHARE AFTER 7 PER CENT. DEBENTURES ARE ALL CONVERTED.

New York—Anaconda Copper Mining Co. in 1929 probably will earn on a delivered basis, with pro-ratings from subsidiaries, assuming copper at 15.75 cents delivered, roughly $44,750,000 after bond interest, sinking fund, discounts, depreciation and federal taxes, or $11.50 a share on the 3,856,000 shares outstanding when the 7 per cent. debentures are all converted. This would compare with prorated earnings in 1928 of somewhat over $7 a share on the present outstanding stock.

Stocks of refined copper are down to an irreducible minimum and too low for the good of the industry. Stocks must be built up next year to a safer limit, and it is not improbable that during 1929 refined stocks will be increased by at least five weeks' output. This means the more important companies will sell only about 90 per cent. of 1929 output. Building up of refined stocks to safer proportions should and probably will be done even if this causes price to sag somewhat during the second half-year, as it is not to the best interests of producers in the long run to have stocks so low. Owing to the fact that production next year probably will exceed shipments, it is not impossible the price during the second half-year will be somewhat lower than during the first six months. It is therefore safer to figure earnings of copper companies on 15.75 cents as the average price for 1929 than to use present price of 16 cents delivered.

Anaconda with output pro-rated from subsidiaries will produce in 1929 roughly 142 pounds of copper a share of stock outstanding, assuming complete bond conversion, and sales will be at the rate probably of about 133 pounds of copper a share. Consequently, any change up or down of ¼ cent a pound in delivered price of copper will change Anaconda's prorated earnings in 1929 roughly 33 cents a share.

In 1929 it is probable Anaconda will produce at its Butte mines roughly 275,000,000 pounds of copper and sell that same amount as finished or semi-finished subsidiary. Chile Copper Co. probably will produce about 325,000,000 pounds of copper in 1929 and sell and deliver 300,000,000 pounds. Andes Copper Mining Co. has a capacity of 200,000,000 to 225,000,000 pounds a year and will probably produce in 1929, 200,000,000 pounds of copper and sell about 180,000,000 pounds. Anaconda owns more than 51 per cent. of Chile and somewhat more than half the outstanding stock of Andes, assuming all Andes bonds converted.

SILVER STOCKS IN SHANGHAI.

Washington. — Silver stocks in Shanghai November 15 totalled 125,800,000 taels, of which 70,700,000 taels were held in native banks, compared with 126,500,000 taels and 66,700,000 taels respectively, a week before. Sycee and silver bars were valued at 61,900,000 taels, a decrease of 1,300,000 taels from November 8. Total number of Chinese silver dollars was 80,600,000, a decrease of 7,100,000 in the week.

LEGARE COMPANY WILL EARN PREFERRED STOCK DIVIDEND.

Sales of the P. T. Legare Co., Ltd., for the first ten months of the present year showed an increase in excess of half a million dollars over those for the corresponding period last year, according to an announcement made by J. H. Fortier, president and general manager. Profits are reported to have increased in approximately the same proportion as sales. As a consequence the dividend on the 7 per cent. preferred stock will in 1928 be earned over six times, leaving a substantial balance available for common stock dividends.

New stores have recently been opened in Cornwall, Ontario, and Bagotville, Quebec, in the district surrounding both of which rapid industrial expansion has taken place in the last few years. The store at Bagotville will also serve the towns of Port Alfred, Ha Ha Bay and the Parish of St. Alphonse.

P. T. Legare Co. has declared the quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the 7 per cent. preferred stock, payable December 1st to shareholders of record November 15.

WHEAT POOL CONVENTION OPENS AT CALGARY

CALGARY, Alta., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—With a full attendance of delegates present, the sixth annual meeting of the Alberta wheat pool opened here yesterday. It is expected the delegates will be in session for three or four days As usual proceedings are being conducted behind closed doors.

According to a report handed out at the close of the morning session, the Board of Directors stated that a greater acreage was now under contract by the pool than ever before in its history.

The directors in their report dealt at considerable length on the criticism levelled at the pool by the grain trade regarding the pool's elevator patronage dividend. It was claimed by the directors that some of the pool members had met with a refusal from line companies when they tried to get their grain shipped to pool terminals according to the terms of the Campbell amendment.

GRAIN SHIPMENTS SET NEW RECORD

WINNIPEG, November 28. Canadian Press. — One of the biggest shipments of grain, from the head of the lakes, was recorded Monday, when a total of 5,878,000 bushels were started down the lakes. This reduced the storage at the lake head terminal elevators to 45,014,000 bushels of grain.

The movement out of the port of Vancouver on Monday totalled 449,285 bushels of grain, which left 9,338,689 bushels of grain in store.

Up to and including Novmber 26th, the Canadian Pacific Railway had 240,936,083 bushels of grain marketed on its lines throughout the west since the grain movement began. Of this amount 203,416,891 bushels were wheat and 37,517,192 bushels other grains.

According to Canadian Pacific Railway figures Saskatchewan leads in the quantity of wheat production and Manitoba far exceeds both the other prairie provinces in the production of coarse grains.

By provinces, the figures are: Manitoba, 24,872,596 bushels of wheat and 21,367,819 bushels of other grains. Saskatchewan, 105,079,917 bushels of wheat, and 10,878,736 bushels of other grains, Alberta, 73,466,370 bushels of wheat and 5,270,637 bushels of other grains.

Loadings in the prairie provinces, to date, amounted to 112,736 cars of wheat, and 18,684 cars of other grains.

RETURNED SOLDIERS TO MEET THURSDAY

guns are placed elsewhere, in a public place, they will still be reminders to those mothers who are certainly deserving of consideration. Plainly, the next move is up to the city council, which body accepted the guns and assumed responsibility for their care, back in 1920.

Call Meeting.

Major H. K. Clifton, M.C., Medaille Militaire, Croix de Guerre, said he believed the gun episode to be a great mistake. He said that a meeting of all returned men should have been held and their decision should have been acted upon. In expressing his idea as to a good location for the guns he said that there were several, but the best he knew was on the V-shaped pieces of land at the east side of the Hunter street bridge or the one in front of the Oval. In talking about the guns he said that they meant more to the returned men than any monument ever would.

Wilfred F. Huycke was of the opinion that the proper place for the guns was back in Confederation Square, as they were a good set-off for the Memorial. "Back in their old stand and painted every year is the only place," said Mr. Huycke.

Put Back At Once

"I think the party or parties responsible for the removal and discard of the war trophies should immediately replace same to their original setting," said ex-Alderman W. J. Hancock. "These were the property of the citizens of Peterborough donated by the Militia Department and accepted by city authorities to be held in sacred trust for us. Hence the members of Council representing the people, should, I think, take action and have their replacement made effective at once."

Should Be Held Sacred.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., stated that when he heard of the removal of the guns from Confederation Park, his indignation knew no bounds. He considered that those responsible for the removal had made a very great mistake. "The preservation of the guns taken by our soldier citizens should be held sacred," said he, going on to express his feeling that the ultimate destination of the guns should be left in the decision of the soldiers themselves. "The War Veterans showed great self-control and splendid judgment under very trying circumstances," said Mr. Kerr in commenting on the activitiss of Monday night.

"I had a son and as many other relatives overseas as the majority of people, and I never once felt that the presence of the captured German guns detracted from the spirit of the war memorial," said James W. Anderson, C.P.R. freight agent. "I was out of town the day it happened, but when I heard of it, I felt that very poor judgment had been shown in the placing of the guns. It seems to me that there is no better or more suitable site in the city than Confederation Square. I would like to see them replaced there."

J. Legrow

"In order to offset the teaching our children get through United States war movies," said J. Legrow, "the guns and any other trophies should be left in plain view to show that Canadians did their share. But some people seem to want to forget the war."

M. Hubbs

"I wonder who was at the bottom of this outrage," was the only comment M. Hubbs made.

E. Lillico

"I cannot realize yet that city authorities would sanction such a thing," said E. Lillico.

M. Henry

"I, as well as others, lost a son overseas," said M. Henry, "and I would rather see the guns there in the park than something no one would appreciate. Who dare take the glory away from the Canadians?"

Leo Copp

Lieut. H. J. Dewey

"They talk about beautifying the park and its surroundings, "but I notice they have just given leave for the erection of a gasoline station across the street, which will not only spoil the look of the park, but also the public library.

PRIZE WHEAT BRINGS $400

Herman Trelle Pays High Price For His Own Exhibit.

UP FOR AUCTION.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Four hundred dollars represents a stiff price for a half bushel of wheat, but that is what Herman Trelle, the Wheat and Oat King from Wembley, Alberta, paid yesterday afternoon at the Royal Winter Fair. But it was his own sample, prize-winning half bushel upon which he placed that valuation during the auction sale for the grain samples which scored the ribbons. Even so, his prize package of Reward wheat was twelve pounds short.

While the grain remained on display, the tops of the bags were covered with plate glass, but three times since the opening of the Winter Fair the glass on that particular sample of grain was broken and certain quantities were abstracted as souvenirs. So Herman Trelle paid $400 for a half bushel of wheat, minus twelve pounds.

In his capacity as Oat King, Mr. Trelle also paid a stiff price for his oat sample. Though his Victor oats were dropped to second place, he valued his half bushel at $100 during the auction; and he placed the same valuation upon a half bushel of red-ribbon Chancellor peas. At least, Mr. Trelle was forced to pay the above prices for his samples to keep them from falling into other hands. He paid $100 for his second prize oats, while the prize-winning half bushel shown by another exhibitor was auctioned off at four dollars.

At the auction, the demand was keen for any Trelle grain. The first bid for his half bushel of wheat was $100, and it jumped to $150 then to $300. Mr. Trelle stated he had two reasons for paying high prices for his samples. First, he did not want them to fall into the hands of any person who might exhibit them as his own at later Fairs. Second, there was a sentiment attached.

"I would like to see the exhibit of grain samples taken from large crops" he added. "Some people think I merely grow prize grain in small lots in the back yard, but that is not the case. I grow large fields and take my samples from such crops. I would like to see all others do the same thing."

On the average, Spring wheat samples sold at around $2 for the half bushel lot. Fall wheat and oats sold generally at $2 for the half bushel lot, and barley at $1.25 to $2. Red clover and alsike sold at the rate of $32 per bushel, while the price paid for alfalfa ran from $32 to $40 per bushel. Sweet clover sold around $10 per bushel. Prices paid for potatoes ranged from $1 to $1.20 per bushel.

MAN MISSING SINCE FRIDAY

LAST SEEN 4.30 P.M.

The city police have been notified and are investigating the disappearance of Walter Clayton, aged 25 years, height 5 feet 7 inches tall and weight 160 pounds, who, on Friday, November 23 last left his boarding house at 118 Sophia street in his motor car and has not been seen locally since that time.

Clayton, an employee of the Western Clock company, did not take his departure until about 4.30 in the afternoon. In conversation with The Examiner, a member of the family of Paul Loescher, at whose home he resided, stated that his absence for such a length of time had aroused anxiety but that a close friend of Clayton had said he would return in a short time.

blotches that appear on the skin, and the eyes discharge.

Every effort is made on the part of the Department of Agriculture to prevent the disease and to stamp it out whenever it appears to the least extent. When one member of a pen of hogs is found to have the disease the general principle is to destroy all the hogs in the pen, and frequently all those on the property.

In Essex county there has been a widespread epidemic of hog cholera, and the farmers have lost hundreds of animals.

Peterborough county has been particularly fortunate, and the disease is practically unknown here. This case of Herbert Withers' hogs is the first to be found locally for many years, and it has, it is hoped, been well taken care of to prevent spreading.

OTTAWA SEEKS EXPLANATION

Rev. Abbe Casgrain Says Girl Immigrants Reach Persons Ill Repute.

CHARGES DENIED.

OTTAWA, November 28. — Canadian Press. — Rev. Abbe Casgrain, Roman Catholic chaplain attached to the Immigration service at Quebec City, was yesterday requested by the Immigration Department to present evidence in connection with his charges that young girl immigrants to Canada sometimes fell into the hands of persons of ill-repute, and never reached their proper destinations.

In an interview at Quebec on Monday Abbe Casgrain said: "The system by which young foreign girls are brought into the country is not properly organized migration, it is just traffic." He has also been asked to explain what is meant by "traffic."

Officials stated yesterday that there had been cases where girls had not reached intended destinations because they had been taken care of by relatives and friends who intervened.

Social Agencies Deny.

MONTREAL, November 28. Canadian Press. — Unanimous denial of the charges made by Rev. Abbe Casgrain of Quebec, as to the disappearance of immigrant servant girls, is voiced by workers in the Y.W.C.A., Travellers' Aid and other such organizations here.

It was pointed out that the Travellers' Aid organization is given a list of all immigrant girls who came into the country, and by means of their connections through such societies as the Daughters of the Empire and through the work of their own officers in co-operation with other bodies of like nature, they are able to follow up every foreign girl that comes into Canada as an immigrant for domestic service.

Abbe has Names.

QUEBEC, November 28. — "Unfortunately very little comes out of these investigations," said Abbe Philippe Casgrain, Catholic Immigration Chaplain of the Port of Quebec yesterday. "The appalling truth remains that a considerable percentage fail to report at all—they are lost on the way."

"Any investigation that may be made should be thorough. Attention should be focussed on the individual cases of girls who are missing. Their names can be known."

He indicated his own shelves where a pile of letters told of girls who had failed to put in an appearance, citing each by name.

Remembrance Fondly Kept

To some of Peterborough's pioneer families, there has recently been erected on the Colonel Haultain lot in Little Lake Cemetery a beautiful Celtic cross, which has been very much admired, and on the Budden lot a handsome Latin cross. Older residents of this city will remember Mr. Budden as the manager of the Bank of Montreal about fifty years ago. Both these crosses are made of very fine blue gray granite, hammered, finished and lettered by the sand blast process which leaves the inscriptions very legible. These monuments have been cut and finished at the Couglin Monumental Works. This firm invites inspection of their plant and facilities for turning out first-class work.

FIRES DECREASE DURING OCTOBER

Total Loss in Province Is Also Down $652,049—Increase On Year.

During the month of October there were 21 less fires and a decrease in loss of $652,049 than for the corresponding month last year. The loss in insurance was decreased by $520,949, while the loss not covered by insurance was $131,100 less. The comparative loss for the first ten months of 1928 shows an increase in the number of fires by 1,079 with an increase in loss of $476,360. WEDDING BELLS

PANTER—CRANHAM.

A quiet wedding was solemnized yesterday at the parsonage of George Street United Church, when the pastor, the Rev. J. E. Todd, read the marriage service which united in the holy bonds of matrimony Elsie Cranham and Frederick Panter, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Panter of 623 Chamberlain Street. Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Clifton P. Saunders. Mr. and Mrs. Panter will live on Monaghan Road.

McGILLEN—KABLE.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at eight o'clock this morning at St. Peter's Cathedral, when Rose Caroline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Kable of Kitchener, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Leo Peter McGillen, eldest son of Mrs. K. McGillen of this city, and the late Peter McGillen. Rev. P. Butler of Cobourg, solemnized the nuptial mass. The wedding music was played by Miss L. Hurley.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. W. D. Thomas, wore a lovely gown of shell ping georgette trimmed with rhinestones, a large picture hat of black velvet, black satin slippers, and shell-pink hose. Her bouquet was of Ophelia roses and maidenhair fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Marguerite Thomas, cousin of the bride was charming in shell-pin transparent velvet and georgette, with hat to match, black slippers and pink silk hose. She carried a bouquet of Columbia roses.

Mr. James McCormack acted as best man.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Thamas, Thomas Street, where decorations were carried out in pink and white, the bride's cak centering the table. Twenty-five guests were present.

Mr. McGillen and his bride left on the noon train for Toronto, en route to Kitchener, where a reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents. On their return, they will live in the city.

The bride travelled in a dress of brown crepe, with brown muskrat coat, brown felt hat and shoes, hose, purse and gloves to match.

ORGANIST PLANS UNIQUE RECITAL

Short Musical Service to be Held in St. John's Church Next Sunday Evening.

An interesting demonstration of a type of music that was generally used in the churches of many centuries past, and that came into strong popularity during the sixteenth century, will be given in St. John' Church on Sunday evening next, when the organist and choir master, F. G. Mann, A. Mus., has arranged a short musical recital to follow the main service of the evening.

The "Faux Bourdon" was the old name given to this sort of church music, and it demonstrates the placing of the Plain Song in the tenor voice with free melodies for the soprano, the alto and the bass sections placed against it. It is written in strict contrapuntal style.

On Sunday evening, with other musical numbers to be given during the brief recital, two choirs will give a demonstration of this old-fashioned music that is rapidly gaining popularity throughout the world at the present time. The Boys' Choir will sing the Plain Song and the large choir will provide the "Faux Bourdon" music.

Mr. Mann has taken the selection, which is entitled "Rector potens, verax Deus," and commences with the line: "O God of truth, O Lord of might," from a book given him by A. Stevenson, and formerly the property of the late Canon Beck. It is a book of Plain Song published in England in 1852, and has the melodies written in Latin along with the English translation. The manner of printing music in old days is interestingly illustrated in this old book. There are no bar signs at all, and the note signs, minus tails, look like little black cubes. The quarter notes resemble diamond signs and the clef signs look extremely odd to modern eyes.

A SPECIAL PIANO FOR RADIO.

A "radio piano," designed to eliminate the twang of vibrating wires in radio reception by transmitting only the pure tone when the keys are struck before the broadcasting microphone, has been designed by an inventor in Toulouse France. He explains that ordinarily the sound of vibrating wires in the instrument is lost to the year when a piano is played but that the delicate broadcasting apparatus catches and magnifies such sounds marring the effect of the music. His invention reports Popular Science Monthly is said to deaden this sound completely.

TELFORD CASE BEING HEARD

Harold Telford Is Being Sued For $500 By Harold Ephgrave.

COUNTER-CLAIM ENTERED.

Two cases lasted all day in County Court before Judge O'Connor, of Cobourg, yesterday and will be continued this afternoon. The cases arise out of a motor accident that occurred on the Chemong road about forty feet south of the Fifth Concession on July 29. Harold Telford had driven his car, containing himself and his wife, down the concession road and had turned onto the Chemong road. T. C. Ephgrave's car, driven by his son Harold and containing two others in the front seat and three in the rear seat, was proceeding north on the Chemong road. The two cars crashed near the intersection of the roads.

Mr. Ephgrave's contention is that he was driving at the rate of 25 miles an hour and on his right side of the road. Telford claims that he was only going at ten miles an hour, and Ephgrave corroborates this statement. Evidence brought out the fact that marks on the road showed that Ephgrave's car had skidded seventy-five feet after the impact, indicating, it is contended, that he was going at a rate of speed at least thirty-five miles an hour.

Ephgrave is suing Telford for $500 and Telford has entered a counter-claim for $500.

Mrs. Telford was thrown against the wind-shield by the impact and received a severe cut on her forehead that is still quite apparent. Since the accident, it is claimed that she has been losing weight. Mrs. Telford is suing Ephgrave for $2,000 damages.

J. A. O'Brien is appearing for Mr. and Mrs. Telford and V. J. McElderry, K.C., is appearing for Ephgrave.

The case is continuing this afternoon.

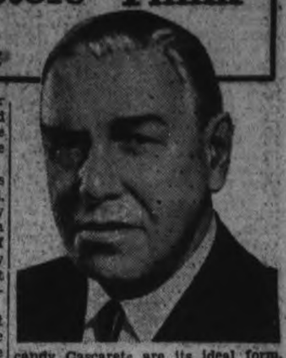
What Doctors Think of the Laxative Habit



In all history, no Indian was ever known to have constipation. Nor need YOU. He chewed the bark of a tree called cascara. To-day, we have the candy Cascaret.

Cascarizing the bowels never forms a laxative habit. If already formed, an occasional Cascaret will usually break the habit. For cascara strengthens the muscular walls of the bowels, and their need of any aid at all grows constantly less. What other cathartic has this characteristic? The writer knows of none.

An evacuation brought gently about by cascara will, nine times in ten, be followed by full functioning of the bowels on the morrow—and for days after. For there is no REACTION as with sickening salts, or any of the man-made purgatives that go through one's system like a bullet.

Physicians tell us cascara is the ideal laxative—and the tongue tells us candy Cascarets are its ideal form. At least a million people know this; what a pity there are any who don't! Especially parents; because children love to take a Cascaret. After which, for days on end, the bowels will be seen to work of their own accord.

The only habit from cascara is that of regularity! Cascarets tone and train the bowels. But at the first sign of returning sluggishness another Cascaret is as effective as the first.

There isn't a druggist who hasn't Cascarets, so WHY experiment with laxatives?

They Work While You Sleep!

Her Monthly Love Letter

The first day of the month, and every month comes this love letter to her. For over two years now she has been receiving it, and it will come with the same regularity as long as she may live.

It was a thoughtful, loving husband and father who made this arrangement. His love letters really come from Beyond to the little family, for by a provision made years before he died, The London Life was to send his wife $100.00 a month as long as she should live.

A more beautiful thing was never arranged. Both wife and daughter are guaranteed the necessities of life. The home is preserved; the mother's love and care is extended to her little daughter; the child is assured of proper surroundings, a good schooling, and every opportunity in life.

And how easily it was arranged—how simple the doing of a deed with such far-reaching effects. An annual deposit equal to $5.80 per week in a London Life Monthly Income Jubilee Policy taken when he was 30, accomplished it all.

ANNUAL BAZAAR IS BIG SUCCESS

BOOTHS ATTRACTIVE

OMEMEE, Nov. 28.—An extremely succesful supper and annual bazaar was held on Thursday afternoon in the basement of Trinity United church, under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society. More than one hundred and sixty were in attendance for the supper which was served by several young ladies from a table beautifully decorated with bronze, yellow and pink 'mums and bearing candles to match in pretty candlesticks. The ladies in charge of the supper arrangements were: Mrs. C. Ivory, Mrs. W. Earle, Mrs. G. Haygarth, Mrs. W. Best, Mrs. G. Griffin, Mrs. R. Possit, Mrs. F. G. Sandy and Mrs. I. H. Pee. Mrs. J. T. E. Blanchard and Mrs. R. Lamb acted as treasurers.

Promptly at four o'clock the pastor, Rev. J. T. E. Blanchard opened the bazaar and the sale of work commenced. From a prettily decorated booth, in charge of Mrs. E. Bradburn and Mrs. W. Henderson, a splendid assortment of useful and fancy articles for dining room use were on display. Mrs. J. Bushnell and Miss N. Rutherford had charge of the kitchen booth, where, along with fancy aprons, tea towels and other articles the knitting attracted thrifty buyers.

Made Attractive.

The baby booth was made attractive with Christmas decorations and from Misses Madeleine Gray and Lillian Race could be purchased almost everything which is necessary for a baby's wardrobe, along with dainty wool dolls and other novelties.

The candy booth which contained all kinds of home-made goodies looked very tempting and the sale ladies, Mrs. H. Laidley and Miss Eva Race had no trouble in disposing of their sweets.

Right next door, was the country store, in charge of Mrs. J. Shield and Miss L. Parsons. This booth looked very refreshing with its splendid array of home cooking, fowl, vegetables, cream, eggs, etc., which was quickly disposed of.

The 5, 10 and 15 cent store did a ready business and was in charge of Mrs. J. Widdis, Mrs. C. L. Morcombe and Mrs. Overholt.

The bedroom booth, which was by itself, had a color scheme all its own. Mauve and yellow crepe paper was woven together to form lattice work with the same colors shading the lights. Mrs. C. Cornell and Mrs. W. Moncrief were the efficient saleladies.

The proceeds of the evening amounted to more than one hundred and sixty-five dollars and with a quantity of goods yet unsold it is expected that this amount will be increased.

SUGGESTS OTTAWA FOR NAVAL PARLEY

participation in interparliamentary conferences both here and in Europe, I am impelled to suggest a joint meeting of the Committee on Naval Affairs of the United States House of Representatives and a select committee of members of Parliament, for the purpose of friendly discussion and the hearing of testimony in connection with applying the principle of equality in sea power between Great Britain and the United States on all ships of war not already covered by the Washington Treaty.

To Be Held in Canada.

"Meetings to take place, preferably in Canada, after March 4, 1929, and each committee to report with recommendations to its respective Government, just as may now be done annually by the various groups of the Interparliamentary Union.

"Where there is so much genuine regret among the people of England and America over the failure of the last Geneva Naval Limitation Conference, surely some way should be found for a meeting before 1931, when the five leading naval powers will assemble at Washington. I will respect your personal desires in connection with these suggestions."

In a statement issued in connection with his cablegram, Mr. Britten cited his authority for the proposed meeting as Section 8 of the Constitution, providing "that Congress shall make rules for the Government and regulation of the land and naval forces, and that it shall provide and maintain a navy for the common defence and general welfare of the United States." Members of his committee, he added, all belong to the Interparliamentary Union.

NO SECOND GRADE CHEESE

boxes of cheese would be sold, valued at six million dollars. Mr. Irwin referred next to the changed conditions and the introduction of the compulsory grading system. The troubles are now traced to their origin, and the responsibility has been very largely placed on the makers. He was pleased to mention that there were 52 men in Central Ontario who would have 100 per cent. this year. He had another matter to call attention to. He had been one of the judges at the recent Royal Fair. Going through the cheese it made him feel a little lonesome to find only six exhibitors from Eastern Ontario. Naturally, Western Ontario carried off the prizes. They in Central Ontario, prided themselves on putting up the best grade. Western Ontario was not making any better cheese. "We are not getting our cheese on exhibit," said Mr. Irwin. He further hoped that the boards would take interest and assist the makers to compete.

James Cook, buyer, also referred to attendance at the recent Winter Fair and his failing to see any cheese from this district, save Yarker and Queensboro. After urging all to work together, and offering his own assistance, he concluded: "Let us make a clean up."

W. McBain, in proposing the toast to "The Guests," referred to the makers as a band who have in their keeping the greatest industry in the district.

George S. White and ex-reeve Walter Whytock, replied, the latter mentioning that he had doubled his cheese sales in the last two years.

Two songs were then sung by Richard Wellman, bringing him much applause.

George West proposed the toast to "The Ladies," mentioning that we could live without cheese, but not without the ladies. After mentioning the large part they play in the affairs of the country he mentioned what had been done by them in Madoc in erecting their War Memorial.

Able replies were made by Mesdames McCaffrey and Henderson.

Prizes Awarded.

Prizes were then awarded to the highest scoring cheese of the season 1928 according to graders' reports. In many cases donors of prizes were present and awarded the same.

Prizes were as follows:

Madoc District Cheesemaker' Association:

1st, Marmora, John Finnegan, Sr.
2nd, Eldorado, Alex. Johnston.
3rd, Madoc, Zara Bristol.
4th Queensboro, V. Spencer.

2nd, Silver Leaf, John Finnegan, Jr.
3rd, Cook's, Frank Nathan.
4th, Riverside, George Cotton.

1st, Eldorado, Alex. Johnston.

4th, Alexander, H. Henderson.

Cheese Board.

1st, Eldorado, Alex. Johnston.
2nd, Madoc, Zara Bristol.
3rd, Queensboro, V. Spencer.

Two songs by J. Gillespie were followed by a speech by District Representative Wilson. The chairman then called upon James Irwin to conduct the election of officers for 1929, which resulted as follows:

President, W. E. Brennan (re-elected); Vice-President, L. Wyatt; Secretary-Treasurer, H. Henderson; Directors, J. Finnegan; Z. Bristol, V. Spencer.

After a short speech by the president, on motion of C. Linn, seconded by J. Irwin, a vote of thanks was accorded the Madoc District Cheese Makers' Association.

District Churches

Fenella United.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

FENELLA, November 28. — C. W. Foster of Toronto, took charge of the service in the Fenella United Church on Sunday morning, and delivered an excellent address. He took his text from Matthew xxii:37: "Jesus said unto him, thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy mind," and added to it that other great commandment, "And thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Speaking of the necessity for each one of us to live a Christian life, he said, "It means a high purpose of citizenship; it is a barrier against decay." In comparing the religions of Buddhism and Confucianism with the Christian religion, he told how the disciples of Confucius, offered advice to and rebuked the sinner he found in the muddy pit. The follower of Buddha offered his sympathy to the sinner, and he too passed on, but Jesus passing along and finding the fallen one, went down into the pit, helped the sinner to free himself of the slime, and lifting him out sent him on his way rejoicing.

He quoted Bishop Lewis and Martin Luther, as outstanding martyrs or examples of Christianity. Bishop Lewis, as he moutned the scaffold, said: "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." Mr. Foster emphasized the great need of a Christian brotherhood, "And He made us of one blood, all nations to dwell together in the world," and then "to love thy neighbor as thyself," meaning not only to help those around and about us, but to never miss the opportunity of doing the kindly act, speaking the kindly word. He concluded with "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all they soul, and with all thy mind, and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

ALL SAINTS' CHOIR ELECTS OFFICERS

Frank C. Roberts Will Head Organization for Coming Year.

Frank C. Roberts was elected president annual meeting held after choir practice, on Thursday evening last. Other officers elected for the coming year were J. Raybould, vice president; J. Nicholson, secretary; E. Bramson, assistant secretary; Miss Jessie Maconomy, treasurer; J. Packman, librarian; W. Boddy, Junior, assistant librarian; Miss I. Howarth, social convenor, and Mrs. Gibson, robes mistress.

The reports of sub-committees showed a very successful year just concluded and the secretary, Mrs. K. Jarvis, reviewed the choir's activities, which included participation in several notable events, such as the unveiling of the tablet in the Armouries to the 21st Battalion boys who died in the Great War, singing the anthem "O Valiant Hearts," and leading the singing at the Armistice Day service at the Capitol Theatre and joining in harvest festival services at Norwood and Warsaw.

The attendance of members has been very good, the average having been 85 per cent during the year. The choir membership totals 52.

The treasurer, Miss Maconomy, reported a substantial balance in the bank, and Miss I. Howarth, social convenor, gave an interesting report of the social activities of the choir. The reports of the librarian, J. Howward and of the robe mistress, Mrs. Runnett, were also quite satisfactory.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to retiring officers for their faithful services, and similar expressions of gratitude were voiced for the loyal and energetic work done by G. Chandler, choirmaster, and Mrs. W. A. Logan, organist.

Old Time Torture No Worse Than

Mr. McArthur's experience with inflamed kidneys.

Gin Pills brought relief

As he himself puts it, "I suffered for 6 months with kidney trouble. Doctors said I would have to go to a hospital before I could go back to my heavy work in the machine shops." Fortunately, at this critical time, his druggist suggested Gin Pills. What a boon! "After taking 3 boxes," Mr. McArthur concludes gratefully, "I had no more trouble."

Gin Pills have relieved countless cases of acute kidney condition similar to this. Before serious trouble can develop, take this reliable remedy—at the first sign of bad backache, stubborn headaches, brick dust in urine, swollen joints, dizziness, a burning sensation attendant on scanty or too frequent urination. MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

DEAR MARION,

If I may I would like to keep both of my pen names. Too many of my friends know the one I have used before and I quite often enjoy people's opinion of my letters when they don't know I am the writer.

Just now I am trying to think of a nice word that will imply all the nasty thoughts I have when I read some of the jokes printed about women's stupidity in business. If some men were forbidden to tell these sort of jokes then they wouldn't have a thing to say. I enjoy a joke even on myself if it is within reason. Here is the one that started all this fury.

A young woman went into a bank and said she wished to open an account. They asked how much she wished to deposit and she said, "Oh, I don't want to deposit anything, I want a charge account, same as I have in other places.

Now I don't see anything funny about that, any child of public school knows better than that. As you once said something like this: 'Man's sense of humour is sometimes rather queer, even dull.' I heartily agree with you. The more I say on this subject the more nasty things I can think to say so if I don't close now my friends may recognize me, new name and all.

Yours truly,

Ella May."

Surely, "Ella May," you haven't been long enough married to be cynical? The jokes about "women's stupidity" are the product of such men as "Thinker." There's more intellectual ability shown in one paragraph of your letter than there would be in a bushel of "Thinker's" letters. I think that between the neighbors we can give him a run for his money that may convince him we have both brains and wit—and can use them!

* * *

"Dear Marion:

Will you kindly send me the four page folder on suggestions for making Christmas gifts at home.

I find your column and the letters all very interesting and helpful. I am enclosing some recipes which may appeal to some of the neighbors.

Thanking you in advance, I am,

Sincerely yours,

R. M."

Thanks very much for the recipes, R. M. I am glad to be able to send the helps.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

I enjoy reading your page and find it a great help.

I saw on your page where some neighbor was asking how she could clean babies' soft kid moccasins. I must have missed the answer and would be very much pleased if you would repeat it.

I am sending you a couple of my recipes.

Sincerely,

Mrs. J. S."

Keene.

Mrs. G. T., of Warkworth, in answer to the SOS said she used gasoline, bon ami, and a commercial liquid known as Pearl White, which she got at a drug store, for her baby's shoes.

Thank you very much for the recipes, which I know will be appreciated. That should be a really delicious Christmas cake.

"Dear Marion:

I am sending in the coupon for helps, so I must tell you how much I enjoy your page.

It certainly is interesting as well as helpful. I have tried a number of recipes and found them real good.

It certainly tends to broaden one's mind to read the different opinions each writer has.

I will close, now, hoping to be able to send you some hints later on.

Sincerely,

Goldy."

I'll be looking for those promised hints, "Goldy"! It's the kindness of the neighbors in this way that makes the page worthwhile, and we must expect every neighbor to do her share! Let's hear from you soon again.

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion,

I use the cotton sugar sacks, which I buy from my grocer, in many ways that may be advantageous to other neighbors, and I hope you won't mind if I pass on the ideas. I rip open the sacks and wash the sugar out of them, and they make the nicest, softest, dish-drying towels I have ever used. I use them, too, for sash curtains in the kitchen and bathroom, by pulling threads to make them even and facing them with pretty print or gingham. They make really attractive curtains, but you must be sure to use something washable for the border. I also make bodice tops for skirts for my daughter and myself out of the sugar sacks. They are light in weight, but strong.

Yours truly,

Mrs. W. L. C."

THANKSGIVING MANNERS

By JANE OSBORN

Tom Mason had worked and prospered in the big city for seven years. He considered himself as much a New Yorker as any of his associates and was thoroughly acclimated save in one respect. He couldn't endure to travel in the subway because, in order to get into the trains at all at rush hours, he had to push his way ahead of girls and women. Rather than yield a single point of his code of chivalry, he had stood one night for a half hour gallantly stepping back for every woman who came crowding near him to board a train. Finally he had hurried away in disgust and had traveled an hour by surface car to his destination. For years now he had had a small bachelor's apartment within easy walking distance of his office and, never having married, he consoled himself that at least he didn't have to use the subway. Men who married apparently always found more spacious apartments uptown or in Brooklyn or joined the army of commuters to New Jersey or Long Island, where the crowds at closing time were just as bad.

Then came a Wednesday afternoon before Thanksgiving. By taking a six o'clock railroad train south he could make a connection at midnight with a train that, sometime around dawn on Thanksgiving day, would bring him to the out-of-the-way village nestling among Southern hills which, faithful to old traditions, he called home. If he missed that six o'clock train he couldn't hope to get home for Thanksgiving dinner.

Tom was delayed on important business in his office, took a taxi for the five blocks to his Washington Square apartment to get his suit case and found that the only way he could hope to catch his train from the Grand Central Station was via the hated subway. And even then there would be little time to spare.

Crowds, hordes of people, were pouring into the subway station. With a firm grip on his suitcase, Tom forged forward with the horde. A girl headed for the gates seemed to stand between him and his chance of getting the train and Tom brushed rudely by her—so rudely that as he did so he heard a little gasp and a surprised "Of all things!" There was something in the softness of the voice—just a suggestion of a drawl—that set his conscience pricking. It was as if his own mother has gently reproved him. Tom looked back, saw the girl clearly and saw that at another entrance of the same train she was bravely trying to gain admission. She, too, carried a suitcase.

The satisfaction of having caught his train was marred by Tom's continued self-reproof. Then, looking up as a porter escorted a passenger to the section just opposite his, he saw a face that was familiar and heard a voice saying, "Thank you," to the porter, that it seemed to him he had heard a hundred times before.

For just a minute Tom racked his brain and then he knew it was the girl he had jostled in the subway. Tom knew that she recognized him. Now at least she could see that he had had to catch a train, but then so had she and he had very nearly prevented her from doing so.

"I don't believe you recognized me," she said, catching up to him in the vestibule of the train on the way to the diner. "You're Tom Mason—and 'Im Caroline Dare. I used to spend my summers in Hastings when I was a little girl and you used to be home from college. Once you took me out in your car. I was only about ten and I don't believe I'd ever had such a good time."

So Tom asked for the privilege of taking Caroline to dinner—an invitation which she accepted. Caroline was working in the city—just for a lark—and now she was going back for a four days' Thanksgiving holiday to join her family at Hastings. She hadn't been there for ever so long, but it was the place in all the world that seemed most like home to her.

"People from that part of the country," she explained to Tom, "always seem so much more considerate and well bred than the people you meet in the cities."

Tom told Caroline how delighted he was that they might go on their journey together and made her promise that she would do a bit of exploring around about the mountain slopes near Hastings with him the day after Thanksgiving.

"I'd know you were from Hastings anywhere I met you," she said, with a mixture of shyness and temerity that Tom found delightful. "Do you know, while I was hurrying to catch this train a man almost knocked me down, and he never stopped to beg my pardon—just rushed on to catch his train. Couldn't imagine a man from Hastings doing a thing like that, could you?"

"Did you have a chance to see what he looked like?" asked Tom eagerly.

"No, I was too much confused trying not to lose my balance. Why did you want to know?"

"Because a man that treats a lady like that deserves a reproof. I'd count it a privilege if I might give it to him for you. Personally I seldom use the subways. When I marry I suppose I'll have to—every one goes up town or to Brooklyn unless they commute—"

"I'd much prefer one of the reclaimed old residential sections downtown," said Caroline. And because of that remark Tom Mason told his wife a few months later about the time he had almost knocked her over in the subway.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

I have received several letters from neighbors approving this new column, and one or two have given ideas for extractes to be printed here. Thank you all.

I'm glad "Mariana" suggested a column such as this, because I am thoroughly enjoying the business of digging up poems and prose pieces to print, and typing them out. I hope everyone enjoys reading them. Just as "Mariana" said, if one reads this column every day, one will have obtained a very nice education by the end of twelve months. Now, a lot more of you neighbors, let's have your ideas.

NOVEMBER 28, 1928.

To-day is the anniversary of the birth in London, in 1757, of William Blake, artist and poet. He was a child-like mystic, who believed himself inspired by spirits. Some of his works include: "Songs of Innocence," "Prophetic Books," "Songs of Experience," and "Marriage of Heaven and Hell." He died August 12, 1827. The poem I am printing to-day is "The Tiger."

Tiger, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?

In what distant deeps or skies
Burnt the fire of thine eyes?
On what wings dare he aspire?
What the hand dare seize the fire?

And what shoulder and what art
Could twist the sinews of thy heart?
And, when thy heart began to beat,
What dread hand and what dread feet?

What the hammer? what the chain?
In what furnace was thy brain?
What the anvil? what dread grasp
Dare its deadly terrors clasp?

When the stars threw down their spears
And watered heaven with their tears,
Did He smile His work to see?
Did He who made the lamb make thee?

Tiger, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Dare frame thy fearful symmetry?

FRENCH HEEL IS ATTACKED

SELF-TORTURE.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP).—French heels worn by western women today are almost on a par with the custom of bandaging feet adopted by Chinese women of a generation ago, according to Miss Bernice Chu, who has come from Peking to study public health nursing systems on the western hemisphere, and even a generation ago the Chinese women thought that American and European ladies inflicted great self-torture when they wore corsets.

Interviewed locally Miss Chu said: "It is cruel and foolish to pierce the ears to put in jewels for the sake of beauty, and it is just the same with these French heels. Only because of an instinctive idea of beauty they wear those heels which throw the body forward and gradually deform the pelvis. Chinese women do not wear such heels, and they do not use as many things on their face. College girls in China do not use powder and rouge to keep their faces pretty, only those with nothing else to do but live at home and keep beautiful use as many things as the American women do."

Thoroughly modern in her professional knowledge, in her speech and study, Miss Chu retains many of the customs of her country. Beneath her tailored chinchilla coat she wears a native Chinese costume, with a long overblouse of silk with wide kimono sleeves and a skirt of figured black velvet. Her hair is not bobbed, but coiled tightly over her ears. She wears a bang or "liu Hae," as the short hair over the forehead is called. When she returns to Peking Miss Chu will spend all her time directing training in health among the children in the school, for she believes that is the best way to teach a nation.

The young Chinese girl has come from the most westerly province of her country, Szechurin, near Thibet, where western civilisation and culture has not made a strong foothold. From there she went to school in Peking, on a government scholarship. On graduation from the Peking Union Medical College, she was awarded a Rockefeller Fellowship to study public health nursing methods abroad. Miss Chu spent a year in England, at Bedford College, and then went on to the United States, where she nursed for two months in East Harlem, New York. Toronto is one point of study and then she proceeds to Chicago, and throughout the west before leaving again for China to take the directorship of public health nursing in Peking.

Miss Chu makes little comparison between the women of the countries she has visited. Their habits are different, but their work is much the same. She is "very satisfied" with the manner in which the new government in China has carried on the public health work in Peking. Strangely enough the centre of the manufacture of serums and vaccines in Peking is the Temple of Heaven.

Crepe de chine is proving a popular fabric for evening slippers. An innovation is to have the slippers the color of one's gown, with one's initials worked in brilliants into the back of the heels.

Woman Lays Stone For a New School

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP).—Marking an important stride in the advancement of a modern type of education was the ceremony of laying a corner-stone for the new Junior Vocational school for boys on the site of the old Jarvis Street Collegiate. The stone was laid by Trustee Edith I. Groves, to whose pioneer work in the interest of this type of education generous tribute was paid by other speakers.

District Churches

MADOC CHURCHES.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, Nov. 28.—In Trinity United Church, morning worship was at eleven o'clock on Sunday, and the pastor took as his subject, "What is the Church For?" and using three texts, "Come unto Me," "Abide in Me" and "Go ye into all the world." Rev. G. W. Rivers dealt with these as illustrated in the work of the United Church in Canada in its several departments: The department of religious education stressing its importance, as there are nearly one million young people in our Sunday Schools and young people's societies; the department of evangelism and social service, which deals with many important phases of the work as special services in the church, rescue work and many other branches; the department for missionary and maintenance work, familiar to most of us, but the preacher stressed its importance with much emphasis on the work, both of home and foreign missions.

The organist was Miss Minnie Ferguson, and a beautiful solo was given by Mrs. C. I. Ross, who sang, "Is the Saviour Who Loves You Yours?"

Evening Service

In the evening, the message given by Rev. Mr. Rivers was from the theme, "The Two Sons," and the text was, "Son, go work to-day in my vineyard."

St. Peter's Church.

In St. Peter's Church the morning service was held at the usual hour. Rev. T. G. Marshall took as his theme, "Work with a Will." Rev. Mr. Duncan took charge of the public worship in the evening, this being prefaced by a hearty song service.

Musterole usually gives prompt relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

YOUR HEALTH

TOMATOES

Tomatoes are an acid fruit of the tomato bush, which, along with potatoes and tobacco, is related to the nightshade family. When first introduced to Europe, tomatoes were known as the "love apple" because it was considered that one could commit suicide by eating them. They were only used for ornamental purposes.

Tomatoes grow best in warm climates, the plant being a native of the New World, having been cultivated in Mexico and South America centuries before the Spanish Conquest. Although at one time considered unfit to eat, tomatoes are now esteemed as one of our most valuable protective foods against disease. An analysis of the fruit shows that it is very alkaline-forming and is rich in potassium, calcium, magnesium, iron, chlorin, and vitamins A, B, and C. Tomatoes are one of the foods that can be canned and yet retain their vitamin value.

Since tomatoes contain large quantities of malic and citric acids, they should not be eaten with any starchy foods, but they do make good combinations with either meat, fish, or non-starchy vegetables. The organic acids do not increase the acidity of the body since they are oxidized by the liver and release the basic salts which make the blood more alkaline.

People with rheumatism or gout sometimes believe that they should not eat tomatoes, but this is a mistake. Tomatoes are very good foods to use in these diseases, but of course, only in the right combinations.

The United States now uses the most tomatoes per capita, with Italy following a close second. In Canada and Northern Europe most of the tomatoes consumed are of the canned variety. Canned tomatoes are practically as wholesome as when fresh and may be used to replace the raw in salads and cooking.

BAKED TOMATOES

Wash six medium-sized tomatoes and cut a slice from the stem end of each. Remove pulp carefully, drain, and mix with a half cup of Melba toast crumbs, a half cup of minced mushrooms, either canned or fresh, two tablespoons of chopped ripe olives, and two tablespoons of minced ham. Fill tomatoes and bake for about thirty minutes in a pan which has been placed in a larger pan containing hot water to a depth of an inch or more. Serve hot with a lump of butter and a little chopped parsley on each tomato.

STUFFED TOMATO SALAD

Peel and remove the centers from large firm tomatoes. If the tomatoes are plunged into boiling water and allowed to remain for about one minute the skins will slip off very easily. Drain the scooped out portion and mix with two parts of cottage cheese, one part minced ripe olives and a little chopped parsley. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves with slices of cold boiled beets.

CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP

Cut six or eight medium sized tomatoes into small pieces and cook until tender, adding a small amount of honey—about a teaspoonful. When tomatoes are soft enough, press through colander. Have ready in another pan about two cupfuls of very hot thin cream. Add this hot cream to the tomato pulp, which has been re-heated, stirring very rapidly and the mixture will not curdle. Continue stirring for a few minutes and when ready to serve, season with a little celery, salt and a lump of butter. If desired, thin strips of Melba toast may be served with the soup.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Children Like Ice Cream.

Question: "My mother has put me on a fruit diet which she learned was good for children from your articles in the paper. At present I am on one and I wish that in the future you would mention that ice cream diet is just as good, so my mother would try it."

Answer: You just keep on watching my weekly menus which are published in this column every Friday, and you will learn how to use ice cream properly. Show these menus to your mother and you will be sure to get ice cream at least once a week. Ice cream is one of our best foods, but you would soon tire of it as a steady diet.

Falling Hair.

Question: M. S. E. asks: "Would you give the treatment for falling hair? I am eighteen years old and have just recovered from scarlet fever. Do you think this is the cause?"

Answer: Undoubtedly the fever you have just had is responsible for the loss of hair which you have at the present time. Keep your hair cut short and bathe the head daily in cold water or treat the scalp by applying ice for several minutes each day. This will help re-establish circulation of blood to the scalp, but you must expect to lose considerable hair before the new, strong hair grows in.

Goitre.

Question: Mrs. A. M. asks (1) "How can a goitre be cured? Mine isn't very noticeable and doesn't bother me much, but I am afraid it will later on in life. (2) I have backache all the time—seems to be in my spine. This seems to affect my brain, as I can't think vast enough."

Answer: (1) The different forms of goitre can be cured by strict diet. I will be glad to send you instructions if you will only send me your request, with a large, stamped self-addressed envelope. (2) I would advise you to have an examination by some physician who understands manipulative treatment of the spine. He will doubtless be able to tell you what is causing your trouble.

About thirty members of the local I.O.O.F. journeyed to Kingston yesterday to put on the degree work in the lodge there.

There have been several rumors about lately that Magistrate G. A. Payne had resigned office. For some time, Magistrate Payne has not been in the best of health and he has been granted three months leave of absence from his duties. Interviewed this afternoon, Magistrate Payne definitely denied all rumors regarding his resignation.

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

PAINFUL JOINTS

If you are having pain and swelling in the joints you are not perhaps particular whether it is called rheumatism or arthritis. All you want is relief from this pain and swelling.

Your doctor will tell you that in every case of arthritis or rheumatism there must be some part or joint in the body where poison is being manufactured, and it is this poison that gets into the joints and causes the trouble.

About twenty years ago it was thought that most cases of joint infection were due to a sore throat or bad tonsils.

And in a great many cases there was a history of a sore throat just a little previous to the joint infection.

Then it was found that infected teeth were responsible for a great many cases, and so teeth and tonsils were given the credit, or discredit, for the joint conditions.

Later it was found that pyorrhoea, or pus about the gums, was another cause.

Gradually other sources of infection were found, so that now it is thought that anywhere in the body a focus, or place of infection, may be found, whose product may cause rheumatism.

Dr. S. Brockover analyzed 119 cases of rheumatism or arthritis and found that about 85 per cent. of all these cases were due to infections of throat, teeth, and gums.

Now in the light of these figures it does seem strange that sufferers with these painful joints will go along day after day satisfied to use some form of pill, powder, or liquid medicine that will relieve the pain.

No one can blame them for wanting to be relieved of the pain, but when the cause has been pointed out to them by their doctor as being due to infected teeth or tonsils, and they would sooner use a pain killer than have teeth or tonsils removed, you wonder at their lack of wisdom or common sense.

Just one more point for them to think about.

Most cases of heart disease can now be definitely traced to rheumatism or arthritis, and rheumatism or arthritis is generally due to the infections mentioned above.

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

"Roast Beef," as it is prepared in most modern kitchens, is really not roast beef at all, but baked beef. Strictly speaking, roasting applies to the process of cooking food in the open before or beneath a fire. Formerly this was a favorite way of cooking joints and fowl, which were run through by a spit and turned about from time to time so that all sides might be cooked fairly evenly. Often there was a dripping pan under the spit so that the juices might be caught and used for basting as the meat cooked.

Baking applies to the process of cooking food in a closed oven, so what we call roast lamb, roast beef, roast chicken, etc., are really baked, not roasted.

Cookery experts now draw a distinction between frying and sauteing. Frying is done in hot, deep fat and sauteing is done in a so-called frying pan with just a little fat. A generation ago in this country the former process was usually known as French frying while foods were spoken of as "fried" that experts now would call sauteed. "Pan broiling" is sometimes used to indicate sauteing on a hot frying pan with only enough grease to keep the food from sticking.

The term braising is usually used to indicate the process by which food—usually meat—is first browned thoroughly in frying pan or kettle and is then cooked slowly in a closely covered dish. Thus what many housewives call "pot roast of beef" is in reality the same thing as braised beef.

There is a distinction between simmering and ordinary boiling which every housewife and cook should understand. With boiling sufficient heat is usually used to keep the water at boiling point and to make sure of active boiling. With simmering less heat is used so that while the boiling point is maintained most of the time the boiling is much less active. Stews are tenderer and of better flavor if simmered.

Because it is so quick, so safe and so sure in ending digestive troubles, millions rely on "Pape's Diapepsin." "Pape's Diapepsin" is unequalled as an indigestion remedy and dietary corrective, yet it costs only 60 cents a package at all druggists.

If your stomach ever torments you get "Pape's Diapepsin" at once and recapture the pleasure of care-free, painless digestion. You may have felt that nothing can help your particular difficulty, but so have others to whom this remedy proved a pleasant surprise. This experiment with diapepsin may do as much for you.

Too Much ACID

Many people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Please do that—for your own sake—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any druggists.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

The woolen mitten shown at top left has an intricate design in purple, red and yellow. The thumb and cuffs are of solid purple. The mitten at the right is of green with a red cuff and a green and red design on the back. Below, the long cuffed mitten is of white with a colorful border of yellow and two shades of red, with a short sports sock to match. Other colorful sports socks and a red, green and white mitten are shown below.

There are times in the life of every real woman when she simply must be light hearted and blithe whatever happens. Nothing short of real calamity can make her downcast. She's glad because she's glad and no spiteful remark that anyone can make will dampen her enthusiasm.

And so I think there are times in the course of the world's jog trot onward when women collectively feel light hearted. Women's hearts generally seem to be lighter, gloom goes, introspection and morbid sophistication go out of favor, and joyousness becomes the fashion. And when women generally are in a mood like that you may be sure that bright colors are in great demand.

I can remember well that as soon as the great war was over the prediction was made that women would wear bright colors as a manifestation of their relief. But such predictions were not realized—because, in spite of the relief women felt that the actual war was done with, the depression caused by the struggle was by no means entirely lifted. We have gone through a number of moods together since that time, but this mood of real post-war joyousness has been a long, long time in coming. Now at last women are willing to wear bright colors.

Sports clothes this season especially reflect the joyous mood of the time. There is nothing subtle or restrained or subdued about them. One gives a little gasp of surprise at first seeing the new mittens, gloves, socks and stockings that are chosen by women for skating, skiing and other snow and ice pastimes. Green, red, yellow and purple are brought together without intermediate blending and often the background of these colors is pure white, which only makes the colors seem more vivid and daring.

Maid Asks Mistress For Her Discharge

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP).—Dr. Glendinning of this city returning from a stay in England, was asked by a reporter what he thought of the dole system in that country: "Bad! Bad! Bad!" was the reply. And he cited a case where a maid had asked her mistress to "fire" her in order that she might draw the dole. When the mistress refused the maid had caused so much unpleasantness in the house that she had to be dismissed.

"Do you think there will be a Labor government as a result of the flapper vote?" asked the reporter "No," was the reply. "Labor has divided itself in this way that it has excluded Communists."

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

I AM writing this Whatnot more in sorrow than in anger. It is an answer to the letter from "Thinker" printed in Saturday's paper, a letter that surprised me greatly . . . and yet, why should one be surprised?

Almost the only pleasant thing "Thinker" says in his letter(and it is at the same time the most intelligent) is, "Lately, I have been a reader of your page."

Then he goes on to say that man built up the earth from a wild, rugged place to what we have now by the sweat of his brow and rack of his brain, and now we women live in luxury, ride in cars, or sit in our libraries revising some ancient book to fit our present day opinions.

When your immemorial ancestors were living in cave and tree-crotch, the woman asked no consideration and got no quarter; she had no need of either. She was so well able to bear the double burden of caring for herself and her progeny that in that function she was accounted a foe more terrible than any male of her kind.

There was no nonsense in those days about her being the weaker sex. But then she—the first specialist—began to specialize. She gave up gamboling in the airy leafage with her male, and started to make a home; she originated the idea of caring for the sick and the old; for their sakes she made rude coverings as shelter from the cold.

When the male fled to the forest to foregather with his boon companions, she stayed at home to brood over their dead.

"You claim the women of the older countries are backward. You have to admit that they are our ancestors—they built the world through their men," says my thinking correspondent. I not only admit it; I claim that women of all ages have built the world through their men.

"And now," continues "Thinker," "that his work of sweating is over the weaker body but nimble brain of women sit in the cushioned chair." It does not take a brain more nimble than mine, "Thinker," to see the fallacy of an argument that starts by admitting what it afterwards asserts is untrue—if woman built the world through the men she produced and nurtured and educated, how can woman be accused of being parasitical?

My correspondent takes issue with me on a recent Whatnot in which I quoted another correspondent who told of her husband's saving odds and ends. "Thinker" declares this saving is an indication of the ingenuity of the inventor who developed the world, and continues: "What sky scraper has woman built, what lift locks, what invention of car, engine, machine or anything can woman lay her hand on and say 'that's the sweat of my brow and worry of my brain'?"

Do you claim for one moment, "Thinker," that men thought of all the inventions; do you think for an instant that the general class of women reading this page is inferior in intellect to—you, for instance?

Let me tell you that if woman had been as self-satisfied throughout the ages as you are to-day (you say "quit your worry of more development and take advantage of what you have accomplished") not only would there have been no inventions, no cars, no steam engine, no sky scrapers—THERE WOULD BE NO CIVILIZATION!

Who was it kept the fire burning when that priceless secret had become known to mankind? And is not fire the great secret of all these things you boast, to forge your iron and steel,to make the steam that turns your engines.

Suppose woman had been satisfied to roam the forests as men did—ad still do—where would be your cities?

Behind every great act of man there was a woman—you, yourself, have admitted this, so we don't need to labor the point, only make it clear. Then to what does your argument amount?

Another thing which you have overlooked is the fact that under man's tyranny for countless centuries women had no property right, and it would have been impossible for a woman to claim the right to an invention of her brain and hands. How many inventions, do you suppose, were registered in men's names for this reason? What man would have seen the need for the hundreds of household appliances now considered essential? But I forgot; you have admitted that women "built the world through their men," so it is not necessary for me to argue the question further.

This last part of your letter is its crowning absurdity. You write: "Men, quit your worry of more development and in the future take advantage of what you have accomplished and not let our women jump in and take all the ease we have now accomplished." What do you wish to do, man? Go back to the days when woman was man's chattel, slave, plaything? Go back to the dead past when woman had no say in court, no redress for wrongs except through her husband?

Are you married? Throw out your washing machine, and let your wife wash clothes in the good old way! Keep a whip on the wall to use on her when she dares talk back to you! Censor her reading, dictate her friends and choose her clothes!

Or perhaps you believe in that fallacy that places woman on a pedestal, declaring "A king is always a king, and a woman always a woman." Just as a king cannot unbend, so a woman cannot use her intelligence without becoming unwomanly.

That is a lovely foolishness you men invented (oh,yes! you have invented some things like that!) away back in the immemorial past to keep women in the place that she first voluntarily made for herself in the interests of the race and then voluntarily acquiesced in the in erests of family peace.

The thing that troubles you (and I hope there ar not many in Peterborough like you) is that you are beginning to be afraid again. The age-old jealousy; the ancestral fear that some woman may someday know as much as you do, is poking its hea out of that undeveloped cerebral hemisphere where lie dormant the inhibitions and barbaric sensibilities of a dead past, and endeavouring to scare ou the common sense which you must have gathered from association with modern women.

You admit it in your closing paragraph, "Now, Marion, this is my first letter of this kind. I know it will do no good but it will surely, if the women read it, let them know man is not too busy o see what is being done." You're afraid of what is happening with this awakening of women; you're afraid, actually, that women will not read your letter. And you try to scare us by telling us "man is not too busy to see what is being done!" Fie on you!

We 1928 women of Peterborough don't scare so easily! I wonder that to all our other failings you did not add the lack of a sense of humor. Even that argument I could meet, because I was able (as I'm sure many more were) to laugh at your absurdities!

And just to close this session, I'll bet you a box of cigars against a box of chocolates (a good big one), that a dozen of my correspondents can write letters setting out the women's side of the controversy more intelligently, clearly, and effectively, than you have done the men's!

Send your letters anyhow, neighbors, and see if "Thinker" takes me up.

CUSTOMS OF UKRAINIAN FOLK DESCRIBED TO CANADIAN CLUB

Speaker Quotes and Interprets Many of the Folk Songs of Ukrainia.

STUDIED LANGUAGE.

Mrs. J. F. B. Livesay Demonstrated Lyrical Sweetness of Nation's Poetry.

"It is a dreadful thing when the marriage broker is invited to have a drink. Then he knows that his visit is in vain and that the father of the girl does not favor the suit of the young man he represents. While other marriage brokers may be boasting of their prowess and telling how they arranged a match for different clients, he must go home with a pumpkin, sign of his defeat, under his arm. He 'takes a pig's path home,' as they express it."

This was just one of the little vivid word pictures of customs and manners amongst the Ukrainian folk given by Mrs. J. F. B. Livesay of Toronto during the course of her address on "Ukrainians in Song and Story," to members of the Women's Canadian Club at their meeting, held yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of the Public Library.

Mrs. Livesay's informal, friendly talk was extremely interesting and merited the sincere appreciation of thanks which was tendered at its conclusion by Miss A. Lancaster, who took the chair for the meeting, in the absence of the president.

Quotes Folk Songs

She quoted many of the folk songs of Ukraina (this, by the way, is the proper method of spelling the word, according to Mrs. Livesay) and gave her own interpretations of their musical songs, which have more than a suggestion in them of the work of "Longfellow." There was a very vivid recollection of the "Hiawatha" verses in some of the little bits which describe various aspects of life among these people.

Reiteration appears to be a favorite mode of driving home an idea. In the little song of the lover who liked a girl and went to see her every day for a week, only to find her absent, and then triumphed on Sunday, he speaks over and over again of the "little rose," his name for the maiden, and again this practice is noted in the bit about "the song of the bird., the song of the bird," the repetition of words seeming to give an impression of singing music to the verses. In this little verse about the lover, for instance, is also afforded a glimpse of the sly humor of its composer. The swain goes daily to the house of his charmer, only to find the mischievous damsel absent from Monday to Saturday. But on Sunday, he finds her "sitting in her chair." Then he greets her kindly and leaves her with the intimation that this is the first time he has seen her, but it will be also his last visit. "First for you, last for me," are his parting words.

Studied Language

Mrs. Livesay has made a study of the Ukrainian language and has interpreted in her own fashion many of the folk songs of that country, with especial attention to the compositions of its famous poet, Taras Schevchenko. She read several bits which demonstrated the lyrical sweetness and fantasy of their poetry and the tragedy which dominates their thoughts, in sombre fashion, as is the case with Russian poetry and literature.

Mrs. Livesay, illustrating this sombre note in their literature, read the little poem of the mother who hated her daughter and finally lured her to death by drowning, only to be drowned herself. The shepherd boy who loved the girl came running at the last minute, too late to have his sweetheart. But nightly at this grim pool the tragedy is enacted again. The mother sits on one bank wringing her "old blue hands" and the daughter on the other, while the lover comes to rescue his sweetheart and carry her to safety.

From "Maruzia," a classic of the Ukraine which resembles our "Maria Chapdelaine" and which Mrs. Livesay is engaged in translating at the present time, the speaker gave a brief sketch, recording the customs of the folk who employ a marriage broker to carry out their matrimonial alliances. Although this envoy may be a neighbor, he is greeted politely as a stranger in the house of the maiden's parents. If the girl is asked to bring in the embroidered towels of her own work and with them to go through a symbolic performance which binds them about the young suitor, then all is well, but the refusal is signified by the father asking the broker to have a drink. Then the lover's suit is lost.

In this, too, is a description of the fanciful, pretty costume of the maidens and their custom of wearing their long hair in a braid down their back, until the time when their marriage day compels them to wind it in a coronal about the head.

Symbolic meanings attach to many of their literary allusions. For instance, the red cranberry is the symbol of woman's beauty among the Ukrainians and the poet speaks of the withering of the bright berry when he writes a song about the maiden who has become wedded to a drunkard. Again, the names of "duke and duchess" have been bestowed from olden times upon the bride and bridegroom, who hold these titles for three days after the ceremony and are surrounded by a miniature court.

Read Own Work

Mrs. Livesay read extracts from her own books, "Songs of Ukraina," from "Shepherd's Purse" and from "Savour of Salt," the letter giving an example of her work along another line and having a trace of broad Irish brogue in its relation of the doing of "Anne McCool" and the bad-tempered saint. Anne McCool was one of those old women, well known to people of a passing generation, who was looked upon with respect and a certain tinge of superstitious reverence. Perhaps one of the women whom the fairies had kissed in the long ago, she was a body inclined at time to "daftness." She would come when she liked and go when she liked, and none could say her nay. She worked if she wished, while she stayed as a self-invited guest, and if she wished, she would fly into a passion of flighty temper. Her reactions to a refractory churn were well described in the dialect of Mrs. Livesay's book.

STEAMING MASH FOR HENS

Steamed mash aids in obtaining more eggs from hens during the winter. A simple heater for the mash may be made from a large pail and a dish of sheet metal slightly larger than the bottom of the pail, says Popular Science Monthly. In the disk are punched a number of holes for steam. An inch or so of water is placed on the stove and the water above it. The upper part of the pail is filled with mash. The heater is then brought to a boil.

Americans Retain Unbroken Record

GOTHAM CLUB LEADS LEAGUE

DEFEATS OTTAWA 1-0.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The New York Americans kept their record clear of defeats and climbed to the top of the Canadian division of the National Hockey League last night by taking a 1 to 0 decision from the Ottawa Senators. Ottawa also was undefeated up to this game. The teams had played a tie in their first meeting of the season.

A brilliant individual play by Normie Himes brought the only goal of the game. In the middle of the second period, Himes worked his way through the entire Ottawa team to within a few feet of the goal and beat Connell with a perfect shot into the upper corner of the net.

"Flat" Walsh, goalie borrowed from the Montreal Maroons, took the lion's share of the honors for the victory. Behind the steady American defence, Walsh put up a fine exhibition of cool steady goal-tending. In the final period when Ottawa was sweeping into American territory, in a desperate attempt to tie the score, Walsh's stops attained a brilliance worthy of the best goal-tenders in the league. Several times during this frame Walsh alone staved off a score after the fast Ottawa attack had passed its way through the other American defenders.

Bruins Beat Pittsburgh.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—The Boston Bruins shut out the Pittsburgh Pirates 1 to 0 here last night to become runners-up in the American division of the National Hockey League. The game, featured by the defence play of both teams, threatened to end in a scoreless tie until the third period was reached.

Four minutes after play started in that session, both forward lines staged a scrimmage about the Pirates' cage. Harry Oliver fought his way through the pack and was in front of Joe Miller, Pirate goalie, when Frederickson circled the visitors' cage. Oliver caught his pass out and jabbed it past Miller. The Pirates tried to even matters but the Bruins' defensive game was much too tight for their forwards until the bell ended the fray. The line-ups:

MONTREAL BLANKS MAPLE LEAFS 4-0

MONTREAL, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—The Montreal Maroons returned to home ice last night after suffering a 4 to 1 defeat at the hands of Connie Smythe's Maple Leafs at Toronto on Saturday, and plastered a 4 to 0 beating on the same team that defeated them at the Ontario capital. The Maroons, strengthened by the return of Hooley Smith, their regular centre, showed an entire reversal of form as compared with their display Saturday, and outplayed the visiting Leafs at all angles.

The visiting defence failed to hold up under the ceaseless offensive battle waged by the Maroons, while the local defence easily handled practically all that the Toronto forwards had to offer. One goal in each of the first two periods and two more in the third spelled defeat for the Torontonians.

Stewart got the first midway through the intial stanza on a neat lone effort which carried him through the Toronto defence in on top of Chabot. The latter had no chance on the close-in drive. In the second period, Ward swooped down on the Toronto net to grab Siebert's rebound from the net post and slap the puck between Chabot's legs. In the third period a sudden dash upon the Toronto net by the Maroons netted two goals within a space of seven seconds, half way through the session. Ward figured in both. He scored the first on his own, and then made the opening for Hooley Smith to score the next. The Maroons beat Chabot twice in the first period, on fast Stewart-to-Smith combinations, but both efforts were called offsides.

The Leafs really threatened only once during the game. That was at the start of the third period when a concerted driving attack on the Montreal net by the Blue and White forwards gave Benedict a busy time. The local defence soon settled down, however, and once more the Maroons took command of the play.

BERT McLEOD RECEIVES HONOR

Former Local O. H. A. Player Is Made Kansas City Captain.

ON PLA-MOR CLUB.

Peterborough has again been honored in pro. hockey circles. Bert McLeod, a former member of the senior O.H.A. team of this city during their championship year in 1926, and now a member of the Kansas City Pla-Mor Hockey Club in the American Association, has been promoted to captain of that club. To quote the St. Paul Despatch: "McLeod, who scales 192 pounds, will be on the first string defence this year, and Manager Bill Grant of the Pla-Mors figures that he will be one of the bright stars of the League."

BERT McLEOD.

Paired with McLeod on the defence will be Dutch Dutkowski, who was with Kansas City last year. The hefty defence man was looked upon as being one of the best players in the circuit last year.

TROTTIER SIGNS WITH MAROONS

Management of Montreal Team Induces Olympic Star To Join Squad.

FOOT INJURED.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—The management of the Montreal Maroons announced just before the start of last night's game with the Toronto Maple Leafs that they had definitely signed Dave Trottier, Olympic star. Trottier started this season with the Victorias, a local team, in the senior group of the Quebec Hockey Amateurs.

President Frank Calder, of the National Hockey League, stated before the game that the squabbles between certain teams in the League as to which would get the amateur star's services should he turn professional had been settled satisfactorily to all concerned.

WHIRLWIND FINISH DOWNS DUTCHMEN

Millionaires Show Improved Form To Win 5-1 Decision.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Playing the hockey they are really capable of, Toronto Millionaires humbled Kitchener's Flying Dutchmen in defeat at the Arena Gardens by a 5 to 1 score last night. The Doughboys gave a high-class exhibition with every player displaying a determination to make good which carried them out of their opening slump. They swept aside the Greenshirts in a fast period rally in a way which left no doubt as to which was the better team. There was no comparison between the Millionaires' club that performed in the two opening games and the one that flashed across the Arena ice last night, for in downing the Dutch, they looked good enough to beat any collection in the Canadian professional circuit.

The threat to dispose of all but four players may have worked the magic change in the Millionaire camp, but on their showing last night, practically every man from the first regular to the last sub was good. The locals started rather poorly and it seemed a repetition of their initial forces but they gradually improved and in the last half of the game, their play was as good as any seen in Canpro hockey here. The sad part of the story is that only a scattered crowd was present to see the play, but if there had been a full house, the game could have been classed with the best of the season.

RANGER ON FIRST TEAM

Will Play Centre For Kansas City Club in American Association.

ROOKIE LAST YEAR.

Another member of the local senior O.H.A. championship squad of 1926 who has received honors in the pro. hockey ranks is Wilfred ('Biffer') Ranger. This former local boy, who was one of last year's rookie additions to the Pla-Mor squad, has been promoted to a regular berth this year. The Kansas City Star has the following to say:

"This twenty-two year puckster, who was farmed out to the Calmut Michigan Club last season, and recalled only at the end of the season, has added weight and speed during the summer lay-off, and his development is little short of sensational.

WILFRED RANGER.

PETERBORO' WON SENIOR O.R.F.U. IN 1907 BUT WERE FLATTENED BY M.A.A.A. FOR NATIONAL TITLE

JOLTED MONTREAL.

Hurtubise, Lundy, Dillon and Deannard Still in Peterborough.

By HUGH FAIRFAX.

Twenty, and even thirty years ago, especially thirty years ago, the Peterborough Rugby club was a powerful unit of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, four times winning the provincial intermediate championship and clinching its local honors by capturing the Canadian title in the intermediate series. To this enviable string of victories it added the senior Ontario championship in 1907, and then at the very pinnacle of its splendid career it provided another example of that cynical aphorism of the arena, "the bigger they are the harder they fall."

The team from the ambitious Ontario town of some 15,000 inhabitants dared to soar so close to the sun that the wax of its daedalian wings melted, and it crashed to earth on a frozen field just off St. Catherine street, Montreal, crushed beneath the score of 71 to 9. The date of that game, marking the high tide of Peterborough's rugby effort, was Saturday, December 2, 1907. For a few years the spirit of the club flickered on with fading light and finally expired. Since then it has been lost in the limbo and oblivion that ultimately enshrouds so many episodes and little days of glory. The lusty young city that once could claim rugby supremacy of the whole province, now lies so low in the autumn game that only the Collegiate teams try to do it justice.

The year of Peterborough's senior championship saw the formation of the Interprovincial Union with its present constituents, Ottawa (Rough Riders), Hamilton (Tigers), Toronto (Argonauts) and Montreal Amateur Athletic Association, and the organization of the Big Four launched a new challenge in the disposal of the major Canadian title, at the same time broadening and expanding the game and giving more definiteness to the various branches or leagues upon which the whole structure has been developed.

Won Four Titles

But, coming back to the Peterborough of rugby fame and to the men who made the team! The intermediate O.R.F.U. title had been won for the fourth time in 1905 and Peterborough was considered ripe for advancement to higher company. They took the plunge in the following year and were grouped with two Toronto teams, Argonauts and Victorias, and the Hamilton Tigers. That was the only appearance of the famous Bengals on a Peterborough grid, and those who remember the local games of that generation should immediately recollect the smart and baffling rugby the Hamilton squad unreeled at Riverside on Saturday, October 6, 1906. The score was 37 to 0. Some of the Hamilton players were "Sep" Dumouline, their captain; Ben Simpson, who had gone from Peterborough to Queen's, and later to Hamilton; Dave Tope; George Ballard, now Crown Attorney in Hamilton, who played a great game at quarter; "Lis" Marriott, Art Moore.

The Peterborough team in that game was: Alex. Mulhearn, at full back; Alex. Gillespie, Dr. Vic. McWilliams, who last winter skipped one of the best rinks in Ontario curling; and Ernie Ford; Easton was at quarter, and Gene Hurtubise was snap; and the wings were Louis Leclaire, Ross Craig, Ambrose Regan, Bill Meagher, Bill Crowley, and Jack Crough.

Peterborough lost at Hamilton, 42 to 1, Argos here won by 13 to 7, and Vics plastered a 23 to 14 beating on us. "Ab" Quinlan, Perce Gilbert and Macdonald played against Victorias.

In Senior Company

When the fall of 1907 rolled around the Tigers and Argos had betaken themselves to the super-select Big Four, Tigers meanwhile had acquired Ross Craig, whom they had recognized in the 1906 clashes as a natural line plunger. And in the colors of the Yellow and Black the Peterborough boy bucked his way to a reputation as one of the greatest middle wings the game has produced. Gone, too, were Alex. Gillespie and Bert Cameron, both to Dundas. Cameron was a fast, hard-tackling outside wing and Gillespie played the backfield position exceptionally well.

Colledge a Great Booter

Fortune, however, had not entirely forsaken the club, for Tom Colledge had come up from the T.C.S. seniors of Port Hope. He surprised and delighted the local fans with a display of punting and drop-kicking that in one sense, has perhaps never been surpassed in this neighborhood.

Colledge could just about "kick it a mile" and goals from the field were his specialty. Under the fire of league games he wasn't so good as in practice, but he was a big factor in the Peterborough senior O.R.F.U. championship of 1907. All he asked and needed was a wing line that would give him plenty of protection, and Tom was prepared to kick the team to a row of victories.

Chubby O'Connor's Start

Toronto Victorias opened the season here and were easily defeated by the score of 40 to 6. Frank O'Connor, who had taken up the game late in the previous season was groomed for Ross Craig's place and made a great job of it in the Victoria game. Dick Evans played his first rugby that afternoon. He had formerly been with the Quaker soccer team, but the oval ball did not bother him. An incident of the game was a scrap between Hurtubise and Lou Marsh, who was then and is yet a sports writer with The Toronto Star.

Panning Lou Marsh

In Toronto a week or so later Peterborough lost by 26 to 21, and Marsh was again in the limelight. The Examiner gave four columns or more to an account of the game, probably written by F. D. Craig, whose summary and running story was graphic in detail. The writer evidently loosened the reins on his indignation in the following panning of Lou Marsh: "Lou Marsh lived up to his reputation of being the dirtiest rugby player in Toronto. His conduct throughout the game was disgraceful. He spent more than twenty minutes on the fence, being ruled off four times for rough work. He started at least a dozen fights during the afternoon by his dirty tactics, his favorite feat being to punch a man after he had tackled him.

"It was in the last few minutes of the game that the culmination of an afternoon's brutality occurred. Marsh had been ruled off for the fourth time, and came over to the side lines. The Vics had the ball near Peterborough's line and were trying to buck it over. Marsh, taking advantage of the dusk and the excitement of the moment, sneaked around the scrimmage line and struck Bill Crowley a heavy blow from behind, knocking him down. The Star, in referring to the game had said that old scores would be settled, and Marsh had evidently made up his mind to show that his paper knew what it was talking about."

And then the youthful "F.D.C." upturns the phial of his wrath so that not a drop shall be wasted, and concludes his reprobation of Marsh with this sting: "He could not have done much dirtier work unless he had used a revolver or a razor."

Those were the days when sports editors had something to write about, and likewise had salty, or in the modern slang, a snooty way of saying it. Peterborough men living in Toronto who saw that game included Tom Wallace, Vic McFadden, Clark Earles, Art Mann, Ross Dobbin, Max Cameron, Earle Weller, J. J. Dorris, Joe White and J. Mulligan.

Final in Lindsay

The teams played off in Lindsay on Thanksgiving Day, October 31, and Peterborough won by 18 to 7. Victorias were without the services of the pugnacious Marsh.

Peterborough next took on Westmount of Montreal, Quebec champions, and turned them back by the score of 25 to 4. Westmount were led by their captain and quarter, Buzz Baillie, a peppery red head, who could do nothing against the Peterborough line, and when he tried the aerial attack found his centre-half outpunted by Tom Colledge for material losses.

Petes Needed Money

The claimants for the national championship were the three league winners, Montreal, Ottawa College and Peterborough. With the organization of the I.R.F.U. (Big Four) that year, arose a dispute about the amateur standing of Ernie Russell of M.A.A.A., also of hockey fame, and while he was recognized by the C.R.F.U., an important section of the C.A.A.U., he was still under the hockey moguls' ban. Hence, under a threat of professionalization, Ottawa College declined to play Montreal, and they saw nothing to be gained in playing Peterborough.

But the local club showed a deficit of $150 which they could wipe out by going to Montreal, and they went, in spite of official warnings. Peterborough did not expect to win, not with the memory of the 1906 Tiger scores still fresh and then realizing that M.A.A.A. had trimmed even the Tigers.

For all that, Peterborough scored six points against the great Montreal team in scarcely more than the first minute. Crowley and Dickson followed up a Colledge punt which Hamilton missed and Dickson fell on the ball for a touch.

"Then," wrote, "F.D.C." in a sparkling account of the game which was played under Quebec winter conditions," before Peterborough realized that they had scored on the great Montreal machine, Harry Gordon made a 30-yard run around the Peterborough left end, after a criss-cross and scored a try."

At half time the score was 35 to 9 and the final was 71 to 9. The Peterborough team that day was: Alex. Mulhern, Ab Quinlan, Crough, Colledge, Davidson, George (Pat) Lundy, at quarter; scrimmage, Jack Deannard, Jim Clark and Jack (Shamus) O'Brien; wings, Ed. Dillon, Dickson, Hurtubise, Crowley, Stan Canniff and O'Connor.

Crowley retired at half time, and Colledge was hurt early in the second half, and after that the defeat became a rout.

The M.A.A.A. team which had been trained by Chaucer Elliott had a whole armoury of offensive plays backed by sound football intelligence and plenty of courage. The personnel included Jimmy Craig, at centre half; Stinson, Hamilton, Russell, Molson, and Ted Savage, whose name is never excluded when the greatest Canadian outside wings are recalled. Flukey and all as it was, and yet it was earned in the same way as many a touchdown, and that is by taking advantage of the other fellow's mistakes, that solitary try against M.A.A.A. is the high light in the traditions of the old Peterborough club. The high gods of Canadian football were momentarily jolted at least. Their swift and relentless vengeance was no disgrace.

FAMOUS CANADIAN RUGBY GAMES, PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By NICK BAWLF— Former star football, lacrosse and hockey player, now coach at Cornell

Picking all star teams is more or less of an idle pastime. Still one likes to visualize before his mind's eye his football favorites taking the field again, all on the same side, to play an imaginary foe. Any sportsman who enjoys backing up his opinions with a few bits of the coin of the realm would more than likely be a winner if he had wagered on the all time, all Canadian rugby team that the writer has selected and arranged to suit his own football fancies. He has chosen two players for each position. Having seen all of them at their best with one exception and having had the extreme pleasure of playing with or against the majority of them, he feels you too might enjoy watching his gridiron greats, each in his prime, step out once more on the green sward of any Canadian football field.

The linemen, big and powerful, clever and courageous, quarterbacked by Hal. Walters, 220 pounds of brains and brawn, the most powerful man ever seen on a football field, along with George Richardson, himself a marvel. Here is the line-up. Select your own opponent:

Snyder (Varsity)	F.W.	Quilty (McGill)
Gall (Varsity)	half b.	Batstone (Queen's)
Gleeson (Ottawa Coll.)	half b.	G. Southam (Tigers)
Conacher (Argos)	half b.	Lawson (Varsity)
Walters (Ottawa Coll.)	quarter	Richardson (Queen's)
Clancy (Ottawa Coll.)	snap	C. Kennedy (Granites)
Joe Wright, Sr. (Argos)	insides	Herscovitch (M.A.A.)
Grey (Tigers)	insides	Kent (Argos)
Pulford (Ottawa)	middles	Filiatrault (Ottawa Coll.)
Barr (Varsity)	middles	McKelvey (Queen's)
Savage (M.A.A.)	outsides	Elliott (Queen's)
Connell (Ottawa)	outsides	Kilt (Ottawa)

This article concludes the series of famous football games, plays and players.

EAST PETERBOROUGH LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP TEAM PRESENTED WITH SPALDING SILVER TROPHY

Receive Many Expressions of Appreciation For Splendid Showing Made.

PRESENTED WITH SWEATERS

Representatives From Bethany and Officials of League Attend Banquet.

The Raybestos Ball Club received many expressions of appreciation of their sportsmanship and pride at their splendid showing in reaching the finals of the Intermediate O.A.B.A. championship at the banquet held in their honor at the Downeyflake Tea Rooms last evening.

The manager of the Raybestos plant, Robert Abbott, made a genial chairman and good fellowship waxed strong around the board. Mr Abbott in speaking to the players said: "I can't speak too highly of what you have done in bringing honor to your city and yourselves by your sportsmanship and gentlemanly behaviour." He spoke of the mistakes that may have been made and that were forgotten by the players because of the great feeling of co-operation that existed between the members of the team. That the fine manner in which the teams conducted themselves on their trips, and their great playing will reflect credit to the city, and that they were splendid representatives of a good city was the opinion expressed by Mr. Abbott.

Council Behind Sports.

Mayor Denne in expressing his appreciation on behalf of the City Council remarked that the council was behind every sporting organization in the city. Speaking of James Stevenson Park he pointed out some of the difficulties of improving it because of the lack of finances. But he expressed the hope that by careful spending the council might soon be in a position to put their plans of fixing the park into operation. He thanked the East Peterborough League for the present of $101 to the council for the use of Exhibition Park for the season.

Chairman Robert Abbott said that the ball club always had a friend in Mayor Denne and another staunch supporter in the person of a business man, who believing the Raybestos club were short of funds, had donated a cheque. The cheque was returned because it was felt that the club could manage along without it, but the good will was fully appreciated. James Dutton, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and donor of the cheque, was then called upon to speak.

Mr. Dutton spoke of the great advertising the Raybestos club had given Peterborough by competing with other teams throughout the province. Speaking of the success of the team and the loss of the final game, he remarkod that it wasn't always the best thing to win. "The best things that come to us are the bumps that spur us on to greater endeavors and make final success worth while," said Mr. Dutton. He spoke of the fine appreciation of co-operation gained in participating in sports that would later serve in the game of life.

Displayed ood Sportsmanship.

Dr. John J. Hamilton, representing the Bethany Club, remarked that the Raybestos team was a good team and always displayed good sportsmanship. Roy McBride was also present from Bethany and Fred Cripps from the Cognawaga club.

Mr. Monahan, sales manager of the firm, spoke happily of the great amount of free advertising his department had gained by the success of the Raybestos team, and Art Primeau, the popular manager of the team, spoke of the feeling of good fellowship existing among the players and their keen co-operation with all his orders.

The great work of Alex Kay and Edgar (Curly) LeBarr, umpires, and Charlie Curtis, secretary of the East Peterborough League, were lauded by the chairman.

Tokens of appreciation for the work of John Gillespie, who kept the diamond in good shape, Bill Prindible, collector par excellence, and Charlie Curtis ,were presented to these men by the chairman.

The Spalding Trophy, emblematic of the championship of the East Peterborough League was presented to the team by Lew LeBarr, Jr. They also were presented with sweater coats woven in the club's colors, maroon and white.

Alex Kay complimented the team on their success and remarked that the hardest games that the team had to play were in their own league against Bethany, Cognawegas and the Crescents.

AT THE CAPITOL.

DARE-DEVILS PUT PUNCH INTO FILM

Dare-devils make up most of the supporting cast of "Moran of the Marines," starring Richard Dix, at the Capitol Theatre, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. At least they are given that classification by those who prefer a comfortable chair and book for diversion.

First of all there is Ruth Elder, the pretty aviatrix who caused a sensation last year with her futile attempt to cross the Atlantic Ocean by air. Miss Elder makes her initial screen appearance in a feature motion picture with this film, and critics have been loud in their praise of her work. Her record is still fresh in the public mind as far as a love for adventure is concerned.

Then there is Capt. E. H. Calvert, late of the United States army and West Point graduate. Capt. Calvert served the colors in every part of the globe prior to his entering motion picture. During the war he was given a colonel's commission, and it was his duty to look after his cameramen who made a pictorial record of every engagement in which the Americans took part. It was an important assignment and extremely dangerous undertaking. He essays the role of a marine general in the picture.

Even the story was written by a harum-scarum young journalist who is as much at home in Pago Pago as in New York City. This man, Linton Wells, once held a record for making the fastest trip around the world, which was recently broken by a few hours. Wells has made his story thrilling and injected many of his own experiences into the script.

Last but not least is the star, Richard Dix, whose daring exploits before the camera have made him one of the most popular figures in motion pictures to-day.

A cross section of life—stark and unadorned—is the description that has been given to First National's "The Noose," starring Richard Barthelmess at the Regent Theatre.

It is the story of an unfortunate boy thrown in among bad companions and denied the love of a father and mother and who becomes a rum runner and gangster. The highly dramatic recital of his discovery of his own identity and the revenge he takes upon the man who wronged his mother is presented in a convincing manner.

Barthelmess' role is one of the finest he has ever had, and he makes Nickie Elkins a flesh-and-blood person and not a mythical screen character.

"The Noose" is from Willard Mack's sensational stage play of that name.

THURSDAY, FRIDAY, SATURDAY

One of the most thrilling climaxes ever filmed is in the breath-taking finish of the new Buck Jones Fox Films production, "Chain Lightning," which opens a three-day run at the Regent Theatre to-morrow, Thursday.

When he sees the horse plunge through the opening he gives the signal to light the fuse to stop the racing thieves. Just then he sees Campan, riding far ahead, thundering towards the opening with Glory, the girl he loves. He realizes they will get through before the explosion and he spurs Silver Buck on down a sheer cliff to speed through the gap before the fatal blast.

It is one of the most spectacular rides ever filmed in Western drama. It is only because of the sure-footedness of the worthy animal and the prowess of Jones that both are saved from serious injury as they plunge down the perilous canyon, with its shifting sands and tumbling boulders, to dash through the narrow opening before the explosion.

The smash-up finish provides sure-fire thrills for any lover of the daring hasards and breath-taking riding encompassed in a real drama of the West.

LEONARD WANTS NORMAN HIMES

Rumored Roy Worters, Former Pittsburgh Goalie, Will Join Americans To-day.

HEAVY CASH BONUS.

NEW YORK, November 28. — Canadian Press.—There were well founded reports in New York hockey circles to-day that Roy Worters, great goalie of the Pittsburg Pirates, would be a member of the New York Americans before nightfall.

Worters, who has been under suspension since the opening of the National Hockey League season because he failed to come to an agreement with the Pirates on salary terms, has been persistently sought by the Americans. Beeny Leonard, the new owner of the Pirates, has been in conference with the officials of the American Club for the past few days, and it was expected Worters would be traded some time to-day. It is understood that Leonard will not trade unless he can get Joe Miller, goalie, Norman Himes, substitute centre of the Americans, and approximately $15,000 in cash. Leonard is especially anxious to land Himes. He is reported to have turned down one offer made by Americans, which would have brought Worters to New York for Miller, and $20,000.

VIEWS ON SPORTS

To-day is the final day for entries in the O.H.A. and very soon the groupings will be announced.

It is likely that the Intermediates will be grouped with the Lakeshore towns, Port Hope, Bowmanville and Oshawa. This the same group that the Intermediates played in last winter.

* * * * * *

The Juniors will likely be grouped with Lindsay "Midgets" and Lakefield. Last year one of the Peterborough junior teams was grouped with these teams and one in the Lakeshore group. However this year with only one team entered in the Junior series it is most likely that they will be grouped with Lindsay as they have been fpr many years back.

* * * * * * *

Last evening at the Downeyflake Tea Rooms a banquet was held in honor of the Raybestos Baseball Club. This team played great ball and were just nosed out of the Intermediate championship in a sudden death game. It is to be noticed, as Alex Kay remarkd, that the hardest games the Raybestos had to play was with the teams in their own East Peterborough League and after they went out into the playoffs they had comparatively clear sailing.

* * * * * *

The Rough Riders and the Pats of Regina entrained for the East yesterday. The Rough Riders will play the Hamilton Tigers in Hamilton this Saturday. It is to be hoped that the team from the west will give the Cats a good game. Next year at least one of the final games for the Dominion championship, either the Junior or the Senior, ought to be played in the West. Such a game would certainly help the cause of rugby in the wheat belt.

* * * * * *

Dave Trottier will play with the Montreal Maroons. Early in the year the Olympic star said that he would play with the Montreal team or not at all and he has won his point. The Leafs waive their claim to him through the "gentlemen's agreement" prevailing in the N.H.L. for the consideration of $15,000 and an unnamed player.

* * * * * *

The St. Michael's Hockey Club have decided to enter a team in the O.H.A. senior series. Years ago St. Mike's turned out great teams in the major league and won many honors and they are being welcomed back again. There are four teams entered now, University of Toronto, Preston, Kitchener and St. Mike's. There is the probability of another entry.

COUNTRY ROADS ARE IMPROVED

Frost and Snow Dries Up Mud and Fills in Ruts.

HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

BETHANY, Nov. 28 (Examiner Correspondence). — The country roads have been much improved by the recent frost and snow. There is quite a stretch of freshly graded and ungravelled road near the 14th line of Manvers that has been very bad due to the wet weather. The road to Peterborough has been improved with gravel.

The snow which has fallen lately, when tramped down, has filled up a good many ruts. On some of the roads, it has been found necessary to drive with chains.

Hold Annual Meeting

The members of the Ladies' Aid of the United Church met at the parsonage on Friday afternoon. As there was very little business, it was decided by those present to have their annual meeting. Mrs. (Rev.) Poulter, the president, presided, and the meeting opened with a hymn and prayer by Rev. Mr. Poulter.

Most interesting reports were received from Miss Ella Jackson, treasurer, and Mrs. Jones, secretary. New curtains and matting were purchased for the church and flowers were sent to the sick and shut-in members, as well as sending Christmas cards at Christmas. It was decided that the same methods be adopted this coming year, of remembering the sick members with flowers and fruit. As the officers of last year did such splendid work, it was thought fitting that they be re-elected. They are as follows: President, Mrs. (Rev.) Poulter; vice-president, Mrs. W. L. Rowan; secretary, Mrs. Jones; tresurer, Miss Ella Jackson; pianist, Mrs. Bertrand Monk; visiting and flower committee, Miss Elsie Richardson, Mrs. Arnott and Mrs. Thorndyke.

The January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Arnott. Lunch will be served and a silver collection taken. At the conclusion of the meeting, Mrs. Poulter served lunch and a social hour was very much enjoyed.

Speaks of John Bunyan

On Sunday evening in the United Church, Rev. Mr. Poulter spoke on the life and work of John Bunyan, author of Pilgrim's Progress.

MAPLE LEAF CLASS HOLDS CANDY SALE

Annual Sunday School Convention is to be Held in Bailieboro.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Nov. 28.—The Maple Sunday school, of which Mrs. M McDowell is the teacher, held a successful sale of home-made candy in H. W. Johnston's music store on Saturday afternoon, the tempting wares being disposed of readily. Music was provided throughout the afternoon, due to the courtesy of Mr. Johnston, who kept an orthophonic victrola going practically all of the time, and customers, either for the store, or the candy sale, enjoyed this feature particularly well. Almost $30 was realized, the amount being donated to the funds of the Sunshine Mission Band, of which Mrs McDowell is superintendent, the objective of $100 for the Band being not yet reached.

Eakins, remaining over here on his way from Lindsay, where he had attended the funeral of his uncle, Dr. S. W. Clarke, on Saturday. Dr. Adam Clarke, of Winnipeg, and Mr. R. W. sult of Norwood's tag day as being a cheque for $22 and also presented a cheque for $25 from the Peterborough Lodge of Perfection, as their contributions towards the Christmas fund for the children at the Shelter.

Reports were then read by Mr. Edgar, giving his own annual reports of the year's activities and also reading the financial statement in the absence of the treasurer, C. S. Cummer. Monies held in trust for the wards are less than last year's total by the sum of $2,083, this amount having been paid out to wards during the year.

A vote of thanks to the secretary for the splendid report presented, was moved by J. Abraham and seconded by Mrs. Fanning. A motion of thanks from Mrs. J. Welsh was also passed, recording the gratitude of the ladies to Mrs. Fanning and Mrs. Darcy for taking the other lady members of the Shelter in their cars, for weekly sewing meetings.

The Rev. Dr. Blagrave spoke of the gratitude due the ladies of the Board, for their constant and faithful attendance at these sewing meetings and in carrying out so much of the work at the Shelter. "We owe much thanks to this handful of women who carry the burden of the work so faithfully," he said.

The thanks of the society were also extended to Drs. Clark and Wood and Drs. Craig, Cameron and Crough, as noted in the secretary's report, for medical help and dental work given during the year and Dr. Blagrave extended thanks to all who had assisted in any way in the society's endeavors.

It was decided to send Christmas cards to the wards of the society and it was also decided to extend a friendly gesture to the wards throughout the year by sending them cards of remembrance on their birthday anniversaries.

The annual Christmas Tree gathering at the Shelter will be held on Friday, December 21st.

Annual Reports

The reports, as presented by Mr. Edgar, showed some interesting factors in the work of the superintendent, his remarks regarding home conditions being productive of much thought, a review of cases under the Unmarried Parents' Act was also given.

The financial statement showed a balance on hand of $1,243.34, with receipts for the year totalling $6,553.56.

The reports will appear in full in a later issue.

WORKMAN KILLED, WALL COLLAPSES

Three Others Taken To Hospital As Result of Accident.

LONDON, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press)—One workman was killed and three others were injured and sent to the hospital when part of the old wall of the Bank of England collapsed today. The crash came while the workmen were demolishing the old wall to make way for the new bank building in Threadneedle Street.

Immediately after the accident all entrances to the building were placed under guard, and no details of the occurrence were given out. Workmen were informed that strict secrecy must be maintained.

The regular work of the banking institution was not affected as the various departments have been operating in other quarters since re-building commenced.

400 ATTEND FOWL SUPPER

St. Andrew's Ladies' Aid Holds Most Successful Event.

SPLENDID CONCERT.

The Fowl Supper and Concert held last evening in St. Andrew's United Sunday School, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid, was largely attended. Over four hundred sat down to a splendid repast, served from long tables, decorated with red paper, silver candle-holders, with tall tapering candles, and shorter red ones. Pretty little potted plants with frilled green paper used as covers, made a very attractive setting. Ample good things were in evidence. Mrs. F. L. Robinson, president of the Ladies' Aid, was general convenor, assisted by Mrs. C. H. Edwards, Mrs. P. L. Allison and Mrs. Ivan Lillico, group leaders. Many ladies helped to serve. Mrs. C. V. McLean and Mrs. Charles McFarlane had charge of the table decorations. G. A. Gillespie was in charge at the door.

After supper a splendid concert was given, the Rev. C. V. McLean acting as chairman. A radio concert was very much enjoyed at the beginning of the evening. The radio being kindly loaned by Heintzman Company. The stage was nicely decorated with ferns and large bouquets of mums, wicker furniture and floor lamps, loaned by McBride and Franks. A male octette consisting of Messrs. John Crane, Maurice Park, Carl Brown, D. Carlisle, H. Morphet, A. Barton, R. F. Downey, and T. H. Gillespie, was greatly enjoyed. The instrumental trio with Mr. Don Green, Harold McFarlane and Jack Thackeray was heard in several numbers and were loudly applauded. Miss Mary Jory with Miss Renouf as her accompanish rendered a very beautiful vocal solo, and was forced to respond to an encore. Mrs. Fred McNeely, who is a great favorite with any audience, gave several readings, in her usual capable manner. Little Ruth McNeely, whose appearance always delights her listeners, was heartily encored for her very clever little recitation.

The Rev. McLean at the close of the program moved a hearty vote of thanks to the assisting artists on the program and to the Ladies' Aid for the wonderful supper provided by them. The evening's entertainment closed with the National Anthem.

SPEAKERS ADDRESS SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

Responsibility of Parents Outlined By Inspector R. F. Downey.

Inspector R. F. Downey and Fire Chief George Gimblett were speakers at the meeting of the Prince of Wales Home and School Association, held on Monday evening at the schoolhouse. The president, Mrs. G. M. Kirkwood, was in the chair.

Mr. Downey addressed his remarks to the parents, the teachers and the children, outlining the responsibilities of each and pointing out the necessity of co-operation among each group.

Fire Chief Gimblett gave the talke of Fire Prevention which is forming a portion of his endeavours this year to keep the fire loss down, pointing out to the ladies the necessity of looking after fire hazards at all times and telling them of many of the common causes of fire in their households.

The program which followed the addresses of the evening included a chorus by pupils from the rooms taught by Miss E. Richardson and Mr. D. Munro, a vocal solo by Master Griffin Young and a vocal duett by Jennie Herd and Jean Cowling, accompanied by the school orchestra, a song by Mrs. N. Todds and a piano solo by Alice Ray.

POINTS DISCUSSED BY POOL DELEGATES

Would Build Second Houses at Lake Shipping Points.

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—The possibility of portable elevators and covered scales, as a means of serving farmers where there are no elevators were among the subjects discussed yesterday at the meeting of the delegates to the Saskatchewan wheat pool.

Another point to be thoroughly discussed by the delegates was with reference to the building of second houses at heavy shipping points. One of the questions involved was as to whether all of the points not now served by pool elevators should be provided with elevator facilities before second houses were built at other points or whether the attempt should be to take care of the greatest volume of pool grain.

The decision of the delegates was to the effect that all factors should be taken into consideration by the board and the construction program should be framed accordingly. It was intimated to the delegates that it was the intention of the board to build as many of the elevators for the 1929 season by the pool elevators construction department as possible.

Some discussion also took place with reference to overgrading and some delegates seemed to feel that there should be a hard and fast policy in this regard. The chairman stated that the policy of the board was well established with reference to grading and it was that every agent of the pool should endeavor to give each pool member exactly the grade to which his grain was entitled and no more or less. Experience was improving the situation in this respect and in spite of the fact that the present crop was one of the hardest to grade, pool elevators were handling at least 75 per cent. of all pool grain and grade losses were lower than last year.

SECOND STORM THREATENS EUROPE

Ships Held Outside French Ports Owing To Mountainous Seas.

PARIS, Nov. 28 (Canadian Press).—With the lowlands of Belgium and Holland flooded, another storm appeared brewing over Western Europe to-day. Mountainous seas were running and prevented pilots from reaching harbors of the French coast, with the result that many were forced to remain tossing in giant waves outside Havre, Bordeaux and other ports.

Deceived by the temporary lull in the storm ten fishing boats put out from Grauduri. Eight managed to get back, but two were sunk, and three men drowned.

With dykes down, waters were sweeping over wide stretches in Belgium and Holland, demolishing houses, flooding fields and drowning livestock. The death toll in Holland alone amounted to fifty-eight.

1,000 Barrels of Beer Consigned to Sewer

PRODUCT OF THREE MONTHS' OPERATIONS HAS "GONE BAD" SAYS LOCAL BREWERY OFFICIAL

25,000 Gallons Are Estimated To Mean a Retail Loss of $30,000.

BREWMASTER LEAVES.

Manager Says Trouble Was Through Faulty Preparation or a Plant Defect.

The product of 3 months' operation "gone bad," and slated for the city sewer to the extent of approximately 1,000 barrels, or 25,000 gallons, representing a retail loss of $30,000, the plant of the Peterborough Brewing Company, Ltd., to-day stands silent as a tomb. The chief brewmaster and the management have severed connections, and further financial backing is being sought of the company's main stockholders, most of them resident in New Jersey. With the original funds depleted through the costly installation of necessary apparatus and equipment, the loss of the brew has proved the last straw and the modern completely finished plant stands practically unused.

The above information was accorded The Examiner reporter by Manager A. H. Lyons, encountered during a visit to the brewing plant in East City this morning. Mr. Lyons proved most courteous, and through him, an accurate summary of the company's activities was gained.

Consigned to Sewer.

Dealing first with the rumor of a quantity of beer being consigned to the city sewer, the manager did not seem reluctant to give details. "The trouble," said he, "has been either through faulty preparation and care of the brew or through a defect in the plant, and a check-up of the equipment is being carefully made. Aside from this latter possibility, the beer has been found faulty and I have not only been in communication with the Wahl-Henius Institute of Chicago, but have sent six samples for analysis. The replies from the institute have been far from encouraging, in effect, stating that any form of doctoring would prove decidedly hazardous. That is why, on Wednesday, we dumped a part of the 1,000 barrels of beer in the sewer, with the remainder slated to follow in a short time. It is being done in the presence of Government officials, so that we may reclaim certain duties imposed on the product intended for the market. We have no intention of putting a poor product on the market."

Not Lost To City.

The possibility of the plant being closed permanently is not so great as outward appearances might indicate, for, according to Mr. Lyons, the main expenditure—that for equipment and putting the plant in operation—has now been made, and with the original funds supplemented, and a capable operating staff, "Calcutt's ale" as the product is to be known, will go on the market as a first-class product. The supply of hops is not half exhausted, and there is a large stock of the necessary bottles and packing cases. The machinery is intact.

When Plant Operated.

Employing from fifteen to thirty men, the Peterborough Brewing Company, Ltd., went ahead with shaping itself for operation from early in the spring, and on June 1 last, began brewing. From that date until about September 1, fourteen brews, each of about sixty barrels, were completed, only to prove defective. "When running to full capacity, we employ nearly thirty men," said Mr. Lyons, as he conducted an inspection of the plant for the reporter's benefit. There is not much possibility of the present conditions lasting as the possibility of securing financial backing is good.

President Optimistic.

Interviewed by The Examiner following his recent visit to New York, President H. E. Cook was not in the least discouraged as to the Brewing Company's prospects. "It is a Peterborough industry, and it is not going to fail," said he, "for there is Peterborough money invested in the company, though the main shareholders live in the United States. Of course, the failure of our large stock of beer to prove itself has retarded progress to some extent. The company takes the position that it cannot afford to market an unsatisfactory product and the reports from analytical institutions in the United States warrant the position taken by the company, to sustain the loss.

"We are making an effort to secure the services of a well-known brewmaster, and despite disappointments, both from the standpoint of time and money, the article must be right, and we can only hope to attain financial success through merit and a view to completely satisfying the public."

Speaking of the financial status of the Brewing Company, President Cook declared that the plant itself is finan-

STEAMER SENDS CALL FOR HELP

40 MEN ON BOARD.

SEATTLE, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—S.O.S. calls heard to-day indicated that the steamer Chief Maquilla, a grain freighter, was in distress off the tip of the Alaskan Peninsula. The nature of the trouble was not learned. The ship carries eight officers and thirty-two men. There were no passengers aboard.

The ship left Kildonan, B.C., November 17 with a cargo of wheat for Shanghai.

The Everett Marine Radio Station announced this morning that it had heard an S.O.S. call from a ship sinking, V.G.C.M. The call seemed to come from far out in the Pacific, and the operator was unable to hear the name of the craft or its position.

Marine officers here said the call letters were those of the 7,000-ton Canadian freighter Chief Maquilla, plying between Canadian and Oriental ports.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press.)—Chief Maquilla, of the Canadian American Shipping Company, from which SOS calls were picked up by coast radio stations this morning is about 1,500 miles off the Pacific coast en route from Kildonan, B.C., with grain for Shanghai.

A later message from Osaka Shosen Katsha liner said that the ship was rushing to the assistance of the distressed vessel. SOS said the situation was urgent and asked ships to stand by. Nothing has been heard since and uneasiness is felt. The possibility is suggested that the ship's deck load of lumber might have shifted, causing her to list.

Chief Maquilla registers 9,500 tons and carries eight officers and thirty-two men.

Many inquiries have been received for the 1929 prize list, and the association looks forward to a very successful season.

Canada Cement Company To Spend $1,000,000

QUEBEC, Nov. 29.—Announcement was made here last night that the Canada Cement would expend in the neighborhood of one million dollars for the construction of a distribution depot in this city. The first step in the development was taken yesterday with the purchase of properties located in the lower town. The company, it is said, will also construct a special wharf on the St. Charles River.

BRITISH PRESS URGES CABINET TO ACCEPT PLAN

SERIOUS CONSIDERATION.

New York Warns London Against Thinking Britten Speaks For People.

LONDON, England, Nov. 29 (Special Cable to The Examiner).—Press despatches from New York warn London not to take Fred Britten as representative of responsible American opinion, otherwise his suggestion of an inter-parliamentary meeting to be held in Canada would be welcomed, though next Spring is an awkward time for British M.P.'s with a general election looming ahead. It is suggested that some independent men like Lord Lee and Lord Derby would be the best representatives of Britain, the absence of naval authorities of both countries is regarded as essential to give the conference any chance of success. Lord Cecil, who is one of the few British statesmen who dares openely to oppose the Admiralty, said yesterday that America might desire at this juncture, to raise the question of the freedom of the seas; that is, of freedom of neutrals to trade with belligerents. It is possible that the United States and Britain might come to a new agreement. Two morning papers urged that Great Britain accept Representative Britten's proposal.

The Daily Express said: "Whatever officialdom may say, the idea is a good one; the opportunity should be taken." The Laborite Daily Herald said: "The proposal deserves serious consideration. There is too much good sense in the idea to let it be turned down because Britten has disregarded the rules of diplomatic behaviour."

While describing the proposal as an admirable one, The Manchester Guardian to-day points out that Premier Baldwin, to whom the proposal was made, "is almost the last person who should have been approached, since his contacts with the United States must be official." The Guardian says "The leader of either of the Opposition parties could more easily have responded to the invitation, but the most suitable person of all to take the initiative in this country would have been some distinguished person of independent mind, like Viscount Lee of Fareham, whose own suggestions for a meeting of statesment unaccompanied by naval experts were of a somewhat similar kind."

OFFICIALS URGE CHEAPER RATES

Negotiations Carried On In London For Lower Immigration Passage.

NEED THIRD CLASS RATE.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 29 (Canadian Press). — Negotiations for cheaper ocean rates for British immigrants to Canada are still being carried on in London, and a decision is expected within a few days, officials stated here to-day. While it was admitted that negotiations were taking longer than expected, it was denied that any deadlock existed.

A ten pound third-class rate is being urged on steamship companies by representatives of the British and Canadian Governments for household and farm workers.

Negotiations have drawn attention to the fact that since the war rates to Australia have doubled while fares to Canada have more than tripled.

COUNCIL MUST HONOR GUNS OR DEPARTMENT WILL GIVE THEM TO CANADIAN LEGION

No Action Yet Taken, Says Archivist, But Situation is Being Watched.

RUMOR DENIED

Story Current Yesterday of Ultimatum to Alderman Greene Was Unfounded.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 29 (Special to The Examiner).—No communication has been sent to Peterborough by the Canadian authorities concerned in the removal of the war memorials of that city recently, it was learned on the highest authority of the Department of National Defence and Archives of Canada yesterday afternoon, but the government is watching the situation closely.

G. J. Desbarats, Deputy Minister of National Defence, said no letter to Mr. Greene had passed through his hands, and that this was proof none was sent by his Department. Dr. Doughty, Canadian Archivist, said he had taken no action about the Peterborough memorials yet, but was ready to act if necessary. "I see that there is to be a discussion of the matter at a meeting of Peterborough Council on Monday, and no doubt the town will straighten out the matter itself without our intervention."

Dr. Doughty authorized your correspondent to warn Peterborough, however, that unless proper provisions are made for the guns concerned, he will offer full charge of them to the members of the Canadian Legion of Peterborough.

"For, after all," he said, "they are the men who captured them, and if the town won't give the guns proper care and honors, the veterans will be offered a chance to do so."

(This statement, obtained specially for The Examiner, effectively establishes the lack of truth in yesterday's rumor that the Department of National Defence had issued an ultimatum to Alderman J. M. Greene as representing the city).

TO VISIT CITY.

While the storm over the removal of the guns from Confederation Square, was gathering on Monday, His Worship Mayor Roland Denne was in Toronto, completing arrangements for the visit to Peterborough on Friday (to-morrow) of President E. W. Beatty, of the Canadian Pacific Railway. To-day, in company with city clerk S. R. Armstrong and J. W. Anderson, the mayor was busy drawing up a tentative program for the visit. It is known that Mr. Beatty will arrive by special train at 2:45 in the afternoon, and all manufacturers and business men have been notified of the proposed meeting in the city council chamber immediately afterward.

There will be no civic dinner as is customary, owing to the fact that the distinguished visitor will depart at about five o'clock.

VISCOUNT CECIL FAVORS PARITY OF GREAT NAVIES

Urges Absolute Mathematical Equality in Both Tons and Guns.

FREEDOM OF SEAS

Was a Member of British Delegation to Three Power Conference in 1927.

LONDON, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, who was active in the formation of the League of Nations, favors parity of the United States navy with the British.

Speaking before the parliamentary committee of the League of Nations Union, Viscount Cecil urged absolute mathematical equality in both tons and guns between the two nations. He said he thought disarmament was treated overmuch as matter for experts and too little as a question of large politics.

Viscount Cecil thought that America might desire to raise the question of the freedom of the seas. His view was that acceptance of the principal of freedom of neutrals to trade with belligerents was subject to old rules of blockade and would be advantageous to Great Britain rather than otherwise. Great Britain, he thought, ought to be prepared to come to terms on that point, provided America was prepared to join in enforcing those principles when they were accepted.

Viscount Cecil was a member of the British delegation to the three power naval conference in Geneva in 1927, and shortly after the failure of that conference he announced his resignation from his Cabinet post, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. At that time, alluding to the failure of the Geneva conference, he said: "I think success might have been achieved without any sacrifice of British interests. I was out of sympathy with the instructions I received."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press.)—Silence from State and Navy Departments and criticism from Senator Swanson, Virginia has been the reaction to Representative Britten's proposals for naval conference. Britten, chairman of the House Naval Affairs committee, cabled Stanley Baldwin, Premier of Britain, suggesting that the members of the committee and a committee of the British Parliament meet to talk over question of sea equality.

Senator Swanson, said the proposal was revolutionary, poitning out that any treaty of disarmament must be ratified by the Senate and made by the President.

Tourists Left $316,299 In District This Season

The Chamber of Commerce reports a tourist revenue to the district traceable through the medium of the chartered banks of $316,299 for the season just closed, an increase of $8,000 over the same period last year, and $63,000 over that of 1926. It is thought the increase this year would have been considerably larger but for constant work on highway approaches and the presidential election in the United States.

CONDITION IS CONSIDERED TO BE IMPROVED

COMPLETES FIRST STAGE.

Prince of Wales Arrives at Dares, Salaam—Will Leave Sunday.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Canadain Press. There was a more hopeful atmosphere around Buckingham Palace today as a result of the bulletin issued by His Majesty's physicians. Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn reported that the infective process was being held in check. The fact that there was no spread of infection was welcomed news. While the bulletin indicated that the King did not sleep much during the night, it was pointed out that he had been getting a considerable amount of sleep during the day.

The Prince of Wales has already completed the first stage of a long journey to the father's sick bed. There was no news of the plans of his brother, the Duke of Gloucester. It is improbable that the Duke, who is hunting in the wilds, has yet received any word of the King's illness.

DARES, Salaam, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—It was officially stated to-day that the Prince of Wales had not yet definitely decided regarding his departure for England, but that he expected to travel on the cruiser Enterprise, which is due here Sunday. The Prince is staying at Government House, and he accepted an invitation to a special dance in his honor to-night.

Will Speed Trip.

ROME, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press Cable).—Special arrangements have been made by the Italian Government to speed the homeward journey of the Prince of Wales, providing he travels across Italy after reaching the Mediterranean through the Suez Canal from Africa. Special trains are to be provided when the Prince lands at Brindisi, while aeroplane facilities will be offered if he wishes to travel by air from Egypt across the Mediterranean.

LONDON, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—Tickets of admission to Canterbury Cathedral for the enthronement of the Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang as Archbishop of Canterbury were distributed to-day after being withheld for some time. The action was the obvious indication that the Cathedral authorities were more reassured that the King's condition would not remain so serious as to interfere with the ceremonies. The enthronement is to take place December 4.

With his nerves on edge, the Prince of Wales, who is on his way home from Africa, has a trying time ahead of him before he can reach his father. It is confidently hoped the King then will be convalescent.

It has taken much longer for communications to reach the Prince of Wales in the African jungles than those within reach of telegraph wires may imagine. His Royal Highness decided to return home when he received Sunday's message. Stories published of relays of airplanes prepared for him in the African jungle are deemed absurd.

Quiet Day

To-night's official bulletin said, "King had quiet day. Condition remained unchanged."

Northern Ontario Is Hope and Prospect Of Whole Province

KAPUSKASING DEVELOPMENT HAS COST $28,000,000 MODEL TOWN OWNED BY ORE BIG COMPANY

Newsprint Industry Is the Only Thing That Is Giving Canada a Favorable Balance of Trade With United States, Declares Speaker.

"Northern Ontario, that part of the province lying north of the Great Lakes and the Ottawa River, is the hope and prospect of the whole province," said Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests for Ontario, speaking at the big Conservative At Home, held in the Legion Hall last evening.

The At Home was under the auspices of the Macdonald-Cartier Club, the Conservatives' young people's organization, aided by the Women's Conservative Association. The large hall was crowded to hear the speakers, Hon. William Finlayson; E. A. Peck, M.P.; and Mrs. Howard Fallis. The president of the Macdonald-Cartier Club, Bernard Park, presided as chairman.

Mr. Peck, in his address, congratulated the Macdonald-Cartier Club on the fine spirit and development shown in their organization and pointed out the necessity of close study of public questions by the young citizens of Canada. Formerly, remarked the speaker, the younger element was never recognized in the government, and only landowners and those renting property were allowed to vote, forming only one-third of the adult population of the country. But today all British subjects over twenty-one have the franchise, and it is opportune that the young people should join such organizations as the Macdonald-Cartier Club to study public questions. The speaker expressed the hope that such questions as the means of bringing suitable settlers to help Canadians develop their vast country; St. Lawrence Waterway development; and the co-operation of Canada with the other parts of the British Empire would receive the thoughtful consideration of the young voters.

Importance Increasing

Mrs. Howard Fallis remarked at the ever-increasing importance of the young people's organization and the Conservative Women's Association, and the recognition that both were given at the recent great Conservative convention held in Toronto. The purpose of these organizations, explained the speaker, was not merely to win ballots, but to acquire a greater knowledge of the important questions confronting voters. The women pledged themselves to charitable as well as political projects at the recent convention, said Mrs. Fallis. The suggestion for the establishment of a girls' school similar to the boys' school at Bowmanville and which the convention adopted, came from Peterborough, pointed out the speaker, and she expressed the assurance that the women of the city would take an active part in supporting the project.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P. introducing Hon. Mr. Finlayson said that Mr. Finlayson had served with the Canadian forces in France and on returning had studied law and entered the Ontario House as a member for a Simcoe constituency. He had, continued Mr. Bradburn, won for himself one of the most important positions in the Government, Miniate of Lands and Forests, by his sheer outstanding ability.

Industrial Growth

In beginning his speech on Northern Ontario, Mr. Finlayson remarked the industrial growth and apparent prosperity of Peterborough, and he stated that such groth in cities similar to Peterborough was due to the Conservative principle of forcing Canadian raw materials to be manufactured in Canada and not imported from the United States after they had first been exported there as raw materials. He foresaw in the new Hoover administration higher protection to the American farmer from the Canadian farm produce and remarked that Canada should retaliate by raising her protective duties. He said that as a result of the war, and it was a terrible price to pay for the knowledge, the Canadian people had had it emphasized to them that they were inferior to no other people in the world. Let us deal with the Americans in a friendly manner when we can, urged the speaker, but let us deal with them over a fence equally as high as their own.

"Only fifteen per cent of the total area of Ontario lies in what is termed Old Ontario, and the other eighty-five per cent is in that part north of the Great Lakes and the Ottawa River," said Mr. Finlayson. It was pointed out that in this part of Ontario, lumbering formerly was an important industry, but it had all been destroyed and no measures of conservation had been entered upon.

Lumbering Like Agriculture

"In the north," said the speaker, "We are trying to educate the people to the knowledge that lumbering should be like agriculture a continuous crop if the proper precautions are taken." He continued by saying that woods such as spruce, poplar, and birch which formerly were not considered important have

WILL COMBINE CELEBRATIONS

$70 A MONTH.

"The Old Home Week and Centennial Celebrations was the official designation decided upon last evening by the Executive committee of the Old Home Week organization which is already swinging into action, in order that from June 28 to July 8 next hundreds of ex-citizens and their families may return to renew old friends and associations in Peterborough. The executive committee, meeting in the city clerk's offices had as its main purpose, the selection of an executive secretary. Out of six applications for the position, F. H. Dobbin was chosen, his duties to begin December 1, at a salary of $70.00 a month.

During the meeting, it was decided, on motion of Alderman Cotton, seconded by R. M. Glover, that each committee be requested to meet at an early date and bring to the executive, a suggested program and budget of expenses and that all orders which involve expenditure of money be signed by the chairman of the committee making the expenditure and by the chairman of the genehral Committee or the vice-chairman.

The appointment took place of a committee comprising Reeve Rye, the chairman and vice-chairman be to wait on the county council relative to the county's part in the celebration.

CHOIR WILL GO TO NEW YORK

Peterborough Musical Organization Will Compete in Madison Square Garden.

The Peterborough Male Voice Choir has accepted the invitation of the Associated Glee Clubs of America to take part in the Mammoth concert to be held in Madison Square Garden, New York, on May 24th of next year.

A singular honor has been bestowed upon the city of Peterborough by this invitation, when it is remembered that there are only two other organizations in Canada invited to participate.

The executive of the Choir went thoroughly into the matter and, in conference with some of the leading men of the city, decided to enter this great concert, also to participate in the competitions to be held on May 25th when 5,000 voices will compete for prizes. The Peterborough Choir hopes to return with one of the major awards.

A special committee has been appointed by the Choir to make all arrangements in connection with the trip and anyone interested in any way, financially or musically, is requested to get in touch with this committee, the members of which are Neil F. oPrter, Dr. C. H. Fulford, Harry Chenhall and Horace Hope. Already this committee has made plans to assist with the Old Home Week in Peterborough, in extensive advertising.

It is interesting to learn that this great concert will be broadcast over the radio and Peterborough citizens will have an opportunity of hearing own Male Voice Choir over the air from New York City.

The membership entry for the Choir closes on Tuesday next and anyone considering joining the Choir must make a decision by that date.

LITTLE CHANGE TO BE FOUND IN KING'S ILLNESS

Extreme Reticence Continues To Characterize Medical Bulletins Issued.

REGARDED FAVORABLE.

Reference To Temperature or Pulse and Strength Omitted in Last Statement.

LONDON, November 29 (Canadian Press). — Extreme reticence continued last night to characterize the medical announcements issued at Buckingham Palace on the illness of the King. Taken at its face value, last evening's bulletin from Sir Stanley Hewitt and Lord Dawson of Penn was regarded as favorable.

It was noted, however, that again nothing was said about the patient's temperature or pulse, and that even the rather stereotyped statement that "his strength was maintained" was omitted last evening. The bulletin said this:

Favorable Sign.

It was possible to infer from the statement "conditions are unchanged" that there had been no diminution in the King's strength. The fact that he had obtained sleep was hailed as another favorable sign.

The slightest straws of favorable indication are being grasped in London, so there was comment last night on the fact that the bulletin was issued earlier than had been usual, showing that the doctors had taken less time to decide its wording. Only an hour elapsed between their arrival at the Palace and the writing of the bulletin, whereas on recent evenings the interval has been about twice as long.

Letter to Cabinet.

The letter which the physicians sent to the Cabinet was written with the especial view of giving information to the public, and thereby allaying possible anxiety. In view of the rather full information in the letter, it was supposed that the doctors did not think it necessary to say more in last night's bulletin. In fact, it was unofficially said at the Palace that the physicians, who had remained with His Majesty only for about an hour, were very well satisfied with his condition.

The fact that no further complications have arisen in an illness whose progress by its nature is bound to be slow is a matter of great satisfaction.

No Change in Routine.

All these indications point to the King's illness pursuing a normal course, and the disposition of the public last night was to maintain a hopeful attitude. Satisfaction has been increased by the news that the Prince of Wales is hurrying home, it being felt quite proper that he should be in England during what may prove to be a long convalescence of his father. He would undertake the public functions in which the King would ordinarily officiate should His Majest go abroad to recuperate.

ROYAL BANK OF CANADA INCREASES PAID-UP CAPITAL

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—The Royal Bank of Canada announced yesterday that the directors had decided to increase the paid-up capital of the bank by issuing 50,000 new shares at $200. This increase will bring the bank's paid-up capital to $35,000,000 with a reserve fund of $35,000,000. The new shares will be allotted to shareholders of record as at the close of business yesterday, November 28, on the basis of one new share for each six shares now held.

BOATS WERE NOT LOWERED

Clearance Papers Should Have Been Refused Vestris' Captain.

HEARING NEARS END.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—Edward Keane, Inspector of Hulls in the United States Steamboat Inspection Service of the Department of Commerce, acknowledged on the witness stand yesterday that if he had made a truthful report of his inspection of the steamer Vestris it should not have been issued clearance papers on its last voyage, on which it sank.

Testifying at the Federal hearing into the disaster, Keane repeated testimony he gave last week at the Inspection Service's investigation that although he said in his official report that he had lowered the Vestris's lifeboats, he had not actually done so.

"That being one of the requirements," said United States Attorney Tuttle, who is conducting the Federal inquiry, "unless it was done clearance papers should not be issued, should they?"

"No," the Inspector acknowledged.

Tuttle produced Keane's official report of his inspection, a little red book, and read from it a printed question as to whether the lifeboats had been lowered. Opposite this question Keane had written "Yes."

Keane repeated his earlier testimony that he had not lowered the boats because at the time of the inspection the pier was one one side of the Vestris and cargo lighters on the other. If he attempted to lower the boats with a full load, he said, he was afraid that something might give way and a disaster would result.

He insisted, however, that he had satisfied himself that the lifeboats and their gear were in excellent condition.

After he had completed his testimony the hearing was adjourned until Friday, and Tuttle announced that he expected to complete the investigation on that day.

Pupil Bandits Just Robbed "For a Lark" Police Blames "Flaming Youth" In Crimes

BROCKTON, Mass., Nov. 29.—When youth flames in a staid old new England town it seems more lurid. With two high school boys under arrest accused of robbery and a high school girl in a sanitarium suffering from shock, all members of Brockton's most reputable families, there is "nothing unusual" here according to Police Inspector Chase, who said:

"It's just the spirit of modern youth, seeking thrills."

STORM RAGES ALONG COAST

Floods Threaten Town of Breedene When Dyke Breaks.

DISTRICTS VISITED.

BRUSSELS, November 29. — Canadian Press. — The storm after a lull again became violent last night all along the coast. An enormous breach was opened in a dyke near Bredene and Kursaal, Middelkerque, was threatened with destruction.

Troops were sent to aid the inhabitants in their desperate battle with the elements. The crisis in the floods is expected at one o'clock today.

The floods yesterday were subsiding in the valleys of the Meuse, Sambre and Ourthe. Queen Wilhelmina visited the stricken districts to personally superintendend the distribution of relief. She had some thrilling experiences while travelling in a military barge and at one point she transferred to a two wheeled cab and was driven for almost two hours through a fierce squall and a driving rain. The water stood twenty inches deep on the road.

When her Majesty at length regained the barge the rising tide and powerful currents rendered the oarsmen helpless to make headway and night was coming on when the queen finally made land.

CANADIAN FLIER REACHES HAVANA

Leonard S. Flo Will Rest For Few Days—May Fly Home.

HAVANA, November 29.—Leonard S. Flo brought his Sparton biplane down on the field at Camp Columbia at 3.52 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after a flight of 110 miles from Key West. He appeared to be suffering still from the sudden illness which forced him down at Key West the previous day in his attempted nonstop flight from Walkerville, Ont., to Havana.

The former army aviator required 1 ohur and 52 minutes for his flight yesterday because of the opposing winds. He was received by Colonel Jules Sanguily, commander of the aeredrome, and by Captain John B. Beam, United States Army, assigned here as executive officer to the Cuban aeronautical school. He also met and was congratulated by Lieutenant Benjamin Mendez, Columbian pilot, who is en route to Bogota.

Flo said he would remain here for several days, and was undecided whether to attempt a non-stop flight from Havana to Detroit. He said he would probably enter the aeroplane races from Detroit to Miami to be held in January.

COUNCIL PASSES FRONTAGE TAX

Domestic Water Supply For Campbellford is Also Thoroughly Discussed.

WOULD USE PUMPS.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 29. — This year's council are apparently not to be allowed to complete their term of office without at least one unexpcted issue at stake. The bomb shell that was cast into their midst several weeks ago developed a new phase last night when a special council meeting was held in the clerk's office for the special purpose of passing the by-laws fixing the rate of frontage tax for the properties on the paved streets. The domestic water supply for the town has been brought to the attention of the Department of Public Health, and a mandatory order issued with reference to it. The by-law governing the use of the water was passed in 1907 and states that the water is not for drinking or cooking purposes. But there is no penalty provided for infraction of the bylaw. It was recommended by the department that the water be chlorinated as a protective measure in case the water should be used inadvertantly for drinking purposes. This step was being considered by the council.

At the special meeting last night, Mrs. Roberts and an associate were present in the interests of the Gordon-Roberts Company of Brantford. In addressing the council Mr. Roberts introduced himself as representing a company whose business it was to develop municipal water supplies from deep wells. He said his company would guarantee the water supply both in quality and quantity, and that they worked on a no-water no-money basis. The water from deep wells was not subject to seasonable changes or any surface pollution. He believed the supply would not be difficult to obtain here, and their work would be guaranteed for one year from the date the system was turned over to the municipality. This guarante would be backed by a bond by an approved bond house.

Would Use Pumps.

The supply did not necessarily have to be drawn from an artesian well. The water would be pumped by turbine pumps. It would not come from any springs near the surface since all such water was sealed out of the well. The water was drawn from a reliable source deep down in the rock. The pumps used were capable of pumping into a reservoir, stand tank, stand pipe or directly into the mains. They were automatically controlled or could be manually controlled. They could be set to pump to any pressure desired, and the only attention they would require would be oiling about twice each week. They were such that they would not freeze in low temperatures whether in operation or idle. In the North country, he claimed, the company had installed pumps in nothing more than "dog houses," where they were exposed to the cold. The maintenance was negligible. One pump had run continuously for nine years, twenty-four hours each day. At the end of that time it was withdrawn for examination, and the greatest wear was measures as two one-thousandths of an inch. The pump was put back into service and would be re-examined again in five years' time. There had never been any failures with the pumps.

Would Receive Estimates.

Roberts was assured that his project would be considered and that the Council would be pleased to receive estimates from him regarding the cost of the work and installation. There was considerable discussion after the deputation had left the room, but no definite action was decided upon till the regular meeting Monday night.

At the opening of the meeting, Reeve Bygott announced that Camp-

DRAMATIST HAS REAL GIFT OF STAGE

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 29 — (Canadian Press).—James Lansdale Hodson is hailed here as a new dramatist who "has a real gift for the stage." It is in these words the well known critic E. A. Baughan speaks of Hodson and adds he feels "that strongly" about this Manchester journalist whose play, "These Fathers," depicting Lancashire life, was recently produced at the "Q" Theatre here.

"The promise in this play," says Baughan, "lies not so much in the story as in its charcterization and in its atmosphere of reality. All the people are alive and have been observed with keen insight. Shrewd old Jonathan Croft, manager of Jackson Fairbrother's cotton mill, and his still shrewder wife, Betsy, are fine creations. Wilfred Shine and Marie Ault revelled in their opportunities, as players of their experience will when they have the right stuff for their art.

"The weakness of the play lies in the treatment of old Fairbrother's character. To compel his sons to carry on his work he pretends that he is in financial difficulties. He even misleads his manager. Not until the end of the last act are we made to understand that he is desperate because the old firm will die out if his sons do not enter it.

"When he does become articulate there is a fine scene. He convinces Raymond and us that to run a business that gives employment to a number of men is a fine ideal. But we had not dreamed that was the mainspring of his actions. We had no idea that he was willing to gamble his good name in commerce in order that his sons should uphold the family tradition.

"However, the author can create character and make it live. He has humor, keen observation, and, what is still more rare kindly wisdom and Catholic sympathy. Those are great qualities, and possessing them, he should be able to write a finer and less theatrical play in its contrivance than 'These Fathers'."

SNOW FENCES BEING ERECTED

Department of Highways Will Endeavor to Keep Peterborough-Port Hope Road Open.

SEVERAL PLOWS

That every effort will be made by the Ontario Department of Highways to keep the highway between Peterborough and Port Hope open this winter was the information given to The Examiner by W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P. this morning. Snow fences are beginning to be placed along the highway and a number of snow plows will be stationed at intervals in the big effort to maintain the highway clear of snow Last year the department was very successful in the effort, there being only one day during the whole winter that traffic could not travel the full distance of the road on account of the snow. This winter unless there is an exceptional heavy fall at one time the road should be open every day.

CHARLOTTE ST. OPEN EVENINGS

SPRINGVILLE W. M. S. STAGE UNIQUE PLAY

"Grandmother's Recollections" is Played at Social Evening of Society.

MISSIONARIES NEED HELP

Great Demand is Being Made to Carry on Women's Work in China.

(Examiner Correspondence)

SPRINGVILLE, Nov. 28.—Antique original play "Grandmother's Recollections" was staged by the Springville W.M.S. at their social evening held on Friday, November 23rd in the basement of the church. Other splendid numbers contributed by local talent and by Miss A. Blanchard of Peterborough completed a most entertaining program. Mrs. M. Johnston, president of the society, opened the meeting. A hymn was sung, followed by prayer led by Rev. A. H. McConnachie. Mrs. Johnston then spoke briefly of the work of the W.M.S. and of the devastation in China—Missionaries that have been eighteen months away from Honan have now gone back to find that hospitals, homes and schools have been looted. There is therefore a possibility of all allocations being raised to meet the demand for money in China.

A cordial invitation was extended to any who wished to join the society and its work.

Rev. A. H. McConnachie, chairman of the evening, expressed a few fitting opening remarks and then proceeded with the program.

"Grandmothers' Recollections"

The first number, "Grandmother's Recollections"—was completely different in style from the usual "cut and dried" play. The ladies of the W.M.S. were dressed in old fashioned costume and appeared at Grandmother's home to chat and work as she recalled them doing in her girlhood days.

When the curtain was drawn a scene of older times was pictured on the platform —Grandmother (Mrs. A. Hunter) with her pretty cap and shawl sits to one side of the stage knitting with her little granddaughter (Ruth Hunter) leaning over the back of her chair talking to her and asking her questions about her youth. Rocking an antique cradle in the middle of the room is Anna Belle Lee (Mrs. J. Grandy) with her pink sunbonnet, quaint long dress and fancy apron. Behind her is a spinning wheel and to the other side of the platform sit two of grandmother's girlhood friends (Sally Barnes and Katie Lane) industriously patching quilts and knitting, while they visit (Mrs. T. A. Young and Mrs. D. Woods). Just outside of this room in front of a group of evergreen trees is a tripod on which hangs an old iron kettle over a bon-fire.

Ruth then brings an old album to her grandmother who tells interesting stories about each old friend and they appear as they did of yore.

Anna Belle Lee leaves the cradle and chords and sings, "The Song of the Orphans" then resumes her rocking. Sometimes during the play the baby cries and she succeeds in quieting it by singing lullabies and playing it tunes on the mouth organ.

Nancy Proudlove, Betsy Walpole and Mary Vanolkenburg (Mrs. A. Murray, Mrs. S. S. Staples and Mrs. R. Robertson), in lovely dresses of different old time styles card and pick wool chatting about their work.

Priscilla Auldin (Mrs. William Whitfield dressed in a long colourful tea gown and fancy caps, removes her jet beaded cape, sets down her old fashioned square bag and talks to those on the platform, creating the humor of the play with her clever remarks and songs while she spins into yarn the wool that Nancy has been carding. This yarn is made into a skein, then wound into a ball and given to Nancy to knit into mits for a Christmas gift. Priscilla's capacious pocket carries every necessary contrivance needed in the act. Later in the evening she gives a demonstration of candle making, placing the finished article to burn in an old candle holder and a fancy sheet iron lantern that was used over a century ago.

Delights Her Hearers

Mary Anne Stuart (Mrs. M. Johnston) the elocutionist of grandmother's young days, delights her hearers with a reading, "Nobody's Child." She is the lady of the play with her prim, pretty dress and hair dressed high in a "waterfall."

Sadie Belflower, (Mrs. O. Murray) with her long skirt and bustle and Molly McGillis (Mrs. A. Bowles) with her steeled waist, full skirt and tight sleeves come in with their mat braiding and crocheting to join the sociable group.

Susanna Washington (Miss Wilson), who knows just how soap should be made, works by her fire and kettle stirring, dipping and testing all the time the play is in progress until at last perfectly satisfied with the results of her labours she gives each lady on the platform a sample of her soap and lectures in Irish dialect of the usefulness of good soft soap. Her costume was typical of her occupation with her long bright striped gathered skirt, her big sun bonnet and apron. The last to appear in the group is Aribelle Plairfair (Mrs. George Whitfield) who sits in their midst and tells them a thrilling story of pioneer days.

Rebecca Rosemont (Miss Annie Brown and Hortensa Langley, (Miss Helen Whittington) two other members of the society sat dressed in pretty costumes at a table near the door and sold tickets for the evening's performance.

Other Numbers

The other numbers on the program were all of excellent quality: Mouth organ selection by Walter Brown; solo "Loves Old Sweet Song" by Miss M. Southam; reading by Miss H. Staples; instrumental number by Clairemont Morgan; dialogue by Opal Johnson and Mary Kelk, solo by M. Herron; reading by Mrs. Gordon McIntosh; solo (Annie Laurie) Miss A. Blanchard.

Lunch was served consisting of an abundance of cake, pie, tea and sandwiches and a social time was enjoyed.

A table containing numerous antique articles was a centre of interest during the social hour, also several of the platform furnishings.

A Swift (an apparatus used for winding yarn, a power horn, a paisley shawl, a set of candle snuffers and an old rocking chair all very old and each coming from Ireland were there to be seen. They are owned by Miss Wilson. She also brought a Merina wool shawl that was bought in New York more than one hundred years ago.

A glass bread plate that came from Ireland about 1800 belongs to Mrs. M. Clark.

A pretty lamp (two lamps on one stand chandelier effect) owned by Mrs. M. Johnston is now sixty years old. It was once of her mother's wedding presents, (Mrs. Rispin of Brantford).

A shawl brought from Cumberland, England in 1816, an old wooden cradle made more than one hundred years ago and a gun used in the Mackenzie Rebellion by a forefather have now been handed down to the fourth generation. They are owned by Mrs. William Whitfield.

winding yarn, a powder horn, a by T. H. Blanchard of Peterborough was brought to this country in 1815 by his grandfather and was the only kind of light used in saw mills at that time.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—Extreme dullness again marked the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday. The only business transacted was a few sales of odd loads of wheat and barley.

Owing to the lower prices ruling for wheat in the Winnipeg market, local spot cash prices for car lots were reduced one cent per bushel. Manitoba No. 6 wheat sold at 96c, and feed wheat at 92c per bushel. There was no change in other grains.

In sympathy with the weakness that prevailed in the cash wheat situation at Winnipeg, a weaker feeling developed in the local market for spring wheat grades of flour and prices were reduced twenty cents per barrel. The demand was fair. Winter wheat grades were unchanged.

A feature of the millfeed trade was the stronger feeling that developed for bran and shorts and prices were marked up one dollar per ton. On the other hand middlings were weaker and were reduced two dollars per ton. Standard grades of rolled oats were unchanged under a moderate demand.

The demand for fresh and storage eggs continued good and values were well maintained. Receipts were 678 cases.

Prices for all grades of potatoes were well maintained under a good demand. New Brunswick Green Mountains sold at 50c to 55c per 90 lbs., in bulk; Prince Edward Island Cobblers at 70c in bags; and Prince Edward Island Green Mountains at 80c per 90 lbs. in bags.

Canadian beans sold at $5.20 per bushel, wholesale, delivered, in bags. No imported beans were offered.

A moderate amount of business was done in butter and values were steady. Receipts were 79 packages.

The cheese trade was dull and featureless. Receipts were 892 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—Rains which ended drought in southern Argentina eased wheat values yesterday, but the effect was largely countered-balanced through evening-up to prepared for to-day's holiday. Another influence helping to steady the wheat market was talk that convening of Congress next Monday would be likely to focus trade attention on farm relief.

Closing prices for wheat were easy, ¼ to ⅜c net lower, with corn ¼ to ⅝c up; oats ¼ to ½c advance, and provisions varying from 5c setback to a rise of 17 cents.

It was noticeable that although the Chicago wheat market proved to be responsive yesterday to news of beneficial downpours in parts of Argentina, where crops have been suffering on account of excessive heat and because of urgent need of rain, the price downturns here were much less pronounced than at Liverpool. To a considerable extent, the relative strength of the market here was associated with comprehensive advices indicating that there is much less wheat now in United States country elevators than at this time last year.

Moreover prices for all grades of domestic wheat in practically all markets were shown to be lower than a year ago, and the assertion was made that farmers generally are in better financial condition than they were them. Under such circumstances statements attracted widespread notice that the "hold your wheat" movement advocated by Secretary Jardine is likely to keep the grain on farms until prices improve or money is needed for spring work.

Meanwhile, general export demand yesterday for wheat from North America appeared slack, but Winnipeg dispatches said Europe continued to be a heavy buyer of Canadian low-grade wheat.

Prevailing moist conditions throughout the greater part of corn belt territory gave an incentive for purchasing of corn future delivers. On the other hand, numerous holders were selling out to realize profits. Except at an advance, country offerings of corn to arrive were small, especially southwest. Oats were in good demand.

Provisions sympathized with upturns in the value of hogs, but nearby deliveries of lard tended to decline on account of expectance that about 12,000,000 pounds of lard will be delivered on December contracts.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—Receipts of fresh eggs in spot continue light, and the market remains firm. Dealers are quoting country shippers for ungraded eggs, delivered, cases returned, at extras, 60c to 63c per dozen; firsts, 50c to 54c; seconds, 32c to 33c; pullet extras, 43c to 45c.

Fresh eggs are selling to retailers at: Extras, 70c; firsts, 64c; seconds, 37c, and storage at, extras, 42c to 44c; firsts, 39c to 40c; seconds, 36c. Storage eggs are moving into consumption steadily, although the market on storage stocks has been somewhat unsettled as a result of the unsatisfactory situation in the United States. It is the general impression here that receipts of fresh eggs will show an increase from now on.

A review of the current egg situation by The Egg and Poultry Market Review states, in part, as follows:

"The increased production of fresh eggs in British Columbia and the larger shipments now moving from that Province to the Eastern markets is having its bearing on market conditions and in comparison to the rapid rises which featured fresh egg markets a few weeks ago, prices are now holding steady. There is a feeling in some quarters that prices have about reached the peak. This, of course, should not be construed as meaning that decline may be expected shortly. Last year paying prices at Toronto reached their highest level about the week before the end of November and maintained these prices for the first week and a half of December.

"With reference to the American situation the difficulty is that if a further break in the United States markets occurred imports would probably come in freely and have a serious bearing on prices. Many dealers are, therefore, making a strenuous effort to unload their stocks. Of course, a further break may not come and it may be that the present reasonable prices of storage eggs in the United States will have the effect of increasing consumption so greatly that stocks will be reduced rapidly. There is no question but that consumption of eggs in Canada was never as good at this season as it has been this year."

Butter continues to follow a steady course, with a fair movement of finest creamery reported at mid-week in a jobbing way. Dealers are adhering closely to a quotable range of from 40¾c to 41c for No. 1 pasteurized creamery solids. Undergrades are selling at a cent a pound less than for finest grades. There is talk of firmer prices in the curb market in the near future.

Cheese was unchanged, with dealers reporting a slow movement at a price range of from 21¼c to 21¾c per lb. for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government graded, delivered Toronto.

NORTHERN ONTARIO

come into tremendous value for the production of newsprint. The industry is now only second to agriculture in value in the province.

He spoke of the tremendous developments that have followed in the wake of the securing of pulp wood. The large Spruce Falls Company's plant at Kapuskasing making an investment of $28,000,000.00 and which will soon turn out 500 tons of newsprint every day. The New York times will receive 300 tons of this paper daily. The town of Kapuskasing is a model town having the best hotel, hospital and clubhouse north of Toronto. Iroquois Falls was pointed out as another example of the great developments taking place where a whole train load of newsprint leaves every night. Describing the town Mr. Finlayson said that the whole town was owned by the company and there were only three ratepayers, the Royal Bank, the Orange Lodge and the Knight of Columbus. A Council is elected by the employees, everyone is an employee of the company, but there are no money by-laws all expenses are paid by the company. "The newsprint industry in the north is the only thing that is giving Canada favourable balance of trade with the United States," said the speaker.

The speaker asked that the people in this part of Ontario consider what the people up there are doing for the province. The department, it was said, was asked to replace the macadam road leading from the Ferguson Highway the distance of six miles into Kirkland Lake by a cement road. At a cost of $400,000, it was pointed out by the speaker the government by the new road had lead into a field worth in producing mines alone $164,000,000. Timmins, a city almost the size of Peterborough with everything modern was considered as another example of the growth of the north.

Airplanes Helping Advancement

Clear proof of the great benefit of the airplane in prospecting the richest layer of pre-cambrian, mineral rock, in the world that stretching across the continent in Canada, was given by the speaker. The comparison of the distance of 1,000 miles that can now be covered by the prospector by airplane in one day to the former difficult 25 miles covered by canoe. The audience was asked to think what this use of airplane will mean in the advancement of the north. Illustrations were given too, of the valuable part the canoe is playing in the forest patrols for the protection of the great timber tracts from fire. Fires are now discovered by the use of airplane and stamped out in short order by the use of airplanes that formerly would never even have been found until long after the damage had been done.

The necessity for the placing of good settlers on the rich farms in the Clay Belt which the speaker considered to be one of the finest farming districts in Canada was stressed. The difficulties encountered by these settlers were told but for a man willing to work it would give rich reward. The rains have spoiled this season's harvest for many of the farmers in that district and it was urged that the audience consider the necessity of sending some help to the people in want.

In finishing the speaker remarked that all the best orders being received by factories in southern Ontario were coming from the north and thus as the north prospered so too would the older manufacturing part of the province.

COUNCIL PASSES

bellford had been mentioned to an American firm as a possible location for a mill. The firm is located in New York State, and its directors are desirous of obtaining a Canadian factory site. The requirements mentioned pointed to this town as an ideal location. The Reeve was instructed to reply to the communication he had received. The industrial committee will also see that the firm receive, without delay, all information regarding factory sites, power, labor, schools, churches and the town generally. It was intimated that every inducement that could possibly be offered, would be presented to the firm. At the present time the name of the company was not available for publication. But it was freely used in the Council chamber.

A series of by-laws to provide for the assessing of the property fronting on the paved streets was the last item of business to be dealt with. The various rates range from seventy cents per foot frontage to $1.53. The Corporation of the town of Campbellford is to meet the remainder of the expense. The by-laws were unanimously passed, signed and sealed and the Council adjourned.

DESERVES MORE CONSIDERATION.

The granting of a permit for the erection of a service station on George street opposite Confederation Square is a question that might well receive some consideration.

From the viewpoint of the public interest, the site does not appeal as desirable.

Its proximity to the Public Library and to Confederation Square leaves it open to objection, and there is the further consideration that if Peterborough some day erects a new city hall that particular section of George street is likely to be in demand as a site for the municipal building.

Confederation Square is a beauty spot that is to be further beautified, and on it or around it, in addition to the war memorial, are some of the city's most pretentious buildings, the Armouries, the Collegiate Institute, the Public Library, the Y.M.C.A., and George Street United and Murray Street Baptist Churches.

To allow this municipal square to be invaded by a service station, no matter how neat or ornate it may be, is not the sort of town planning that develops the city beautiful.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC MINISTER.

The presence of Hon. Wm. Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, at the Conservative "at home" last night gave a large number of Peterborough people an opportunity to hear the story of Ontario's timber wealth, and learn of what is being done and what must be done to conserve these rich resources.

It was a fascinating story, and Mr. Finlayson told it well, with a warmth of color that revealed his enthusiastic interest in the subject.

With him administering the affairs of the Department of Lands and Forests is most obviously a labor of love, and it is not surprising then to know that he is generally hailed as a most able Minister whose direction of his important office has been marked by foresight and vision.

Mr. Finlayson's campaign for the protection of Ontario's forests, his reforestation scheme by which settlers are being moved from poor land in Haliburton and other counties in Old Ontario to the New Ontario clay belt and the land thus vacated is to be devoted to raising a new timber crop, his success in raising the aerial forestry patrol to a commendable state of efficiency so that visiting experts have pronounced the patrol the best in the world—all stamp the administration of Ontario's Department of Lands and Forests as progressive and efficient, and the Minister's splendid address last evening did nothing to destroy that impression.

HIS 48TH NOMINATION.

Public office may be productive of more thorns than roses and public officials usually receive a maximum of criticism and a minimum of praise, yet after there seems to be a certain fascination about the political game.

How else can be explained the fact than for the forty-eighth year in succession Alderman Patrick Meehan has been nominated for civic office in St. Thomas?

The "Grand Old Man" of the St. Thomas Council must come very close to holding the record for continuous municipal service, and there will be regret not only in his home city but generally that his nomination on this occasion was merely a complimentary one, and that the veteran alderman, who has been ill since early in the year, is not likely to be a candidate.

The fact that the nomination proceedings this year were the first Mr. Meehan had missed in half century is a remarkable commentary upon his interest in municipal affairs and his willingness to serve.

Most communities are fortunate in having some citizens of the Meehan type, even if they do not succeed in compiling such a long record, and it is well that they are to be found nearly everywhere.

Their public-spiritedness goes a long way toward making up for the apathy and indifference shown by so many citizens in regard to municipal affairs.

TO-NIGHT'S MEETING.

Another meeting of returned soldiers will be held to-night in the Legion Hall, and it is expected that the major topic of discussion will be the question of the ultimate disposition of the German guns, which have been the storm centre of the present controversy.

The veterans will have to decide whether they would prefer to have the guns returned to Confederation Square, retained where they are on the Canadian Legion property, or placed on some other site considered more suitable than those already mentioned.

The Examiner is of the opinion that the decision arrived at by the ex-service men at this meeting should be accepted by the City Council and acted upon.

They were the men who helped to capture the guns in the first place, and they should be the men to decide where the trophies should be placed.

It is regrettable that this week's episode should have occurred.

It has stirred up feeling at home and given Peterborough unenviable publicity abroad.

It can only do permanent harm, however, if the controversy is maintained, and in this connection there is reason to believe that the air might be cleared considerably were Mayor Donne and Ald. Greene, whose responsibility for the removal of the guns has been apparently established, to ask permission to address to-night's meeting and frankly discuss this question with the war veterans.

Ex-service men are reasonable beings, ready to give a fair hearing and fair consideration to matters fairly discussed before them, and the Mayor and Ald. Greene have never showed a tendency in this or other matters to run away from an issue.

There is nothing to be gained by making this controversy the cause of permanent warfare, dividing a community that should be united.

A mistake has been made, The Examiner believes, but those responsible, we are equally convinced, are men enough to admit the fact and accept the responsibility, just as we are sure that the returned soldiers will be a fair and impartial jury.

THE WORTH OF PAGEANTRY.

(From the London Morning Post)

The pageant of the Opening of Parliament by the Sovereign in person is an event that reminds us how, in one respect at least, we are happy beyond other nations. We have not only a historic past, but we have at command the outward and visible emblems of it. We can stage a State ceremonial even in these days whose setting, whose equipment, and whose principal figures bear witness to the far-off origins of our national polity. The King, with his retinue of officers of State, bearing the Sword, the Cap of Maintenance, and the other symbols of sovereignty; the Throne on which he is seated, amid the Peers of the Realm in crimson robes—all these things are impressive to the imagination, not only because of their pomp and dignity, but because also of their historic significance. Looking at such a spectacle, we English can realize that we are greater than we know: that to our place in the world's story we have indeed titles manifold; that we are rooted deeply in an ancient past, and are the heirs of a noble heritage. In no other modern State can the continuity of national life and national institutions be so completely manifested.

No doubt, to the crowds who throng to witness such a pageant as the Royal Procession to the Palace of Westminster, it is the picturesque and not the historic value that is most perceptible. But the influence of pageantry is by no means to be despised. It serves to lift from the public mind the oppression of the commonplace—of the dull, grey life, in which the unheroic and the familiar alone are perceptible. That awful vision which Mr. Sinclair Lewis has made so vivid in "Main Street," was inspired by an environment in which there is nothing to break the dead level of existence, nothing to kindle the imagination, nothing to suggest that there is anything different or better in the whole wide world. An old country may in many respects be at a disadvantage as compared with a younger one; but, if old traditions and survivals may sometimes be an encumbrance, they may also hide a precious jewel in their head. They enlarge the mental horizon; they encourage a sense of perspective and proportion; and, above all, they inculcate a pride which is duly qualified by reverence.

FREIGHT RATES.

Canadian shippers who are apt to complain of freight charges imposed by the railway companies of the Dominion are given food for thought in the letter written to the Chicago Journal of Commerce by a Montana farmer, in which he asks why it is "that American railroads charge so much more for carrying wheat from here to Lake Superior than the Canadian railways charge just across the line." Anticipating the answer that the Canadian National Railway is subsidized by the Government, and that it makes little difference whether it loses money or not, since the taxpayers are called upon to make up the difference, the writer says: "But what about the Canadian Pacific—a privately owned railroad whose stock pays $10 a share and is selling in the market around 230?" In reply, reference is made to a speech recently given by Mr. Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern Railway Company, in which he attempts to answer the question. Mr. Budd based his arguments on the records of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which maintained that the National Railways operate "most of the weaker and less prosperous lines," the burden being borne by the Government, so that the C.P.R. also is put in a position to charge lower rates than would be possible "if rates were made in Canada, as they are in this country, with a view to providing a fair return upon the aggregate value of all railway property, including the weak lines as well as the strong." If the American lines had the "subsidies and consideration" the Canadian lines receive from the Government they would be glad to carry at the same rates, it is asserted. The tax bill of the Canadian system is only about a sixth as much per mile as the United States' carriers have to pay, it is asserted. Whatever may be the force of these arguments, it is apparent that the Canadian shipper reaps the advantage. It is well known, of course, that rates are very much lower in this country than in the United States. As for the increased cost of operation which is dwelt upon—the higher wages paid employees, the dearer fuel and lumber and supplies of all kinds—the Canadian lines suffer equally with the American in this respect.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The three German field pieces presented to Peterborough by the Militia Department are the most famous guns in Canada at the present time.

Next Monday's meeting of the City Council is not likely to go without an audience.

Canada's business last month, says the Globe, was two and one-half times what it was in the same month last year, and a year ago it seemed almost too good to be true.

A Thought

TRUE LIVING

To be alive is to be sensitive to our surroundings. The degree of our being alive is measured by the range of this sensitiveness. To be alive only to what the sense show us is to live the life of an animal. To be alive to the world of general truths and historic interests is to attain to human living. To be alive to the spiritual elements of our surroundings is to rise above the mere human to the perfect life.

GOD'S MINUTE.

He ever liveth to make intercession for them.—Heb. 7:25.

Almighty and everlasting God, because of Thy good hand upon us in mercy, we have been spared during another night. Help us to trust in Thee, to have no will but Thy will, and to desire to be only what Thou wouldst have us be. We pray that Thou wilt show us how large is Thy pity, how great is Thy love, and how infinite is Thy goodness; give us to feel that Thou hast called us with a holy calling; that Thou hast put us here to do Thy pleasure, and hereafter to enjoy Thee forever. Breathe into us the spirit of prayer and teachableness, and enable us to give earnest heed to the truths taught in Thy Word. We thank Thee for Thy holy Word, for Thy Church, and for all the ordinances of Thy house, and for the way of salvation through Christ. We bless Thee, our Heavenly Father, for all Thy gifts, but above all for Thine unspeakable gift, our Saviour, Jesus Christ. We rejoice in the assurance that He is now interceding for us. May the weary and heavy-laden come unto Thee and find red unto their souls. We pray that Thou wilt send forth laborers into Thy harvest. Be Thou to all Thine own as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Speedily fill the whole earth with Thy glory. Make us all, O Christ, joyful in hope, patient in suffering, active in service and abounding in love. We ask all these blessings in the name of Jesus Christ Thy Son, our Saviour. Amen.

BROKEN

Impulsively he had pushed back his chair when the door opened to admit Mrs. Ardron.

"Giles, please, please go upstairs. Sadie is behaving like a mad woman. I suppose the morphia they gave her has worn off. It does wear off quite quickly with some people I know. I remember once when they gave it to me, your father said—or was it Rodney's father—I quite forget—"

"I'll go at once," Giles said curtly.

He passed her and went out of the room. He felt cold and shaken as if he had been roughly awakened from a feverish dream to a bitter reality.

As he went upstairs he could hear Sadie's voice, high-pitched and hysterical, and he stopped for a moment, his hand clutching the stair-rail, a terrible sense of loss and irrevocable fate gripping his heart. He and Julie had been shown such beautiful happiness and it had been snatched from them.

Theirs might have been such a perfect love, and it had been brought down to anger and bitterness.

Words which Julie had said to him in her frantic pain and despair came back to him accusingly: "I never wanted you to come into my life. It was you who followed me."

That was true enough. His had been the fault, and yet they had both got to pay. With all his love and longing to save her pain, he could do nothing.

But even her passionate words and sobbing had been easier to bear than that last silence, when she would give no sign, would not look at him.

Why had he left her then? His heart told him now that he should have stayed. Supposing he never saw her again? He thrust the thought determinedly from him and went on to his wife's room.

Sadie was sitting on the side of the bed, her thin hands desperately clutching the brass rail. Her hair was all-rough and tumbled and there were crimson patches on her cheeks.

When she heard Chittenham's voice, she turned her head towards the door and stared at him with her wild, blind eyes.

"So you've come at last, have you!" she shrilled at him. "I suppose you've no use for me either, now I can't see."

She beat her hands frantically on the brass rail, and the nurse who had been standing beside her caught and held them.

"Don't do that, you'll hurt yourself. If you would only be calm and brave! You make things worse with all this hysteria. Besides, you mustn't give up hope. You know what the doctor told you.

Sadie burst into wild sobbing.

"There's no hope for me, I know that I shall never see again as long as I live. I shall just sit here in the darkness till I die—till I die—and nobody cares. It doesn't matter to anyone in all the world what becomes of me."

Like all selfish people she had already forgotten how very little she had ever troubled about anyone or anything as long as she had been left free to go her own way.

She checked her sobbing with a sharp breath and raised her face with pathetic eagerness to hear what he had to say. She tore her hands from the nurse's grasp and groped in front of her till she touched Chittenham's coat, then she clutched it feverishly and began sobbing once more.

"Don't leave me, Giles, be kind to me! After all, I am your wife."

She forgot that for months it had suited her to ignore the fact of their marriage; her one desire now was to secure something to herself out of the wreckage lying about her.

Chittenham looked at the nurse.

"Please leave us."

When she had gone he sat down beside his wife and put an arm roundher.

"Sadie, you must try to be brave and listen to reason. Everything possible is being done and will be done, you know that."

He was miserably conscious of the inadequacy of his own words—he longed to be kind to her and help her At that moment he felt that he would have given ten years of his life to have loved her. Comfort is such a poor, difficult thing unless it is driven by love. He knew how differently he would have felt had Julie been in the same tragic position, how easily he could have helped and soothed her with his love—but this girl—

Sadie was sobbing again.

"You don't really care for me—nobody cares for me. Though I can't see you I know by the feel of your arm that you're just trying to be kind, while all the time you're impatient and want to get away."

"Sadie, don't imagine things, my dear."

"I'm not imagining it. It's the truth and you know it is. You don't love me, and you never did."

Chittenham took his arm away.

"If it comes to that," he said, driven beyond endurance, "I can't remember that you—" Then he broke off compassionately. "Don't let us quarrel, Sadie—I'll do anything in the world for you, you know that."

She cut in hysterically.

"Except live with me I suppose. I know you won't do that."

"You're unfair to me—when have I said so?"

"You don't need to say so, I know it without you saying so—I can feel it."

She made a curious clutching gesture with her hands as if at something which was only real and tangible to herself.

"It's all about me—everywhere! I know that you're just trying to be kind—that you don't really care." Then with sudden revulsion of feeling she turned and clung to him again.

"Don't leave me alone, Giles. You don't know what it's like to be left alone in this hideous darkness. I shall go mad if you leave me. I've often felt impatient with blind people myself—it's bored me to have to talk to them and try to be nice to them, but I know what it's like now, and I wish I'd been kinder. I suppose it's a punishment—and yet why should I have it—I've never done anyone any harm—"

"Sadie, if you won't be quiet I shall have to go away. You know you were told to be perfectly quiet."

"Quiet!" Her voice rose to a scream. "How can I be quiet when I am going mad with the horror of it all?" Then as she felt Chittenham rise to his feet as if to leave her, she controlled herself with a violent effort.

"All right, all right—I'll be good—anything—anything if you'll just stay with me,if you'll just be kind!"

"My dear, I want to be kind to you, but you make it so difficult for me."

There was a little silence, which Sadie broke pitifully.

"There! I'm not crying any more, am I? I'm quite quiet now. Please kiss me, Giles."

"You didn't kiss my lips," Sadie said, then she laughed brokenly. "Never mind! I suppose it's all I deserve."

She took her hands away from him and folded them in her lap to hide their trembling.

"Well," she said, after a moment, as he did not speak. "Well, what am I going to do—or what are you going to do with me? I can't stay here, can I?"

Giles explained as gently as he could. In the morning he would take her away, he said.

She interrupted quickly

"Where will you take me? To be with you?"

"Not at once. To a nursing home. I have arranged for a specialist to see you."

She interrupted again.

"It will be no use. I know it won't. I'm finished."

"Don't say that, Sadie."

She shuddered from head to foot.

"Well, go on—and after wards, what then?"

"Then we must see. We must make some arrangements."

"Arrangements! What for? For me to be led about by a nurse all the rest of my life?" She laughed shrilly. "Why don't you buy me a dog and a ticket with 'Pity the Blind' printed on it?" And once again her terrible hysterical sobbing began.

Chittenham felt that he could bear no more. He called to the nurse and made his escape. He had never imagined anything so tragic as this last half hour had been.

He paced up and down the library at his wits' end to know what to do. It was long past eleven now and he had all the hours of the night to drag through.

If there were indeed no hope of Sadie ever being able to see again, how could he possibly leave her?

It would be inhuman, impossible, and yet to live with her—

Another knock at the door.

Chittenham turned impatiently.

"Oh, come in, come in!"

"A gentleman to see you, sir. I said you were very much engaged and could see no one, but he insists, sir, and says he will wait if he has to wait all night. The gentleman is a Mr. Schofield, sir."

Schofield—the man whom Julie had said she would marry.

Why had he come here? What had happened? Had Julie—had anything—

His heart seemed to stop beating with dread. It was only with a supreme effort that he could control himself sufficiently to speak.

"Ask Mr. Schofield to come in at once."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1928.

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate)

Until late in the day adverse planetary aspects rule, according to astrology, which reads ominous signs in the skies.

The day may be especially trying to women who may have a sense of fatigue and may find whatever they try to do impeded or thwarted.

This is read as not particularly lucky for weddings, since parents and relatives are likely to be captious and critical.

Young folk will do well to avoid quarrels and contentions which may be readily brought about under this sway. College rivalries may be peculiarly intense at this time.

It is a most unlucky day to seek employment or to ask any sort of business co-operation. Persons who exercise authority may be difficult to convince.

While the stars seem to presage relief for many who are idle the winter may bring much suffering in certain quarters. The seers counsel economy among all classes except the wealthy.

The evening is read as an auspicious time for financial conferences and budget-making, but not for decisions regarding large investments.

Changes in the character of women's clubs are foretold and severe condemnation for certain methods of operation are indicated.

While they are not to occupy fields long assigned to men in the national program women are to contribute tremendous aid in a world crisis, it is foretold.

As the year reaches the closing month the stars promise prosperity and wonderful progress for the United States.

Persons whose birthdate it is may expect good news in the coming year which will be most eventful. They should draw a line separating play from work.

Children born on this day probably will have distinct artistic ability. Many painters are subject to this sign of Sagittarius, which is supposed to impart originality, independence and strong individuality.

Uncle Wiggily

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE HUNGRY BIRDS

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

On Thanksgiving Day, after he had eaten a good meal in his hollow stump bungalow, Uncle Wiggily Longears hopped out over the fields and through the woods to see if he might find an adventure.

"I don't care about meeting the Fox, the Wolf or the Bob Cat," said the rabbit gentleman to himself as he hopped along, "but if I should happen to see Mr. Twistytail, the pig, or Uncle Butter, the goat, I would ask them what kind of a Thanksgiving dinner they had and I would tell them what kind I had and we would be happy together."

But though Uncle Wiggily looked this way and that way and the other way he saw none of his friends.

"I suppose they ate so much that they are lying back in their easy chairs and having a little sleep," said Mr. Longears speaking aloud as he stood under a green pine tree. He saw no Bad Chaps so he was not afraid to stand still and talk out loud. "It is a wonderful thing to have enough to eat," went on the rabbit gentleman.

And then, all of a sudden, a voice that sounded like an echo spoke and asked:

"Who ever has enough to eat? We never do, that's sure!"

For a moment Uncle Wiggily thought it might be the Fox, after all, who had sneaked up behind him. But, looking around, the rabbit saw some birds fluttering along over the ground.

"Are you hungry?" the bunny gentleman asked them.

"Indeed we are!" said the largest bird who seemed to be a sort of leader. "Since summer has gone and winter has come, we hardly ever have enough to eat. And we are not the sort of birds that fly down South where it is always summer. Oh, we are so hungry!"

"That is too bad!" said Mr. Longears. "I never like to see any of my animal friends hungry, especially at Thanksgiving time. So if you will wait here I'll go to my bungalow and get a lot of crumbs that I will scatter for you to pick up."

"That will be fine!" chirped the largest bird. "Then we will no longer be hungry."

It did not take Uncle Wiggily long to hop to his bungalow and get from Nurse Jane many crumbs and scraps from the table which he knew would be good food for the hungry birds. When he scattered the crumbs on the ground the birds flew down to pick them up. And they thanked Mr. Longears for being so kind.

"There will be enough for us to eat all next week," said some of the birds. "My! What a rich rabbit Uncle Wiggily is! He gave us all this food and yet he had plenty left for himself."

Uncle Wiggily felt very happy and gay that day as he hopped home. For it always makes a rabbit feel happy to give happiness to others, such as feeding hungry birds.

"And I need not worry about those birds tomorrow," thought Uncle Wiggily as he went to bed, "for there are enough crumbs left on the ground for them to pick up if I don't feed them again."

But early next morning, before Uncle Wiggily was out of bed, there came a tapping on his window and, looking there, he saw the big bird, one of those whom he had fed the day before.

"What's the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Oh, we are so hungry!" chirped the bird.

"Why don't you eat some of the crumbs I gave you yesterday?" asked the rabbit. "Pick up the crumbs off the ground under the pine tree."

"Alas! We cannot do that!" said the bird. "For in the night it snowed and froze and now all those lovely crumbs are covered with ice that is so hard we cannot pick through it with our beaks. So we are starving again. Will you help us once more?"

"Of course I will!" cried Uncle Wiggily. Hopping out of bed he quickly dressed and, even before having his own breakfast, he went to the kitchen and found a lot more crumbs and scraps which he scattered on top of the snow around his bungalow for the hungry birds to eat. They flocked around with fluttering wings and as they picked up the crumbs they sang a song of thanksgiving for Mr. Longears. And each morning after that the bunny rabbit scattered crumbs for the hungry birds, especially when there was snow or ice on the ground.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY A BABY COMES TO HAVE PERSONALITY

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Frequently a tiny baby is referred to as "it." This is quite correct. No one is born a personality. Personality is not inherited; it is an achievement. No one can be classed as a person who cannot distinguish his hands and his feet from his rattle and his milk bottle. The tiny infant is not conscious of being an individual apart from his surroundings.

The baby does not know at the outset that he is himself and not somebody else. Self-consciousness and self-identification are a slow and intricate process which is gradually learned through experience and contacts.

Self knowledge comes about in this way. A first impulse is started in a sense organ and goes through some combination of cells. Then another impulse goes through a totally different combination. Several or many centers are thus organized. Finally, some of the impulses combine and a connection is established between different brain centers.

Gradually these centers become so closely connected that it is impossible for any impulse to travel through any center without passing through cells that have been traversed before. Thus it becomes impossible for the child to have an unrelated mental experience. Every experience contains elements that are like some other previous experience and a continuity of mental life is achieved.

This continuity of mental life is one of the essentials of a personality. The baby reaches this point of his development by the time he finds his hands, or has come to realize that his hands belong to him. Ordinarily self identification is attained before the age of one year and frequently at the age of nine months.

Curiously enough the child discovers himself as a distinct personality by first learning the important fact that others are not himself. He learns to distinguish others from himself before he obtains an idea of his own personality. Then that which does not fall in the class of others belongs to himself and is recognized as his personality.

Feeble-minded children never achieve a personality because they never attain the knowledge of self necessary to distinguish themselves from others and from the objects around them.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

THE BLEST

I looked around the little church
On that Thanksgiving Day,
The hearts of other men to search,
To hear the words they say.
And then it seemed, of all the host,
The gladdest at the feast
Were not the ones who had the most
But those who had the least.

It seemed to me one woman's eyes,
Though dark the dress she wore,
Had caught the gleaming of the skies,
Had glimpsed the other shore.
It seemed that those who nothing lost
Had nothing ever gained;
To her whose loved the stream had crossed
A finer faith remained.

And then, I think, I saw the worth
Of this Thanksgiving morn:
'Twas not the riches of the earth,
The wealth of wheat or corn.
It seemed a day today for those
Who God's own garment touch,
Who have so little, as he knows,
And yet who have so much.

For who are rich and who are poor
And who are greatly blessed?
I know that one whose faith was sure
Seemed richer than the rest.
'Twas not a day to come to boast
How fields and flocks increased;
For they with faith had much the most,
And those without the least.

News Fom the Miners

Through Selloway, Mills & Company

Noranda.

Although it is not generally known, it is reported from Noranda that a narrow flat lying vein of good grade chalcopyrite was cut in Noranda's new No. 4 shaft below the 100 foot level. Although the vein, only about 3 feet thick, is not particularly important in itself, it indicates the existence of copper in that section of the property and opens up further possibilities of finding new ore in unexplored territory.

Amulet.

Splendid progress is being made in crosscuttig at this property from the 250 foot level, as crosscuts both east and west are now in more than 130 feet in each direction. One diamond drill is still being used endeavoring to delimit the "C" orebody from the 150 foot level, which so far is exceeding expectations in that copper is predominating over the zinc content.

Abana.

It was announced from Montreal yesterday by Chas. Spearman, consulting engineer, that underground work has again been resumed. Crosscutting on the No. 2 orebody at the No. 3 crosscut, which lies 300 feet east of the diabase dyke, indicates that the width here will be equally as great as the preceding two crosscuts which are reported as having showed 35 feet of high grade copper and zinc ore averaging above $30 a ton. The development work in progress here is for the purpose of fully ascetraining the length and width of this body east of the dyke, which was drilled from the surface some time ago to a point 150 feet further east than the No. 3 crosscut. The new Diesel engine is handling the 700 cu. ft. Rand motor driven compressor and the 1,000 ft. capacity electric hoist very smoothly.

Falconbridge.

Mr. J. A. McRae of the Mail and Empire has the following to say re Falconbridge:

"The possibilities of Falconbridge Nickel Mines developing in anything like similar extent to International Nickel and Mond Mines is coming to be more generally recognized. The known continuity of mineralization for a mile and a quarter in length and the average values of over $20 per ton is a combination which assures low production costs. There seems no doubt but that nickel will be produced by Falconbridge at an average cost of around 15 cents a pound—whereas the value of the metal is around 35 cents. Details which deal with the extent to which the company is assured of market for its product, and the very thorough financial provisions to be made, can leave no doubt but that Falconbridge Nickel Mines has before it a destiny of important production and one which may approach that of Mond and International to a closer exent than may be generally anticipated at this present stage of development."

Wright-Hargreaves

A report was received Wednesday afternoon from Kirkland Lake from a northern mining service that high grade ore was being developed at the lower levels of Wright-Hargreaves at a greater rate than the present mill capacity. Their report stated further that broken ore reserves were also being increased at a greater rate than has been the case for several months. Prospects for the mine are believed to have improved immensely.

Aldermac.

A report from Rouyn is to the effect that ore has been cut by diamond drill on the 1,125 foot level of this property.

Both British Columbia and the Maritime Provinces have accounted for 7.9 per cent. each, on their totals of $36,052,100 and $35,965,-900 respectively.

KELLOGG FACTORY HERE HAS DOUBLED CAPACITY

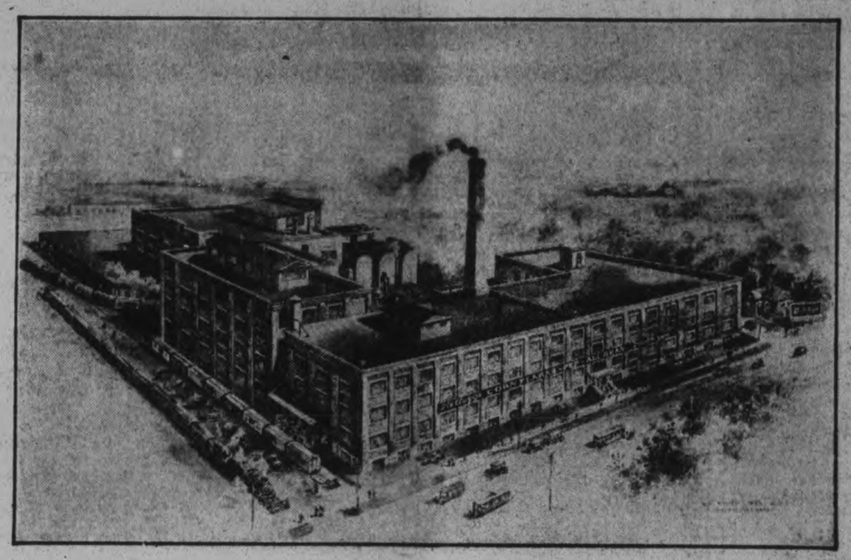
Increasing Demand for Cereal Products Makes Expansion Necessary

HAVE EMPIRE MART

The ever-increasing demand for Kellogg's Corn Flakes, ALL-BRAN, Pep and Krumbles has compelled the Kellogg Company of Canada to double the capacity of their factory in London, Canada. The illustration published herewith gives the reader an idea of the substantial character of the building, which is considered by experts to be among the finest of its type in Canada.

This rapid expansion furnishes an interesting sidelight on the changing food habits of a nation, as well as convincing proof of the popularity of the Kellogg products.

The tremendous proportions to which this industry has grown within the past few years are difficult to grasp, even while you watch car after car checking out, bearing hundreds of thousands of cartons to all points in Canada, Great Britain and other markets.



The floor space of the factory covers an area of 64,280 square feet, with additional storeroom for bulk goods. It is located on a five-acre plot in one of the busiest manufacturing centres in London, with most convenient shipping facilities, a co-operative railway siding running right to the shipping floor.

Throughout the entire plant automatic machinery, which is the last word in mechanical science, handles the foods with almost uncanny adroitness. Selected grains are washed, dried and baked in automatic electric ovens to a fine perfection of color and flavor, and packed in wax-sealed cartons without a human hand touching them on their way.

It has been remarked that if these machines could only talk, we would have something very nearly approaching automatic people—the advance guard of citizens of a new Steel Age—rivaling in color and romance the best tales from the pen of H. G. Wells and Rider Haggard.

The factory is of fireproof concrete construction throughout, with an interior of spotless cleanliness rivaling that of a man o' war on parade day. Every employee is uniformed in white, no street clothes being permitted while on duty, while free laundry service, shower baths and rest rooms are available at all times. The use of tobacco in any form is forbidden.

All Kellogg's Corn Flakes, ALL-BRAN, Pep and Krumbles consumed in Canada and Great Britain are manufactured in the London, Canada, plant, as are also every case and carton in which they are packed. A large staff is employed on the premises, to say nothing of the small army of people working directly or indirectly for Kellogg's throughout the Dominion, ranging from corn growers to salesmen and representatives. The factory operates 24 hours a day, on the three-shift basis. An efficiency bonus system is in operation in the factory, whereby employees are rewarded each week for better work.

High Standard Maintained.

A high standard of physical efficiency is maintained throughout all the Kellogg factories. The Kellogg Athletic Association both encourages and makes possible the active pursuit of sports, games and general training for men and women alike throughout the year.

Beginning with a few handfuls of corn and a good idea but a few years ago, Mr. Kellogg has built up an industry which has benefited an almost endless line of people, not only those directly connected with the manufacture of breakfast foods, but with the production of milk, fruits and honey.

From the standpoint of the consumer, the W. K. Kellogg Cereals and his active health propaganda have certainly contributed to the well-being of many millions. In this respect, the Kellogg Department of Home Economics deserves special recognition for the valuable services to housekeepers, teachers and health workers. In a model kitchen, recipes are carefully tested, while diets are planned and health pamphlets written and mailed free to those interested.

Mr. W. K. Kellogg, originator of Corn Flakes and founder of the Kellogg Company, first began manufacture in 1906. To-day, in addition to the large plant at London, Canada, the Kellogg Company has at Battle Creek, Michigan, one of the largest and most efficiently equipped factories for the manufacture of ready-to-eat cereals in the world, as well as a well-equipped factory at Sydney, Australia; a sales company in London, England, and representatives and workers in practically every city throughout the civilized world.

The Kellogg slogan, "Help Yourself to Health," could well be applied to business enterprises as well as personally, by following the methods which have built up for Mr. Kellogg such a tremendous organization. The foresight which could at the beginning plan an entirely new article of food, and having planned it, educate a whole nation to eat it, indicates a quality closely akin to statesmanship.

We may well expect in the future still greater things of the Kellogg enterprise, which has given us such a lasting lesson in the possibilities of creative industry in Canada.

THE TRAGEDY OF MANY LIVES IS CONSTIPATION

Guard against it in time

This evil scourge ruins thousands of promising men and women. It saps vigor. It kills initiative. It wrecks health and happiness. Sleepless nights, dragging feet, headaches, pain-dulled eyes, follow in its wake. Frequently it leads to lasting and serious disease.

Yet there is safe, prompt relief. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to relieve constipation. To surely prevent it. ALL-BRAN is 100% bran—100% effective. Doctors recommend it. Two tablespoonfuls daily — chronic cases, with every meal.

Don't you agree it is better to cure constipation with this healthful cereal than to try dangerous pills and drugs? Or uncertain part-bran products? Delicious with milk or cream—fruits or honey added. Use it in cooking too. Sprinkle it into soups. Sold by all grocers. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

HE ISN'T CONSTIPATED ANY MORE

Thanks to Kellogg's wonderful ALL-BRAN

Mr. Grinslade wrote, of his own accord, to tell us how much he valued ALL-BRAN in relieving constipation.

June 1, 1927

"Just a few words to let the company know what Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has done for me. I was constipated for several years until I went to eating your PEP and ALL-BRAN. I am now rid of constipation and it is all due to the use of your products, and I will recommend it to anyone that is bothered with constipation."

Yours truly,
H. M. GRINSLADE
(Address sent on request)

Constipation is a dreadful thing. It undermines health. It steals happiness. Throbbing heads, aching backs, spots before the eyes, bad complexions are just a few of its telltale symptoms.

Don't let it get in its deadly work on you. Protect yourself now. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to prevent and relieve constipation. A health cereal — ALL-BRAN is 100% bran. Doctors recommend it. Delicious with milk or cream, or with fruit or honey added. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily —chronic cases, with every meal. Use in cooking. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

After the baskets were sold, refreshments were served and many delectable dainties were dispensed for boxes and baskets which were the last word in daintiness of workmanship.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. Mrs. W. Millage and Miss Grace Watson and Mr. Hanlon Payne were the committee in charge and they deserved much credit for the success of the evening.

JUDGE O'CONNOR GIVES DECISION

T. C. Ephgrave Gets $156 and Mrs. Harold Tel ford $721.

NEGLIGENCE EQUAL.

The two cases arising out of a motor accident on the Chemong road last summer, Harold Telford vs. T. C. Ephgrave, and Mrs. Harold Telford vs. T. C. Ephgrave, appearing in County Court, before Judge O'Connor of Cobourg, were concluded yesgiven in favor of T. C. Ephgrave in the first case for $156 and costs. In the second case Mrs. Telford got judgment for $721 and costs. The judge found negligence equal on both parties, and as a result T. C. Ephgrave will have to pay the half of $721, or 360.50, and all the costs.

The evidence of William O'Brien, who was driving on the Chemong road near the accident was to the effect that a car had passed him while approaching the scene of the accident going at a high rate of speed but he was not prepared to swear that it was Ephgrave's car, although it resembled it.

INQUIRY ASKED ON SHIP NEAR VESTRIS

British Labor Member Wants Investigation On American Vessel Lacking Wireless.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A government investigation of the allegation that the American steamer Montoso could have reached the sinking Vestris in time to save all her passengers had the Montoso been equipped with wireless, as would be required under British regulations, was requested in the House of Commons, yesterday by J. H. Thomas, Labor member and former Secretary for the Dominions. The Vestris disaster was also made the subject of several other questions.

Mr. Thomas asked the president of the Board of Trade whether he was aware that the Montoso had been in a position to reach the Vestris within two hours of the S O S and transfer the passengers and crew before it became necessary to launch the lifeboats and whether, having regard for the international importance of the question, he would have it investigated. Sir P. Cunliffe Lister replied he had seen the statement about the Montoso in the newspapers and was having inquiries made to see what information was obtainable regarding vessels within 100 miles of the Vestris when she sent out her S O S.

"May not a question of this kind be considered anti-American propaganda?" asked C. Williams, Conservative.

"Seeing that the very gallant captain is unable to defend himself, isn't it the duty of every one in this country to see that every possible step is taken to defend his good name?" Mr. Thomas replied; and the House cheered.

To an inquiry as to whether the Government would make it compulsory for every liner to carry at least one motor lifeboat equipped with wireless, Sir P. Cunliffe Lister replied that every ship carrying more than ten boats must have one motor boat and if carrying more than fifteen boats must have a motor lifeboat fitted with wireless. He did not propose to alter the rules, but said they would be discussed at an international conference on safety of life at sea which meets in London next Spring.

LEAGUE WILL WAIT RETURN OF MINISTER

Local Members Return From Toronto, Discussed Cheaper Motor Licenses.

Returning from Toronto where they attended a meeting of the Ontario Motor League executive, on Wednesday, Alderman Harry Huffman, and secretary F. G. Stinson of the Peterborough Automobile club reported the decision of that body to await the return from abroad of the Hon. W. S. Henry, Minister of the Department of Public Works and Highways, and then to take up with him the matter of a decrease in the cost of the various classes of motor licenses.

At one time, the minister told the Motor League that the increase in the gasoline tax would be accompanied by a downward revision of the price of licenses but a recent speech of the Premier did not bear this out.

cially solid, and that its only debts are for raw materials. According to the Canadian Appraisal Company, the physical assets of the company on June 1 last were in excess of $135,000, exclusive of Provincial and Dominion licenses. Summing up the situation, Mr. Cook stated that there is no cause for serious alarm. He agreed with Mr. Lyons that a supplementary fund was the only requirement to the plant's future success. This will be forthcoming in the near future, he believed.

OTTAWA NAMES ENVOY TO JAPAN

Understood Major C. W. Stephens of Montreal Has Been Offered Appointment.

AWAITS DECISION.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—(Special to The Examiner).—Canada's Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary to Japan, will be Major C. W. Stephens of Montreal, if he will accept the office. It is understood that Major Stephens has been preferred the appointment and the government is now awaiting his decision. Major Stephens was formerly a member of the Saar Valley Commission and has long been considered in Ottawa as the Governments' choice for Tokio. His greatest claim to fame is said to be his work as chairman of the Montreal Harbor Board during the critical time of its biggest development and had much to do with the formation of the policy which made Montreal one of the biggest ports on the continent.

Like Hon. P. C. Larkin and Hon. Vincent Massey he is a man of independent means. Major Stephens was in Ottawa recently and had a conference with the prime minister and a decision on the matter is expected at any time. The staff for the Tokio Legation has not yet been selected.

C. A. Raymond, shown above, has had the unusual experience of being knocked down by a shock from an electric fish. At the time Mr. Raymond was helping James Palmer, manager of the Walker House acquarium, Toronto, to transfer some Amazon electric eels from one container to another. Mr. Palmer received the same punishment.

$500 FOR OLD CANNON

FORT PIERCE, Fla., Nov. 29—The city commission has appropriated $500 to pay for recovering several cannon from a Spanish galleon wrecked in the Fort Pierce inlet some 200 years ago. The relics are buried in sand about a mile from shore.

With the Scoutmaster giving the patrol leaders charge immediately after flag break, there was plenty of fun and interest at the meeting of the 2nd Armour troop of Boy Scouts at St. Luke's parish hall on Friday evening last. Among the visitors was J. A. McKone, who received a hearty welcome from the boys. Between exercises, the games of Indian Club, Compass and hall ball were played. There was a 100 per cent. attendance.

The word "sincere" originated from two Latin words, "sine cera," which means without wax.

WORLD COURT PLAN HELD IN ABEYANCE

Coolideg and Kellogg Confer On Subject But No Word Is Given Out.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—At a conference between President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg the matter of making another effort to bring the United States into affiliation with the World Court was discussed, but no information on the subject was forthcoming from the White House or the State Department.

Secretary Kellogg indicated Tuesday that he might have a statement on the subject after he had seen the President, but he said yesterday that he had no comment to make.

Information obtained since Saturday, when the President told a group of Republican Senators that he desired to seek an arrangement with the governments which adhere to the court protocol by which the obstacle to American participation furnished by the Senate reservations would be overcome, indicates that no definite plan of procedure is in the President's mind.

What is known of the situation has created the impression that the President, in his comment to the Senators, was doing nothing more than expressing a hope that European objection to the Senate reservations might be overcome.

NEW SOCIETY HOLDS MEETING

Young People Meet in Parlors of Millbrook United Church.

TAKES UP DUTIES

MILLBROOK, Nov. 29 (Examiner Correspondence).—The Young People's Society of the United Church met in the church parlors on Monday evening, the newly-elected president, B. B. Dawson, taking the chair. The attendance was good for a new organization, and making allowance for the fact that the night was a stormy one.

In the devotional period the president considered the subject, "Beauty in Religion," reading a number of passages from Exodus showing how this was emphasized by the Israelites as they prepared the tabernacle, and its furnishings, as their first place of public worship.

The matter of choosing a name for the new organization came up for discussion, and the recommendation of the executive that "Young People's Society be the designation, was unanimously adopted. It was also decided to have a membership roll, and a fee of twenty-five cents for each member; whether an offering will be taken at each regular meeting was left over for further discussion. Next Monday evening the secretary, Eddie Nattress, will have his book at the table and names of those wishing to ally themselves with the society will be enrolled, and the fees received.

Subscriptions to The Pathfinder, the official organ of the young people's work, were decided upon for the various officers who are heads of departments, and who will require this help in preparing the material for their particular evenings.

A talk on "The Power of Making Response to Great Appeals" was given by Miss Burnham, and the pastor addressed the young people on "Ships," on which those embarking on this enterprise would do well to take passage—Comradeship, Fellowship, and Friendship.

Next Monday night, December 3, will be under the Christian Fellowship Department, Miss Lottie Luxon, convenor.

Takes Up Duties

Rev. Mr. Roberts, the new assistant minister for the parish of Millbrook and Cavan, moved to town last Thursday, taking up residence in Mrs. Charles McNeil's former home on King street. One of the trucks bringbringing Mr. Roberts' furniture went off the side of the culvert on attempting to drive into the yard at night, and it took considerable time to get it back on the road again, the furniture having to be all carried out before the wheels could be jacked up and boards placed underneath, so there was some chance to reach firm ground once more. The soft shoulders and none too firm top on the culverts, following the recent paving of King street, may have had something to do with the difficulty which overtook the truck, especially as it was after night when it reached the village.

YOUR HEALTH

THE DIET FOR NEURALGIA

I have found that practically every case of neuralgia can be cured by dietetic measures alone, although there are a few cases which require manipulative or special treatments. The first thing to do in any case of neuralgia is to thoroughly empty the lower intestines by using at least two enemas daily for a week or ten days. During this time the toxins should be washed out of the system by using no food, but drinking from three to four gallons of water each day. Distilled water is preferable, and one should drink about two glasses of water every half hour.

During this fasting period a relief from the pain may be had by the application of heat from hot water bottles, bags of hot salt, etc., or from a deep therapy lamp. Sometimes counter-irritating plasters applied over the sorest spot give immediate relief. The usual plasters are made from mustard, capsicum or Spanish fly.

Massage of the sore nerves is not advisable as this usually only increases the pain. A general body massage over the parts that are not sore may be successful.

Even though the pain may disappear shortly after beginning this fast, it is well to continue for a time so that you will have no recurrence of the trouble. After the water fast of one week, change to a milk diet. The best milk for this purpose is raw certified Holstein milk. Use one large glassful every hour, starting at seven o'clock in the morning and finishing at six o'clock at night. This will take three quarts of milk per day. After ten days the amount can be gradually increased by taking a glassful every half hour during the morning, and a glassful every hour during the afternoon. In this way you can use from four to five quarts a day, and if you assimilate this quantity you should gradually increase the amount until you are able to take a glassful every half hour during the entire day. In this way you will consume six quarts of milk daily.

The milk diet should be continued for at least one month and at least one enema should be used daily, even though the bowels should begin to move naturally.

Severe cases of neuralgia may require at least a month of the milk diet. In returning to a regular diet you must be very careful to employ only the right food combinations. In order to do this, you will know how to supply your body with all of the elements that it requires and avoid creating new toxins. This treatment may seem to be a little bit severe but one who is suffering from neuralgia is willing to undergo anything that will bring relief. Results from the dietetic method of treatment are much more permanently satisfactory than any other remedy.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

Montreal.—Grant Hall, since 1918 senior vice-president of the C.P.R., Wednesday celebrated his 65th birthday. Mr. Hall entered the employ of the C.P.R. in 1887 as a locomotive engineer, leaving to go to the Intercolonial in 1893, but returning to the C.P.R. in 1898.

BABIES GAIN BY THIS SIMPLE METHOD

Doctors say, souring waste in baby's digestive tract is usually back of my failure to gain weight according to schedule. And the best proof, this is true, is the quick way weak, fretful, puny babies improve when you cleanse their stomach and bowels and put them in order with a few doses of purely-vegetable, pleasant-tasting, Fletcher's Castoria. This gentle, harmless preparation is the doctor's first thought to relieve those ills of babies and children, such as colic, gas, constipation, diarrhea, colds, etc. Just be sure you get genuine Castoria in the bottle that bears the Fletcher signature.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Swollen Hands.

Question: E. M. C. asks: "Will you please explain the reason for swelling of the hands and fingers? I have a boy eight years old—seems to be always sick, no appetite, complains of a pain in the stomach after eating. At times his fingers will swell in fifteen minutes to twice the normal size. They will go down if I bathe them in hot water. Is this serious?"

Answer: Your child may have some heart derangement which is producing the trouble with his circulation. His case certainly requires a diagnosis in order to find out his true condition.

Home Brew.

Question: E. H. R. writes: "I would like to have you tell me what effect if any home brew has on a man 51 years old if he drinks from 7 to 10 gallons a week. I would like to know if it affects the kidneys in any way, as he is continually urinating—about every 30 minutes. He makes the beer himself."

Answer: I cannot too strongly condemn the use of any homemade beer. The brewing of beer is a science improved over centuries of experimentation. If all the best rules were employed and the best apparatus used, it would still be a complicated and expensive method to use in one's home on a small scale. I have been able to trace many cases of serious liver and kidney derangements to the use of home brew in both Canada and the United States. Well-brewed beer can be purchased; the only difference is that in the United States the law requires the removal of the alcohol after the beer has been made.

Puffs Under Eyes.

Question: Twenty writes: "I have puffs under my eyes. Can you tell me what they are from and the best way to get rid of them?"

Answer: Your trouble is caused from some form of dropsy, which is either from heart trouble, or because your kidneys are not able to perform their normal functions. Only a proper diagnosis will tell you the truth about the cause of your trouble.

FRENCH IMPORTS HAVE INCREASED

Report Shows Canada's Trade With France Has Grown Since 1922.

PARIS, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press Cable).—French imports from Canada have increased in value 340 per cent since 1922, it is shown in a report on economic conditions in France, submitted to the British Department of Overseas Trade by J. H. Cahill, commercial counsellor to the British embassy in Paris. Last year the French imports from the Dominion amounted to 723,000,000 francs; cereals being the principal commodity and amounting to more than 326,000 tons.

Imports of fish from the dominion declined considerably, receding to third place in the table of values. Steam and other engines which have increased in 1928 have now become second in order of value. Chemical pulp for paper-making increased considerably, assuming fourth place in the totals, while imports of sugar increased from 540 tons in 1925 to 5,917 tons last year.

French trade with Canada for the first six months of 1928 was less active than in 1927, however, the report showed.

STEEL HOUSES GO UP IN FEW HOURS

In Detroit, where automobiles are made and assembled with speed and economy, a steel house took shape recently with similar speed. One hundred minutes after a small crew of erectors appeared on that Detroit site, the steel frame of the house was bolted into shape, its permanent stairways were in hape and all was in readiness for the next stage of construction—the placing of floors and roof.

Through this demonstration and some fifty others in different parts of the United States, the prospect for small houses has spurted forward amazingly. Each of these houses possesses in miniature the steel frame of a skyscraper; yet, besides they have a special significance for the family that can afford to spend around $5,000 for a home that will last a lifetime.

Steel men realize that before they can change the character of small house building they much change the methods of building, writes Arthur A. Stuart, in November issue of Popular Science Monthly. To that end their engineers, draughtsmen and architects are striving to evolve a plan for the swift erection of small houses that may become an American phenomenon like the swift erection of skyscrapers.

At their last convention in Pinehurst, N.C., the American Institute of Steel construction heard tempting things about this new market for steel. During 1928 about $2,000,000,000 will be spent on cheap houses of a type in which 75 per cent. of the material can be standarized; and another two billion will go into other simple types of wooden structures. If all of these buildings were provided with steel frames the total steel business would be increased approximately $400,000,000.

But this vision, they were told, can be realized only if the steel manufacturers can offer frames on a competitive basis with wooden ones. This they hope to do by keeping their plants busy during what would normally be periods of depression in making steel members for small houses to be stored like lumber until sold.

TRAIN BRAKE HEAT COULD COOK FEAST

Throughout industry the fight against friction is never ending. Yet friction is not wholly a villain. You would miss it sorely if by some miracle it were abolished. You could not step for fear of falling, for your shoes would act as if you had stepped on a banana peel. Pocket matches would cease to light when you struck them. Your automobile would skid and its rear wheels would spin without moving it. You might attain the dream of a perpetual motion machine—but you could not transmit power by a belt, for the belt would slip.

In your car friction is put to work to grip the roads through anti-skid tires, and, at your command, to stop the car through fireproof, asbestos brake heads. Iron grates on iron in the brakes of the speeding train. It would take twenty laborers seven days, writes George Lee Dowd, Jr., in Popular Science Monthly for November, to accomplish as much as the brake shoes do in a few minutes in stopping a thousand ton express train speeding sixty miles an hour; and the heat generated at the brake shoes would cook twenty dinners for the men!

That accounts for what happens to the energy industry uses up in freeing its shafts from friction's clutches. It turns into heat. When you rub sandpaper on wood, both get hot. If you could keep the heat from escaping you could boil water by stirring it.

Years ago a machine was built at Northampton, Mass., designed to heat a house by friction! Two horizontal circular plates of cast iron, four feet in diameter, and weighing 1600 pounds, were rotated upon each other in a brick oven. Newspapers of January 7, 1834, reported the inventor as predicting that "the ordinary speed, eight revolutions per minute, would be sufficient to raise the temperature of the open to 500 degrees within two hours."

Tree frogs sometimes borrow the insect-catching leaves of a southern species of pitcher plant and use them to catch insects for their own purpose.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

OIL ACTIVITIES ARE DESCRIBED

TURNER VALLEY FIELD.

VANCOUVER, B.C., November 29 (Canadian Press). — Yesterday was "oil day" at the annual meeting here of the western branch of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

B. E. Thorne, of the Canadian Pacific Railway Natural Resources Department, sketched briefly the oil activities in the Alberta field, mentioning the exploration work being carried out by various concerns.

R. T. Banks, diamond drill expert, told of rock pressures running from 3,000 to 4,000 pounds per square inch in a talk on diamond drilling, a method by which wells were being brought in successfully in the limestone formation at Turner Valley. How high the rock pressures run, Mr. Banks said, might never be known, for it had never been possible to completely close off a well for any extended period.

Mr. Banks described the danger of bringing in a well in the limestone formation, faced with the pressure capable of lifting standard tools right out of the hole, and the highly volatile which is sprayed out with the wet gas flow. At stages it was dangerous to have even an electric light in the derrick house.

How the Turner Valley oil field had developed since the days when A. W. Dingman, Alberta's grand old man of the oil game, brought in the discovery-well, down to the present time when there were thirty-two producing wells in the area and an investment of millions in machinery and plants, was told by S. G. Coultis, superintendent of the Imperial Oil Company, Turner Valley plants.

In addition to the thirty-two producers in the field, there were twenty-six wells now drilling and seventeen shut down.

INDIGESTION TORTURE

Pain and Suffocating Pressure Until Tanlac Brought Relief

Only those who are tortured by Indigestion cramps after eating, and suffocating pressure of gas, can realize the relief, the joy, which came to Mrs. Odelle Langlois, as Tanlac freed her of every trace of Stomach Trouble.

For 25 years, she suffered. "Food was like poison," she writes from 710 Arthur Street, Windsor, Ont. "It would cramp me and gas would bloat me up so I could hardly catch my breath, and I would become dizzy and faint. I became so weak and nervous that my daughter had to do my housework. I spent enough on treatments to buy a home; and it almost breaks my heart to think that I did not use Tanlac before. Because four bottles of this grand medicine made me a well woman. I could feel the very first spoonful helping me; and now after only four bottles, I have regained my health and strength. My husband also used Tanlac for Kidney Trouble and it has made a new man of him."

If you are suffering, don't wait. Get Tanlac to-day. It is pure and good—and it must help you or your money will be promptly refunded. It costs less than 2c a dose—less than 6c a day to get well. Ask your druggist.

NEVER RODE BICYCLE.

Former Premier Ramsay Macdonald Has Always Been a Great Walker.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 29 (Canadian Press.)—At a dinner of cycle makers the confession was made by Ramsay Macdonald that he had never ridden a bicycle, the reason being, as he understood, that he had no balance—either in his back or in his head. He was an inveterate walker, and he believed of all the men in this country he was the one whom cycles and motor-cycles passed more frequently than any other.

No industry in the country had more revolutionized for good the habits of the people than the cycle industry.

Recalling an incident of his early days, when he rode a tricycle on a moonlight night through a country district with a reputation of being haunted, he said that his hair rose on end and finally, when the machine groaned and creaked, he got off and fled and had never since mounted a cycle.

EVERYONE DELIGHTED.

All the attractions of Toyland coupled with a real modern Punch and Judy show delighted hundreds of children from all parts of the city to the Teco store yesterday. The juniors of the city rocked with laughter and shouted with joy when these two favorite clowns demonstrated their antics. Robert Chamber of Toronto, who has been connected with the Punch and Judy and Marionette shows for a great number of years, delighted the young audience and at times held them spellbound with his antics.

A high class act was put on, the plot of which was laid in the home of Punch and Judy.

LOST—A HOME

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Nov. 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Cuddeback were just married and had rented an apartment here when they left on their honeymoon. Neither of the couple were familiar with the address of the apartment and because they lost a memo of it, while on the honeymoon, had to insert an ad in the newspapers to locate their belongings.

MADE ARRANGEMENTS

BROOKLYN, Nov. 29.—It wasn't Joseph Havernick's fault that he didn't commit suicide. He called the undertaker and made arrangements for him to call for a dead body the following morning. He turned on the gas in a closed room and gave himself up to die. The undertaker found the body the next morning, but a pulmotor squad of the police department revived it.

SAYS—NOW STIFF JOINTS MUST GO!

New Discovery Limbers 'Em Up and Even the Creaking Ceases.

Yes: it's true—the world progresses.

All you have to do nowadays to limber up that stiff, rusty knee joint is to squeeze a half inch of miracle working substance from a tube.

Then rub it on the offending part for about a quarter of a minute or until it soaks through the skin and disappears on its errand of mercy.

Then read the evening newspapers and go to bed.

The chances are that you are misbehaving knee joint will lose its "creak" while you are dreaming about the high fences you used to leap when you were a youngster.

"And in the morning," says one who has tried the new discovery, "You'll feel so happy that you'll want to jump into your sportiest clothes and walk briskly down the street just to show the neighbors that you are not as old as they think you are."

Joint-Ease: They call this wonder working substance, for the reason that when ordinary remedies fail to limber up the stiff, inflamed rheumatic joint, or reduce the swelling, Joint-Ease succeeds.

It's a good name for a good, clean, stainless prescription that in just a few months has proven to a multitude of people that lame, swollen, distorted joints can speedily have the kinks taken out of them and work as smoothly as ever.

But Joint-Ease is for bothersome joints, whether in knee, ankle, hip, shoulder, spine or finger, and for that purpose its sale is immense.

Bond's Drug Store, McDermid & Jury, McDermid Drug Co. has a big supply of it and druggists everywhere report a big demand.

LONDON GIRLS ARE LEARNING TO SWIM

Percentage Actually Taught Art Has Risen From 36 to 40.

LONDON, Nov. 29 — (Canadian Press.)—For the first time for 15 years the girls of London have showed a greater aptitude than boys in learning to swim. This is recorded in a report to London County Council Education Committee

The percentage of girls actually taught to swim has risen from 36 to 40 in the last year, and the percentage of boys has decreased from 36 to 35.

During the year 156,848 children had lessons in swimming, and 40,272 had learned to swim by the end of the year.

Mr. Harold E. Fern, Hon. Secretary of the Amateur Swimming Association, finds that girls are beating boys in swimming all over the country.

IN POLICE COURT

The city police court presented a deserted appearance this morning. With no cases scheduled for the attention of Magistrate O. A. Langley, there was little of interest to be found thereabouts.

SEE CANADA FIRST.

The twin coastal cities, Vancouver and Victoria, at this time of the year appeal with endless charm to the holidaymakers, wanderers, and tired business men and women, for the weather is ideal and the foliage in the gardens and parks of wondrous color. Not a day passes, too, but sees the twelve golf courses gay with happy and enthusiastic players while riding in the early mornings and afternoons is particularly favored. There are splendid motor highways on Vancouver Island, and innumerable ones running into Vancouver City from all directions. The winter season's attractions include theatres and concerts of the highest calibre, while the Hotel Vancouver at Vancouver and the world-renowned Empress at Victoria are the centres of the social and commercial activities of the two cities and districts. During the winter the Canadian Pacific Railway operates the only through train to Vancouver from Toronto. The "Vancouver Express" leaves the Union Station every night at 9.00 and reaches the coast four days later. WHICH PARENT DOMINATES THE COLOR OF THE EYES?

There is no set rule. It all depends on ancestral origin and racial characteristics. But generally speaking, boys have their Mother's eyes and girls their Father's. Despite their origin, however, all eyes strongly indicate the health of their owner.

SPARKLING EYES REFLECT SPARKLING HEALTH

Lowered vitality and poor physical condition are mirrored in the eyes. If your eyes are dull and tired looking, with a yellow tinge to the whites, your system is suffering from intestinal sluggishness. Poor blood and disordered liver quickly rob the clearest eyes of their natural brilliance and sparkle. Your system requires a laxative.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLE LAXATIVES ARE NEEDED

Beecham's Pills contain, in concentrated form, the equivalent laxative values found in fruit and vegetables. Nature's true remedy—harmless and effective.

A course of Beecham's Pills will rapidly eliminate constipation, biliousness, headaches, and your eyes will quickly reflect the sparkle resulting from renewed health.

REMOVE YELLOW TINGE WITH BEECHAM'S PILLS

I SAY, OLD BEAN!

Alpine, Tex., Nov. 29.—Beans, believed to be more than 800 years old, planted here by Mrs. A. C. Prude, have sprouted and a new species of beans may soon be introduced in orders for "ham and beans." They were found in an ancient cliff dweller's cave in New Mexico.

CANADIAN ENTRIES AT CHICAGO FAIR

Two Agricultural Colleges To Compete For the Spoor Trophy.

CHICAGO, Ills., Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—Canada is contributing more than 1,000 entries of cattle, horses, sheep and swine for the international livestock exposition which opens Saturday

Representatives of two Canadian agricultural college are listed to compete in the students' livestock judging contest for the Spoor trophy, given by the Chicago Stockyards Company; the Lipton Cup, recently presented by Sir Thomas Lipton; and the five scholarship of $250 each offered by the Pullman Company, all of which are given as the reward of the successful contestants. One team will represent the Manitoba Agricultural College, Winnipeg, and the other the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Although Ontario has been a regular annual contestant since the beginning of the event more than twenty years ago, and has been victorious several times, the Manitoba team re-enters after an absence from the lists for five years. Twenty-two colleges, from twenty different states and two Canadian provinces are entered in this year's competition, which is scheduled for the opening day.

Canada will be represented in practically every breed of livestock to be judged. From Ontario and Alberta will come contenders for honors in the Shorthorn, Hereford and Aberdeen-Angus cattle divisions. The University of Alberta, Edmonton, is sending nominations in all with the Shorthorn classes.

Eastern Canada will have exhibitors of Shropshire, Hampshire, Oxford, Lincoln, Cotswold and Southdown sheep. Percheron horses have been entered by C. M. Rear, of Regina, Sask., and by Robert Weir, of Weldon, Sask., while Clydesdales will be shown by J. E. Falconer, of Govan, Sask., Thomas McMillan, of Okotoks, Alta., Monro and Wood, of Carstairs, Alta., and the Provincial Farms at Edmonton. Mr. Rear also will exhibit Belgian horses.

Thousands of samples of alfalfa hay and small grain have been listed by Dominion growers among the international grain and hay show entries. Herman Trelle, crowned "wheat king" at the 1927 International, has entered samples in the spring wheat, oats and pea classes, all grown and harvested on his farm at Wembley, Alta., in the famous Peace River district. He comes to the Chicago show after great success in the 1928 Canadian shows, including the award for the best sample of spring wheat at the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto.

"A Miracle!"

Cripple now walks well thanks to Kruschen

"For over eight months I was laid up with rheumatism, unable to move, when I was advised to try Kruschen Salts. It is almost a miracle, but without a word of a lie I was able to be taken to the front door in less than a week! In a few days I was out with the help of crutches; and in a short time I was walking well. This is not a one-week testimonial, but four years.

"I have taken it ever since, and I never feel a pinch of rheumatism now. I tell everybody about it, and advise them to take it. I will close my letter hoping you will publish it for others to see."

SOCIAL EVENT IS GREAT SUCCESS

St. James' W. A. Society Receives $56 at Entertainment.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, November 29. — The social evening and entertainment on Friday night in the Orange Hall under the auspices of St. James' W. A. Society, proved very successful, the proceeds amounting to $55.

The following excellent programme was given:

Piano Solo, Napoleon's Last March—Miss Gales of Cobourg.

Dialogue, Jake Hayseed in the City, Valda Webb, Bernard McCracken and Frances Parker. This was exceptionally well played, under the supervision of their school teacher, Miss Mabel Stewart.

Address, Rev. E. R. Adye, assistant rector of St. Peter's Church, Cobourg.

Vocal Solo—Rev. Ralph, "The Song of the Vagabonds," and responded to an encore, "The Vagabonda King."

Rev. Mr. Battersby acted as chairman and brought the entertainment to a close by thanking those who took part in the program, and Rev. E. R. Adye, who had brought others from Cobourg. Lunch was served in the hall. Surprise boxes were sold after the concert. This part of the program was amusing ,especially when the husband's box contained a work apron, and his wife a ruler or a pocket book.

CLUB HOLDS MOST SUCCESSFUL SALE

Continuous Line of Customers Visit Baptist Club's Bazaar in Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 28.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The T.O.G. Club of the Baptist Church held a very successful sale of fancy articles, home cooking and candy on Saturday afternoon in Hendren's shop on Queen street. Although the weather was unpleasant there was a constant stream of purchasers, usually of the fair sex. The Councillor of the Club, Mrs. (Rev.) J. B. MacCormack, was the supervisor of the entire bazaar. The decorations were artistic and attractive as were also the wares.

The fancy articles and home cooking were in charge of Miss Mary Shields and Miss Edith Nicholls.

Mrs. Charles Waldon and Miss Stabler presided over a table of delectable looking candy and Mrs. Wesley Johnson and Miss Ruby Nicholls took charge of the tea room assisted by Mrs. J. Nicholls and Mrs. Munro. Miss Grace Yonge also assisted during the afternoon.

The responsible position of cashier was admirably filled by Miss Vina Nicholls, secretary-treasurer of the Club.

During the past year this oragnization has justified its existence in many ways, as a young woman's auxiliary to the church, as a society which stands ready to give help when needed in the church's everyday work.

During the past six months the T.O.G. Club re-decorated the church at considerable expense and have ambitious plans for further improvements.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

DEAR MARION,

I am a daily reader of your columns and I am now coming for a scrap of advice.

When you are asked for the home dance or any certain dance ahead of time, what is the proper answer to give? I always answer, as I think is right, but I do want to be sure.

I remain,

South Monaghan. Peggy."

The answer which you might give to the person requesting the home waltz or any other particular dance would depend entirely upon your own wishes. If you are desirous of giving him the dance, tell him so; but if you do not wish him to have it, politely make this fact known to him. It is wholly a matter for your discretion, but I think it is generally agreed that you dance the first dance, the supper dance and the home waltz with the gentleman who is your escort for the evening.

"Dear Marion,

This is the first time I have ventured to ask for any of the helps, but you are so generous with the other neighbors that I am sure you will not think I am greedy.

Could any of the neighbors tell me what will remove perspiration stains from a woollen dress?

Your page certainly is wonderful, and it is one of the first things we read when the paper comes. I will now close, with best wishes for the page's continued success, and thanks for the helps which I hope to receive very soon.

With best wishes,

Shamrock."

I'm afraid, "Shamrock," that I haven't the hint you desire, so we will have to call upon the neighbors. It's so easy to remove the color, too, when trying to remove stains, isn't it? A really better idea is to use one of the preventatives.

The neighbors, I find, have ideas on most everything, so I have no doubt your SOS will bring an answer! Thanks for your appreciation of our page, and for your good wishes.

"Dear Marion,

I think 'Thinker's letter the most absurd I have ever read, and I wonder at your printing it. I wonder when you are going to answer it as it deserves?

The idea of women's subjection to man is so archaic I, like you, doubted whether anyone still held it. Apparently the old world hasn't progressed as far as we thought!

When one starts writing on such a subject one gets so mad one just fills right up and feels like choking! I'd like to get that man and shake him—and I sure pity his wife! There's no sensible answer that can be made to such nonsense, really. But I'd like to see you treat him as he should be treated!

Please do!

Yours truly,

Mavourneen."

I based yesterday's Whatnot on "Thinker's" letter, "Mouvourneen," and I hope you think I treated him roughly enough. As you say, there's no sensible answer to write—all one can do is point out the absurdities in his letter. I would like, now to see what more of the neighbors think of his—as you aptly term them—archaic ideas.

"Dear Marion:

I have been a subscriber to The Examiner for sometime and must say I enjoy your page immensely.

I have taken many recipes from your page, some of which I have tried and find them very appetizing.

I am asking you for some help and am thanking you in advance.

Wishing your page continued success, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Garry Ann."

I'm so glad you like our page, "Garry Ann." Won't you send in some of your recipes for the neighbors?

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion,

I wonder if you can tell me how to keep lemons? I live in the country, and when I buy a dozen at a time I find they dry up and spoil.

Yours expectantly,

Farmerette."

I am told, "Farmerette," that if you put the lemons in a jar and cover them with cold water they will keep ripe and juicy for a month. The water should be changed every three or four days. Maybe some neighbor has another idea?

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

One of the greatest mistakes that we make in buying toys is in choosing those that are "too old" for the child for whom they are intended.

Naturally we don't want to select a toy that will seem too babyish for the little man or little woman who is to receive it—and so we choose something at random feeling that if it is too old "mother" can put it away until the child is old enough to enjoy it. But of course nothing of the sort happens. The child knows that a toy has come and mother following the line of least resistance lets the child have it. And so little Bobby may receive a printing set before he even knows his letters and sister Sue gets a daintily dressed doll when a Teddy bear would be much more appropriate.

Here is a list of suitable toys for children of various ages compiled by an expert that may be of help to you in doing your Christmas shopping:

Children of three and four, blackboard and chalk, blunt scissors, crayons, lar...e stringing beads. Picture books of the simpler sort — which need not be of linen. Unbreakable dolls with bed or carriage. Sturdy doll furniture.

Children from four to six, simple games such as tiddledywinks and fish pond. Simple weaving and sewing sets, simple construction blocks, simple trucks, boats and trains without sharp edges, play stores, doll houses, scooters.

Children from six to eight or nine, games such as dominoes, lotto, etc. Drawing, sewing and weaving materials, more elaborately dressed dolls, construction blocks, baseball and football sets, electric trains.

For children older than nine, scientific experiment sets, metal construction sets, tool boxes, cooking utensils, printing outfits, small typewriters.

WHY REMOVE TONSILS?

If you are a parent you must often wonder why the tonsils were ever put in children if they have to be removed.

Sometimes you have seen an improvement in the health of a youngster after the removal of tonsils, and in other cases you have to admit that the youngster was getting along pretty well from a health standpoint until his tonsils were removed.

Now what about tonsils anyway?

Well, they wouldn't be in a body if they were not meant for some useful purpose. That useful purpose is the filtering of poisons out of the blood.

What about these poisons, when as a matter of fact some individuals haven't any tonsils?

They are simply filtered out or removed by other glands, that's all. Dr. F. Pearce Strum says that an enlargement of the tonsils may be an attempt to make a simple organ like the tonsils perform the work of other glands which really should be doing the work, but which are not doing it properly.

The enlargement of the tonsils occurs when the youngster is being exposed to all sorts of childhood infections.

When this period passes the tonsils get small again and tend to disappear.

When the tonsils increase in size it means that the little "germ" centres increase in number.

These centres have the power to destroy harmful organisms.

It is to these centres then that the white corpuscles of the blood come with the harmful organisms, and have them destroyed.

You can readily see then that to remove normal tonsils, or even large tonsils, may be taking away from the youngster some of his ability to destroy harmful organisms.

If tonsils then are protectors, why should they be removed?

They should never be removed because they are large, unless they obstruct the breathing, but should be removed only when their power or ability to destroy harmful organisms has been lost.

Your family doctor can tell you when that time comes, because the tonsils will show it.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

TO-DAY we shall have our first prose selection since the starting of this column, suggested last week by "Mariana." The idea of the column is to give our neighbors a few minutes good reading every day, and allow them to suggest short extracts they think suitable. I'm really sorry, neighbors, that I can't spare the time to condense (or is it "abridge") a whole book. I haven't much room, you know, nor have I very much time. So please choose poems or prose extracts of suitable length.

NOVEMBER 29, 1928.

Louisa May Alcott, whom we all know as the author of "Little Women," "An Old-Fashioned Girl," and "Aunt Jo's Scrap Bag," was born on November 29, 1832, and died fifty-six years later. As children, we have all read "Eight Cousins" and "Jack and Jill," which came from her facile pen. The extract I have chosen for the column to-day is "The Little Women's Experiment in Housekeeping," a delightful comedy which I am sure the neighbors will enjoy, and a moral which should not be lost.

"The first of June! The Kings are off to the seashore to-morrow, and I'm free. Three months' vacation,—how I shall enjoy it!" exclaimed Meg, coming home on a warm day to find Jo laid upon a sofa in an unusual state of exhaustion, while Beth took off her dusty boots, and Amy made lemonade for the refreshment of the whole party.

"Aunt March went to-day, for which, oh, be joyful!" said Jo. "I was mortally afraid she'd ask me to go with her; if she had, I should have felt as if I ought to do it; but Plumfield is about as gay as a churchyard, you know, and I'd rather be excused. We had a flurry getting the old lady off, and I had a fright every time she spoke to me, for I was in such a hurry to be through that I was uncommonly helpful and sweet, and feared she'd find it impossible to part from me. I quaked till she was fairly in the carriage, and had a final fright, for, as it drove off, she popped out her head, saying, "Josyphine, won't you——?" I didn't hear any more, for I basely turned and fled; I did actually run, and whisked round the corner, where I felt safe."

"Poor old Jo! She came in looking as if bears were after her," said Beth, as she cuddled her sister's feet with a motherly air.

"Aunt March is a regular samphire, is she not?" observed Amy, testing her mixture critically.

"She means VAMPIRE, not seaweed; but it doesn't matter; it's too warm to be particular about one's parts of speech," murmured Jo.

"What shall you do all your vacation?" asked Amy, changing the subject, with tact.

"I shall lie abed late, and do nothing," replied Meg, from the depths of the rocking chair. "I've been routed up early all winter, and had to spend my days working for other people; so now I'm going to revel and rest to my heart's content."

"No," said Jo; "that dozy way wouldn't suit me. I've laid in a heap of books, and I'm going to improve my shining hours reading on my perch in the old apple tree, when I'm not having l——"

"Don't say 'larks'!" implored Amy, as a return snub for the "sampire" correction.

"I'll say 'nightengales,' then, with Laurie; that's proper and appropriate, since he's a warbler."

"Don't let us do any lessons, Beth, for a while, but play all the time, and rest, as the girls mean to," proposed Amy.

"Well, I will, if mother doesn't mind. I want to learn some new songs, and my children need fitting up for the summer; they are dreadfully out of order, and really suffering for clothes."

"May we, mother?" asked Meg, turning to Mrs. March, who sat sewing, in what they called "Marmee's corner."

"You may try your experiment for a week, and see how you like it. I think by Saturday night you will find that all play and no work is as bad as all work and no play."

"Oh, dear, no! it will be delicious, I'm sure," said Meg, complacently.

"I now propose a toast, as my 'friend and pardner, Sairy Gamp,' says. Fun forever and no grubbing!" cried Jo, rising, glass in hand, as the lemonade went round.

They all drank it merrily, and began the experiment by lounging for the rest of the day. Next morning, Meg did not appear till ten o'clock; her solitary breakfast did not taste nice, and the room seemed lonely and untidy; for Jo had not filled the vases, Beth had not dusted, and Amy's books lay scattered about. Nothing was neat and pleasant but "Marmee's corner," which looked as usual; and there Meg sat, to "rest and read," which meant yawn and imagine what pretty summer dresses she would get with her salary. Jo spent the morning on the river, with Laurie, and the afternoon reading and crying over "The Wide, Wide World," up in the apple tree. Beth began by rummaging everything out of the big closet, where her family resided; but, getting tired before half done, she left her establishment topsy-turvy, and went to her music, rejoicing that she had no dishes to wash. Amy arranged her bower, put on her best white frock, smoothed her curls, and sat down to draw, under the honeysuckles, hoping some one would see and inquire who the young artist was. As no one appeared but an inquisitive daddy longlegs, who examined her work with interest, she went to walk, got caught in a shower, and came home dripping.

At tea time they compared notes, and all agreed that it had been a delightful, though unusually long, day. Meg, who went shopping in the afternoon and got a "sweet blue muslin," had discovered, after she had cut the breadths off, that it wouldn't wash, which mishap made her slightly cross. Jo had burnt the skin off her nose boating, and got a raging headache by reading too long. Beth was worried by the confusion of her closet, and the difficulty of learning three or four songs at once; and Amy deeply regretted the damage done her frock, for Katy Brown's party was to be the next day, and now, like Flora McFlimsey, she had "nothing to wear." But these were mere trifles; and they assured their mother that the experiment was working finely. She smiled, said nothing, and, with Hannah's help, did their neglected work, keeping home pleasant, and the domestic machinery running smoothly. It was astonishing what a peculiar and uncomfortable state of things was produced by the "resting and reveling" process. The days kept getting longer and longer; the weather was unusually variable, and so were tempers; an unsettled feeling possessed everyone, and Satan found plenty of mischief for the idle hands to do. As the height of luxury, Meg put out some of her sewing, and then found time hang so heavily that she fell to snipping and spoiling her clothes, in her attempts to furbish them up a la Moffat. Jo read till her eyes gave out, and she was sick of books; got so fidgety that even good-natured Laurie had a quarrel with her, and so reduced in spirits that she desperately wished she had gone with Aunt March. Beth got on pretty well, for she was constantly forgetting that it was to be all play and no work, and fell back into her old ways now and then; but something in the air affected her, and, more than once, her tranquillity was much disturbed; so much so, that, on one occasion, she actually shook poor dear Joanna, and told her she was "a fright." Amy fared worst of all, for her resources were small; and when her sisters left her to amuse and care for herself, she soon found that accomplished and important little self a great burden. She didn't like dolls, fairy tales were childish, and one couldn't draw all the time; tea parties didn't amount to much, neither did picnics, unless very well conducted.

No one would own that she was tired of the experiment; but, by Friday night, each acknowledged to herself that she was glad the week was nearly done.

WOMAN DEFENDS REFORM SCHOOL

Two Girls Have Gone From Mercer Institution As Missionaries.

TORONTO, Ont. Nov. 29 (CP).—Mrs. Janet Archdekin, President of the Central Council of Ratepayers' Associations, strongly defended the Mercer Reformatory before the Board of Control.

"I come before you as a private citizen, as a Sunday school superintendent with a staff of seventeen teachers who have visited the Mercer for many many years. I find conditions all that could be desired," she said. "The institution is comfortably heated, well lighted and quite sanitary. We have girls there from all over the United States. The beds are clean and the inmates are well fed and operate a factory with thirty-five or forty machines.

"The girls are no useless creatures. We have sent two out as missionaries and another is anxious to go."

CALLING HER BLUFF

By ADELAIDE D. HUFF

"But you don't think about me," Jack Meacham said desperately. "Where do I come in? It's always Mother, Mother, Mother! Mother says she'll kill herself if you marry, Mother's heart is so bad she can't stand the shock. Mother this and Mother that, darn it, I'll kill myself if I don't marry soon. I've waited two years for you, Edith, and that's as much and more than most men would wait. Now, I'm through, so you can make up your mind right now."

Edith Waring crept a little closer and put her soft arms around his neck. In the semi shadows he could not see, but he felt the tears on her cheek as she pressed her face against his.

"Jack, I'll go crazy between the two of you," she mumbled at last. "I want to get married as much as you do, but I'm so afraid. Suppose she should get desperately ill—or even—die. I'd never forgive myself. If only she weren't so—opposed to you. If only she liked you or we could make her consent at least, but she's more adamant than ever. Only last night we were talking about it again."

"She'd be opposed to anyone who wanted to marry you," said Jack crossly. "It's not because I'm I, it's simply because she's afraid I'll take you away from her. You might as well face it right now and decide what you're going to do about it. This can't go on any longer."

In reply Edith burst into tears on Jack's shoulder and he was quick to repent.

"Poor little kid, you are in a fix. Never mind. We'll get out of it somehow. Was I cross? I didn't mean to be. It's only that—I've waited so long and we seem further away from marriage than ever."

It was no use arguing with Edith, he decided desperately, as he walked home that evening through the shadowy, deserted streets. He was simply caught in a trap, thanks to a selfish, inhuman old woman.

After Jack left, Edith tumbled into bed and wept until she was sick. The next morning her mother was shocked by the dark circles under yer eyes and her sad expression.

"What's the matter with you, dear?" she asked in alarm. "I'm afraid you're sick."

"I'm not sick," said Edith. "I'm not sick!" she screamed. "Can't you leave me alone? One can't even be miserable in this house in peace!" She burst into tears and rushed from the breakfast table.

Mrs. Waring promptly called the doctor and impatiently walked the floor until his arrival. After she had told him the symptoms he rose to go upstairs to Edith's room.

"It's evidently a case of nerves, I'll see her alone," he said peremptorily as he left the room.

When he reached Edith's door he tapped lightly, then turned the knob and walked in.

"It's Dr. Forester," he said gently. "My goodness, when I see a young girl in bed on a pretty morning like this—and crying! Well, I know she needs the doctor. Now, turn over here and tell me all about it."

Edith needed no second invitation. In an outburst of misery she told him the whole story.

"Your mother has a bad heart," he said in the end as he stroked the girl's heaving shoulders. "That's true, but there's no reason she should ruin your life. Meacham's a fine fellow and you'd get a good man. She's a little bit selfish. Now, you get up and put on your prettiest frock. You're going out with me. I'll give you five minutes to get ready. I'll wait out in the hall."

"We're going to the office," he called. "Back shortly."

When he reached his office he went into the inner room, closed the door and called someone on the telephone.

"Sure, Jack," laughed the doctor. "Everything fixed?" he asked, turning to the young man. "All right, we'll go and get married."

"Oh, no! I couldn't!" said the girl, backing off.

"All right if you don't want to marry him, but this is your last chance."

"But Mother," she protested, her face white.

"We'll fix it up with Mother," said the doctor heartily. "Come along."

Like a person in a trance Edith permitted herself to be taken to the parsonage, she heard herself making responses, promising to love and obey and when it was over she felt no more married than before. In silence the three drove back to the Waring home; the only real thing was Jack's big warm hand holding hers in a grip that almost hurt.

"Well," said the doctor, as Mrs. Waring opened the door to them a few moments later. "I've been to a wedding—Edith's and Jack's."

"A—wedding!" squeaked Mrs. Waring, dropping into a chair and patting a hand over her heart, but the doctor paid no attention, he merely said:

"You've got a fine new son-in-law and I know you'll be proud of him."

"Oh, I am already," she answered after a moment, rising and kissing them. "My dear, dear children, but why didn't you tell me so I could have arranged a real wedding for you?"

A few moments later as the doctor hurried down the front steps he chuckled to himself.

"You just have to call their bluff. That's all it takes, and they'll come right around."

The autumn season of card parties held by the ladies of the parish of The Immaculate Conception, has been brought to a close until the New Year, when the series will be resumed. A bumper crowd of eighty tables of euchre, with some four hundred people in attendance, celebrated the closing card party of the Fall season. Prizes for the season were announced by Mr. Dan Leonard, prizes going to Miss Hazel Guerin, holder of the highest number of points at the close of seven card parties, who was awarded five dollars in gold, and to Mr. James Grisdale, who also received the gentlemen's prize of a gold piece. A pleasing musical program at this final card party included dance numbers by the little Flynn sisters, songs by Miss Stella Brady and the Leonard brothers, and piano accompaniments by Miss Margaret McCabe. This has been the most successful season of card parties in the history of the East City parish, and the series will be resumed after the New Year.

There is an increasing vogue for pink bathrooms, because of the psychological effect of that color. It is not necessary to buy colored plumbing to get color in the bathroom. Tint the walls and have curtains, towels and so on, match.

A few months ago he saved a baby from death beneath the wheels of a train, snatching the child from the engine's path in the nick of time. A second later he would have lost his life. THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Every season there seems to be some one particular type of evening gown—out of the many possible sorts presented—that makes an especially strong appeal to the American "jeune fille." It is not a case of follow your leader, precisely. Often the choice of one particular sort of frock comes as it were spontaneously in many sections and among many young women at much the same time. Simply the demands and taste of youth are very much the same here as there, and so from the various types of frock that the dressmakers have to offer, they will quite naturally tend to make the same selection.

This year the type of frock that young girls here, there and everywhere have adopted as their own is the tulle and taffeta combination. Bodice of taffeta cut "en forme" and skirt of tulle made quite full.

As so often happens with a type of frock that youth takes as its very own, these tulle and taffeta frocks really demand youthful face and figure. They are not the thing that you would advise any older woman to wear if you wanted her to look her very best. Tulle is especially attractive in the new off-white shades that are always lighter than any pastel shades.

The extremely light shade of green that is just off white is at the moment one of the favorite shades of the fashionable younger woman. Cream color, ecru, egg shell shade and the lightest possible shade of pink are also attractive in tulle and taffeta.

An interesting paragraph in the annual report of John Edgar, agent and superintendent of the local Children's Aid Society, was the one which referred to "dirty homes, and lazy, careless mothers. Immorality on the part of parents and guardians and girls constitutes a large part of my work. This seems to be on the increase. Where the end is going to be is a question. One prominent person told me the end would come when women assrted themselves and placed higher ideals before their daughters. The delinquency among boys and girls is becoming alarming."

Here is a new way of making coffee, which is recommended as being very popular in France. It will seem peculiar to the makers of coffee in the ordinary way: Bring milk to a scalding point. Put dry coffee into the milk after taking same from the fire, and let it stand for twenty minutes. Serve.

Bazaars have their way this week in three large church affairs. The Catholic Women's League, the ladies of St. John's Anglican Church, and the members of George street Church Ladies' Aid Society, are interested in this way during this week.

The Catholic Women's League, assisted by ladies from the outside parishes, is working hard for funds to assist St. Joseph's Hospital. The big market hall is filled with booths arranged by them after months of work by patient hands, manufacturing all sorts of pretty things in fancy and plain sewing, candy boxes, handkerchiefs and dolls. A rummage sale is also in progress during to-day and to-morrow.

A new note in bazaars is struck this year by the ladies of George street Church, who have in other years conducted a Christmas Fair in their big lower rooms at the church. The large new Sunday school auditorium is bright on Thursday and Friday of this week with the decorations arranged for the Festival of the Months. Each month is represetned in some way at this sale and the result is extremely satisfactory.

All the way through the cycle of changing seasons goes the round of the booths. From January, with its snow and icicles, on through the Easter time, and the St. Patrick's Day season, through the flowery days of summer, on to the Thanksgiving section which spells November, and is symbolized in the supper room, and the Christmas tree for December, the months move in changing colors.

The Ladies' Aid Society of George street Church, one of the senior women's organizations of the city, has nearly one hundred and forty members. It forms a strong parochial body which assists the church in many ways.

This organization paid over about $1200 towards the building of the new Sunday school, and also furnished the Board Room there and the kitchen, and re-decorated the old auditorium.

The president is Mrs. C. E. Smith. Convenors of the Festival of the Months are Mrs. H. F. Foote, Mrs. H. M. Yelland and Miss Mary Elliott.

The Church Workers' Association of St. John's Church, under whose auspices this week's sale is being held, was the inspiration of Archdeacon Davidson during the year 1912. It was formed as a social parochial society, whose object was not financial, but to interest members who were not working in the Missionary Society, and for the co-operation of the congregation in some branch of church work.

During 1920, Mr. Albert Stratton, and Mr. Herbert Morphet, were the church wardens, and at Archdeacon Davidson's request, the first elected officers of the Church Women's Association were Mrs. H. W. Morphet, as president, and Mrs. A. H. Stratton, as vice-president, with Mrs. Fawcett as secretary-treasurer.

The following presidents succeeded these officers: Mrs. A. W. Turner, Mrs. H. A. Morrow, Mrs. Boucher, Mrs. J. H. Seels, Mrs. C. L. Brewer, Mrs. A. E. Coulthard, Mrs. Stratton, and the present incumbent, Mrs. T.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

I PICKED up an old history of the first settlers of Peterborough the other day and the thought came to me as I read that this band of people was settled in new homes in the fall of the year, "How did they spend Christmas and what did they do to create a Yule-tide atmosphere?"

We of to-day have so many outside helps to make the season cheery, and there are so many decorations to be got for next to nothing, that we have no need to depend on our ingenuity for a Christmassy-looking home.

Here is the list of supplies given each family in the fall of 1825—a cow, an axe, an auger, a handsaw, a hammer, 100 nails, 2 gimlets, 3 hoes, 1 kettle, frying pan, 1 iron pot, 5 bushels of seed potatoes, and 8 quarts of Indian corn.

The writer of the book in 1867 goes on to say that "these poor immigrants were thus provided for in a manner which would now be considered more than sufficient for their necessities" but how many of us would like to go out and settle in a piece of bush country with the above articles? I must tell you that beside all this the people were given rations consisting of a pound of meat and one of flour for each person over fourteen, a half pound for children over five, and a pound of each for every four children under five.

Even this extra bounty doesn't seem to me to be much to come and go on but I'm sure babies would not relish a diet of meat and bread and a share of their allowance would be left to be traded for some other supplies. Indeed our friend tells us that there was exchange made for 'whiskey or other less injurious commodities,' and he was a physician.

Let us stop and think what these pioneer women would try to make for their Christmas dinner. First there is some kind of fowl needed. Were there partridges to be had or grouse? If so I am sure mother sent the head of the house out with the rifle brought from the old country to get a brace. If not fowl then they may have had a rabbit and that would have been cheaper, for they could be snared and I am quite sure some of those men knew what it was to catch a rabbit back in Ireland.

Then there were potatoes, but should they use them? They were for seed you know and to eat some meant that there were fewer planted the next spring. Still it would be very hard to resist the temptation, especially if there were children old enough to remember other Christmases back home.

What about a pudding? Was there suet for a boiled pudding? Perhaps—that would depend on the hunter again, for there were certainly deer to be had and if there was suet for the pudding we needn't worry about fowl or rabbit of course, for wouldn't there be a nice haunch of venison too?

That doesn't sound too bad for a dinner for the first Christmas but all wouldn't have that. I read that so many suffered from fever and ague. Many were so bad that they could hardly hand each other a drink of water for shaking and this lasted in some cases for months. How could these poor sufferers get anything but a broth made of their ration?

Now let us consider a tree. There was no difficulty there, but what to trim it with. Indian corn will not pop so there could be no strings of popcorn. They might have got the red partridge berry or some similar fruit. Then I feel that every scrap of colored paper and cloth was saved and made into a decoration for the tree.

Funny men and women of dough are quite amusing too, and any woman who had children to think of would create some queer characters for the tree. And hadn't those people wool? They were sure to knit their own mitts and stockings, even whole garments. Knitting strings of colored wool would not be wasteful because they could all be ravelled and used over again.

Then let us remember that the spirit of the family has a lot to do with the success of Christmas. If all exerted themselves to make it a real Christmas in spite of the handicaps they labored under I am sure they would all feel renewed in hope for the future and speculation as to what improvements they would have in their second Christmas would brighten them wonderfully.

These people were not weaklings or they would never have chosen to emigrate, and that quality in them would help a great deal in the attitude they took toward making a holiday spirit with very little to work on.

Toys must have been something that they could not allow room for in their effects when they packed their goods to come out to the wilds. What were the children to have to comfort them when they fell over roots or off stumps when daddy was clearing land? What was Jane to take to bed with her? Again mother got out the wool and this time she knit a covering shaped like a doll and stuffed it with old stockings and mitts. If there were not enough of these I think she did not overlook the moss on the trees. Of course 'next year' she could make corn cob dollies but we must remember there would be no cobs this year unless the seed happened to be left on a cob. I think it very unlikely however as space counted for so much in transporting goods and the corn would no doubt have been stripped from the cob.

Father would have his duties to perform with a jack-knife. Some of us have seen the beautiful fans made from pine that lumbermen and others shape with the use of a knife. There are also wooden chains and I expect in those days more men possessed the art of making articles from wood than in the present day.

Think how easy it is for us to get ready for Christmas when we compare our facilities with those of our first settlers. There are so many things we can make and to assist in ideas The Examiner has those helps that we have been writing about.

Then there are suggestions for menus and parties for this week's help so I think we all have it made pretty easy for us, don't you?

At first the receipts were on a very small scale, as also was the membership. But later during the years of work, undertakings included the erection of a stage in the former parish hall, decorating the parish hall, a great deal of Red Cross work, and forwarding field comforts to men overseas, installing lights, giving new hymnals to the choir, gifts for the Sunday school Christmas entertainment, and robing the choir with cassocks and surplices, giving to the Armenian Relief and paying a mortgage debt of $4,000.

The Association furnished the living room in the new parish hall, and paid for the kitchen equipment. For the last three years, a refreshment booth has been maintained at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. A piano has just been put in the parish hall by this society.

SCHOOL SYSTEM IS BEST BOOST

Ontario's Education Facilities Meet Needs of All Classes.

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Nov. 29. — (Canadian Press). — "A Canadian province, or American state, can be known for a number of things but there can be no finer advertisement than that provided by a school system that is second to none," said V. K. Green, chief inspector of public schools, in telling the Teachers' Institute here that Ontario sets a world's record in that feature of the educational system which provides at least two years' high school training for every pupil, even in remote districts. Education in general is so far advanced throughout the province, Mr. Greer says, that no child in the whole of Ontario even in the backwoods settlements of the North need get beyond regular school age without enjoying the advantages of adequate tuition by fully certified teachers. Ontario's educational machine has been built up over a period of years until today it constitues one of the province's greatest assets.

NURSES PLAN TO VISIT MONTREAL

7,000 of Profession Will Attend International Council Next Summer.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 29. — (Canadian Press). —Montreal will be host to 7,000 nurses next summer here from all parts of the world, when they attend the Congress of the International Council of Nurses. Nineteen countries will be represented at the Congress which will take place here during the entire week, beginning July 8, 1929.

Held in a different country every four years the congress took place in Helsingfors, Finland, in 1925, and the choice for the next congress fell upon Canada with China a close second. It was decided indeed to hold the congress in China but the civil war trouble there caused reconsideration of the decision and Canada was decided upon. All the larger cities of Canada applied for the privilege but the Grand Council chose Montreal.

District Churches

HOLY TRINITY (ANGLICAN) CHURCH.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAULTAIN, Nov. 29.—On Wednesday evening, Nov. 28, His Lordship, the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Toronto, attended divine service and preached at Holy Trinity Church, Haultain. Mr. A. H. Cuttle read the lessons and Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly conducted the service and played the organ. The service was a special one and was missionary in character. Special hymns, lessons and psalms were used.

The Lord Bishop took as his text Habakkuk 2:14, "The earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." The sermon was a missionary one and the Bishop developed five points.

First, the Church of Christ is the greatest missionary society in the world. At the present time there are throughout the world six hundred millions who call themselves Christians. This is due largely to missionary activity.

Secondly, all Anglicans are by virtue of their baptism members of the missionary society of the church in Canada, and the obligation rests upon them to support its activities.

Then, there is no doubt as to the Divine will in regard to missions. God desires us to carry on the work and has allotted to us the whole world as the sphere for our activities.

Our duty is three-fold in this matter of preaching the gospel to every creature. First we must pray for the spread of the good news; then we must work for the extension of the kingdom; and thirdly we must support it as God has prospered us.

The fifth and last point was that it is absolutely certain that, ultimately, all the eyes of the earth shall see the salvation of God in spite of the worldliness of man this must come about.

After the sermon, Mr. Cuttle addressed the congregation and made a forceful appeal for support of missions.

ST. MATTHEW'S (ANGLICAN) CHURCH, HALL'S BRIDGE

(Examiner Correspondence)

The Right Rev. J. F. Sweeny, Lord Bishop of Toronto, paid an episcopal visit to the congregation of St. Matthew's Church, Hall's Bridge, on Wednesday, November 28. He was accompanied by A. H. Cuttle, Esq., finance commissioner of the diocese of Toronto.

In spite of the inclement weather there was a large congregation to greet His Lordship and Mr. Cuttle.

In his address, the Bishop took as his text 1 Thess. 5, 15: "Ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves and to all men."

To grasp the real meaning of the text one must fully understand the meaning of the word "follow." The English word "follow" is used to translate three distinct Greek verses. The various shades of meaning illustrated by the speaker were as follows: First, the conception of "following" in the ordinary, generally accepted meaning of the word. The our English word "follow" in the New Testament is used to translate a Greek word, strictly meaning "to imitate." A third word translated as "follow" should strictly be translated "pursue." This is the meaning of the word used by St. Paul in the text. Here the ideas of imitating and pursuing are combined. If we are to pursue that which is good we must be imitators of Him whose is the absolute good. Christ is our great example.

In conclusion, the Bishop showed that God cares for those who are doing His work. "Who is he that shall harm you if ye be followers of that which is good?" No one can harm us if we do the right. This, then, is our obligation as Christians.

After the sermon, the Bishop introduced Mr. A. H. Cuttle, who addressed the congregation on the missionary work which is being done by the Church of England in Canada.

Do you know why winter is colder than summer? How deep scuttled ships sink in the sea? Why air in a close room gets bad? If you do, you cannot be caught in pitfalls of ignorance that trap many a man of more than average education, as was disclosed by a recent New York survey of college graduates and others presumably well informed.

ZION CITY IS DESCRIBED

NO POOR PEOPLE

WARKWORTH, Nov. 29 (Examiner Correspondence).—Rev. Mr. Tait, of Campbellford, gave a most excellent account of his visit to Zion City, at a meeting of the Young People's Union of St. Paul's Church, on Monday evening, when a large number of members of the Norham Young People's Union were present.

Arthur Howard read a Bible story about the shepherd boy, David, after which the president, Miss Verna Thompson, took charge of the meeting and extended a hearty welcome to the visitors.

Describes City

Rev. Mr. Tait gave a detailed account of how Zion City came to be and how it was managed, and he described the different factories and the tabernacle which is situated in the centre of the city as a hub, and how the streets all with Biblical names, run from this immense tabernacle. The employees of the factories are paid a wage according to their ability and positions and at the end of the year when all receipts are taken in, one-tenth goes to the tabernacle and the rest is given to the employes according to their ability. The speaker stated that there were no poor people in Zion City. This city was built on a plan to represent the New Jerusalem, and there is allowed no smoking, drinking, swearing or any other bad habit. This address was greatly appreciated and thoroughly enjoyed.

A duet, "Somebody," was given by Elizabeth Duncan and Alice Allen, followed by two vocal solos by Mr. Hazel of Campbellford, which were very much enjoyed. The last number on the program was a Biblical drama, "Ruth," and the following took part: Ruth, Mrs. M. E. Smith; Naomi, Mrs. G. B. Bowen; Boaz, M. E. Smith; Boaz' servant, Kent Buchanan.

HEALTHY BABY CITY.

Cleveland, Nov. 29.—The city's infant mortality rate has shown a marked decline in the past two years. The rate for 1927 was 56.2 deaths per 100 live births, against 71.6 for 1926.

BALL-BEARING MARVEL
25 Years in Advance of Any Other Separator—Oiled Yearly—Equipped with S.K.F. Ball-Bearings at Every Point of Wear
NECK-BEARING TROUBLE, which is the cause of so much separator trouble and skimming losses with other machines, is completely done away with. The B.B. Marvel has no neck-bearing and the bowl is years ahead in skimming efficiency.
WE SAY WE CAN SKIM CLOSER continuously and give the quality of cream required at all times easier than any other style of bowl. We are willing to demonstrate this any place—any time.
GOVERNMENT INVESTIGATIONS have proved the big losses to farmers in using poor and inefficient machines.
SEE THE B.B. MARVEL—its advanced bowl and other points of superiority. It costs more to build and produce, but we sell these newer machines at only slightly more than the solid-bushing, neck-bearing separators.

VICTORS RALLY IN LAST PERIOD TO EVEN SCORE

Winners Now Meet Sarnia in Final For O.R.F.U. Interscholastic Title.

WETTLAUFFER STARS.

Few Misplays On the Part of U. T. S. One of Features of Game.

TORONTO, November 29. — Bloor, champions of the Toronto High School League, earned the right to meet Sarnia in the final for the O. R.F.U. Interscholastic title when they defeated University Schools by 11 to 2 at Varsity field yesterday afternoon before a crowd of 1,000 spectators. It required 20 minutes of overtime to settle it as the teams were deadlocked at two-all when the regular sixty minutes of play had expired.

In the first overtime Bloor received a touchdown when Ferguson fumbled behind his own line after being tackled, and Shanks fell on it. It was converted and Wettlaufer added three more singles before time expired.

Wettlaufer Brilliant.

Wettlaufer was outstanding. He kicked for great distance with the heavy ball and made some clever runs for long gains. Outside of his work, however, Bloor showed nothing wonderful, but Wettlaufer's individual effort was enough to turn the tide.

Misplays Few.

U.T.S. showed real cleverness in the execution of their plays, and Copp, Ferguson, and Evans turned in some smart work. However, they tired from too much effort and too much use. The field was very muddy and the ball greasy, and heavy and had to handle, yet there were few misplays.

The line-up:

Bloor C.I.—Flying wing, Johnston; halves, Wettlaufer, Tovey, and Skanks; quarter, Clarke; snap, Bryant; inside wings, Mitchell and Archer; outsides, Smellie and Elson; alternates, McNichol, Axsmith, W. Foster, Edgar, Kendell, Benoliel, and Golud.

U.T.S.—Flying wing, Ferguson; halves, Copp, Evans, Greer; quarter, Winrow; snap, Keith; inside wings, Ashdown and Douglas; middles, Acres and Wear; outside wings, Dwyer and Stollery; alternates, Ireland, Walker, Harris, Black, Corrigan, Boomer, Magwood, Canningham, Plaxton, and Scully.

Referee—Harold Bailey.
Umpire—Fred Bartlett.

ALEX. GRAY JOINS TORONTO CANPROS

Former Port Arthur Centre Purchased From Maple Leafs.

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—Toronto Millionaires yesterday consummated a deal that should add considerable strength to their forward line. Owner Teddy Oke announced the outright purchase of Alex. Gray, former Port Arthur star, from Toronto Maple Leafs.

Gray will report to the local Canadian League team's management for practice this morning, and will play for them in London tomorrow night. Toronto fans will get their first glimpse of him in a Millionaire uniform Tuesday night, when the team plays Buffalo here. As centre player for Port Arthur seniors Gray was an outstanding amateur and he will be used principally in that position by the Millionaires. He will also be available for duty at right wing, which position he can fill capably.

The former Port Arthur star turned professional to join the New York Rangers, but the presence of the Cook brothers on the team kept his playing to a minimum. The Maple Leafs secured him in the deal which sent "Butch" Keeling to New York.

Manager "Happy" Holmes is very optimistic as to the prospects of the Millionaires. He feels that Tuesday night's victory over Kitchener, following good play in their previous game at Niagara Falls is an indication that they have struck their stride following an inauspicious opening-game performance.

"The players have been slow in starting," said Holmes last night. "To date they have not played good hockey until after the first period. I think, however, that from now on they will play good hockey from the start. Gray will give the team added scoring punch and I look for another victory in London Friday."

DUKES WITHDRAW FROM SENIOR SERIES

Release Players To Argos So That Toronto Will Have Strong Team.

TORONTO, November 29. — The Marlboro Athletic Club officials have decided to drop out of the O.H.A. senior series this season so as to devote their time to the juniors. At the beginning of the season it was the intention of the Marlboros to have a senior team, and when the Argonauts announced that they were placing a tam in the senior series the "Dukes" decided not to interfere and withdrew, releasing the McPherson brothers, Mercer and Irvine so that the Argos would have a strong team to represent Toronto.

When the Argo Club withdrew thei rapplication last week the Marlboros decided to get a team together for the senior series. Owing to the fact that several players that the "Dukes" were counting on to play senior cannot be signed, and as most of the prospects are playing in industrial and financial leagues the Marlboro officials feel they could not get a strong enough team together.

"Shrimp" and John McPherson, Frank Irvine and Claude Harris were allowed to sign elsewhere, and it would not be fair to try to get these boys to ask for their release at this late date. The officials regret to have to remain out of senior hockey this season.

BENGALS BRUSH-UP ON BACKFIELD PLAY

Jungle Kings Preparing For Canadian Senior Football Final.

HAMILTON, Nov. 29.—The Jungle Kings have shown no signs of letting up in their advance preparations for the Canadian senior football final with the Regina Rough Riders here on Saturday. Tuesday night the entire squad stepped at a hot pace through a two-hour workout, and last night they were back on the job with more "pep," it appeared, than when they started out at the beginning of the season.

For two hours the crew hustled, with special attention being given to backfield plays. The management does not want a repetition of the exhibition given against the Varsity Orphans here last Saturday and all were working towards perfect cohesion, such as was exhibited in those last few moments of the last tilt when the Bengals' machine crashed unresisted, almost, through the game Blue ranks of Varsity. The team will start against the Western champions on Saturday with Gibb, Leadley and Welch on the back division, it is indicated. Glen Small will take care of the flying wing duties throughout. Johnny Fitzpatrick, who started out as a relief backfielder, will be used as a sub for outside wing, so that with Small at his old position, Broadway will be the only backfield substitute. In a pinch, however, the Bengals can use Eddie Wright and Ken. Walker on the rear guard.

Considerable speculation regarding the strength of the Western champions is being indulged in here, and the fans are content to purchase their tickets in the meantime, and wait until Saturday to verify their opinions. It is generally felt, however, that Tigers will win. However, the Westerners are rated highly on the back division and if they can produce a good kicker, plus a couple of hard-tackling wings and half the courage the Varsity Orphans showed, they will be hard to knock over.

PROMINENT IN PLAY.

Bert Gibb, of the Hamilton Tigers, who was prominent in the play throughout at Hamilton Saturday, when the Tigers beat the Varsity team for the eastern championship, but who marred his work by an alleged attempt to injure Snyder in a tackle and was thrown into the crowd by Alex. Carrick in retaliation But Bert took it grinning and sportingly allowed tit for tat.

OZIAS DE LAPLANTE AS UMPIRE CAUGHT TIMELY OTTAWA OFFSIDE IN AN OLD BATTLE AT THE OVAL

MACPHERSON'S FIGHT.

(By HUGH FAIRFAX.)

It was never suggested in the memorable days of Peterborough's rugby glory that Ozias de Laplante should have been credited, as umpire, with some kind of assist in the victory over Ottawa intermediates at Nicholls Oval on Saturday, October 19, 1901. But the legends of the game which its players and fans even now are passing on to the sequent generation preserves an old rumor which Mr. Laplante himself declares is not true.

According to that twisted tradition Eddie Gleason, the great Ottawa College half-back, who was referee, was also the time-keeper during the latter part of the game, Ozias Laplante was umpire and H .R. H. Kenner, head linesman. That detail of stage-setting is correct at any rate. With the score 7 to 4 against them, Ottawa had the ball within striking distance of the Peterborough goal line, and a try would have given them the game. It was alleged in that ancient rumour that Gleason let the time lapse nine minutes beyond the official sixty, and finally when Ottawa were but four or five feet out, Mr. Laplante blew his whistle for an offside, and Gleason forthwith called the game.

Of course the implication was that Ozie was beating Gleason at his own stuff. However, so much for that hardy, hoary rumour.

The score sheet has long since been lost, the records eternally closed, and the game itself all but forgotten, but the recollection of it lends color to the battles of those late autumn Saturday afternoons, and may be of interest to the manhood of this benighted and feminist age with its domesticated diversions of bridge and bowling against a fluttering background of abbreviated skirts.

Backed Against Goal Line.

Peterborough had gone to Ottawa early in October opening the eastern Ontario intermediate schedule and were defeated by 1 to 0. In the return game Peterborough pulled out a 7 to 4 score, winning the round by 7 to 5. It is true that the Peterborough team had its back to the wall in closing minutes of the game, praying for night or Blucher, or a break or fluke of some kind that would let them out into the open field again. One recent recollection of those days concluding incidents recounted that a Peterborough half-back, possibly Hal Burnham, booted from behind his own line. The ball bounced out of the arms of Belanger, the Ottawa fullback, and Bill Meagher, who had followed up fast, reached out and grabbed the ball out of the air and headed away for a touchdown. But, Gleason thought Meagher had grabbed the ball out of Belanger's arms, and called the play back.

That was a bitter break, and soon Ottawa was back again at the four yard line. In the next play Mr. Laplante's whistle blew for an Ottawa side, and Peterborough moved out toward the quarter line. Shortly afterward, Gleason called time, and Mr. Laplante says it was the exact, full sixty minutes.

The Peterborough Team.

The Peterborough team that afternoon was: Full back, Harold Armstrong; halves, Dr. A. W. McPherson, Hal Burnham and Dr. V. McWilliams; quarter, Garnet Bell; scrimmage, George Revel, Jack Deannard and Alex Noble; wings, Ed. Dillon, Bill Crowley, Bill Meagher, Joe Picard, Chris Graham, Henderson and Bruce Rickey. The smartest play of the game and the most important was Chris Graham's, when he broke through and blocked the kick, then grabbed up the ball and crossed the Ottawa line for the one and only try.

"The Ottawa man was certainly off-side," Mr. Laplante recalls, "I had been watching him all afternoon, because in the exchange of kicks he loafed offside. And in the last play I was keyed up and watching for everything. I caught the Ottawa man going through ahead of the play, and blew the whistle."

In the first game at Ottawa Graham had directed the teams from the quarter-back position, Dr. Andy Scott was at full-back, and Rollie McWilliams was up in one of the front line places.

London Won in West.

Meanwhile, London had won their group in Western Ontario and Peterborough played the first of the finals in the Forest City on November 11, 1901, losing by 27 to 6. MacPherson scored Peterborough's only try. London had a big, burly scrimmage, with behemoths on the wings. Three of them were London policemen, Lucas and Black being two remembered names. London that day played under an assumed name an athlete named Peel, a boxer of parts and an outstanding man. His position was on the half line. During the game, he and "Doc" McPherson clashed, and as Jack Deannard tells it, "Fighting Mac" won in every round.

"You might say there were just two blows, Mac struck Peel, and Peel struck the ground. MacPherson was not easily angered; he had good control of himself, but when he let go there were few men in this country who could stop him Personally, I think he was the greatest rugby player Peterborough ever turned out. He didn't know what fear was, and he could carry the ball, kick and tackle with the best of them. When Mac quit rugby around here, it just seemed that the club started on the down hill."

Such is Sergt. Deannard's tribute to his old team mate. Of himself he says: "I never considered myself in Mac's class as a rugby player. Never thought of such a thing, but I was a big, husky youth, and it took a lot to put me off my feet and that was where I could help in the scrimmage or at inside wing and in bucking the line."

Disqualified London.

London kept possession of the ball for about three-quarters of the game. Peel was protested and the O.R.F.U. disqualified London and awarded the intermediate championship to Peterborough. When the silver trophy arrived in Peterborough it was lacking two of the miniature silver rugby balls on which were inscribed the names of each season's champions. The two missing balls were the Peterborough championship of 1899 and the ball for 1901.

On Thanksgiving Day, November 28, Peterborough won the Canadian intermediate title in Montreal by defeating the Quebec club, the winners of the Q.R.F.U. intermediate honors. The score was 16 to 9. The team was composed of Scott, MacPherson, Hal Burnham, Macdonald, Bell, Revel, Noble, Deannard, Dillon, Picard, Meagher, Rickey, Graham, Smith and Crowley.

Burnham and Crowley played a great game that day, Chris Graham and Revel scored tries, and Graham was so used up that he was unable to turn out for hockey a month later.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

DEBUTANT TEAMS WIN S.P.A. TILTS

St. Michael's and Oshawa Juniors Ousted From Sportsmen's Series.

TORONTO, November 29. — West Toronto and Young Rangers, two new entries in the O. H. A., advanced to the semi-finals of the Sportsmen's Patriotic series with wins in the double header at Arena Gardens, the West Enders defeating Oshawa by a 5 to 1 score, while Rangers eliminated St. Michael's College 6 to 3. In both games the debutantes were the better teams, although the battles were close. Equipped with players just graduated out of the outdoor leagues, West Toronto and the Rangers are exceptionally powerful, and they have bright prospects for further success in the pre-season test.

Young Rangers created a surprise in the easy fashion in which they disposed of St. Michael's, for they matched the Irishers at their own game of speed and team play. The Rangers just checked the Irishers to a standstill and raced any serious threats into the corners, which upset the students' style of play, and had them in a quandary all during the game. The Saints were erratic in their shooting, missing the goal on many good chances, while their play lacked the usual punch, but the Rangers must be given credit for disorganizing the Collegians' campaign. Bruyea and Kehoe, the two remaining members of last year's College team, were the only ones to keep up to the Irish standard of play.

Smillie Absent.

Young Rangers, although not at top strength, with Smillie, the regular defence man unable to play owing to his Rugby engagement in the afternoon, continued to show improvement. The Rangers' play last night was good enough for any mid-winter display, and the club should be heard from during the regular campaign, as they are sure to improve. They matched the Irishers in speed, which is a credit to any club, while they had more direction to their play and showed more finish in the counting zone. The defence work of the Rangers was particularly good with Goldie in goal playing star hockey while Hickey and Davy in front of him provided steady protection. Smillie, McMillan and Yates were the best of a smart set of forwards, while Allen and McDonald were also good.

St. Michael's did not play back to their last game in the S.P.A. when they defeated Victorias, their defence opening wide while their front line was also below par. Byrne and Smith, the Irish rear guard, used heavy body checks to good advantage and were fair on offensive thrusts but they were tricked out of position too often. While the Irishers could not get going in a hockey way, they retained all the fight that has made the College famous in sports, sticking to their task until the last bll.

WITH ROUGHRIDERS.

Eddie James, age 21, weight 185, position, star half-back of the Regina Roughriders. James is from Winnipeg. Was a star in the junior series there and stepped into the limelight as soon as he hit Regina. He is the greatest junior star ever seen in Saskatchewan. His work has stood out in very game, not only with the juniors but with the senior team in exhibition tilts. James can plunge and run in the open field, a great catch and a reckless tackler. James will play with the Roughriders at Hamilton on Saturday.

Roy Worters Signs With Pittsburgh Club

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—Roy Worters, crack goalie of the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National Hockey League, signed a contract yesterday after holding out from the start of the season, Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion and now owner of the Pirates, announced here. Leonard said Worters signed at the club's figure, which was considerably less than the $8,000 the goalie had demanded for a single season's salary.

BULLDOGS WIN FROM PANTHERS

Windsor Ties Cataracts For Second Place in Canpro Loop.

BY 5 TO 1 COUNT.

WINDSOR, Nov. 29.—Windsor Bulldogs moved up into a tie with Niagara Falls for second place last night when they trounced the London Panthers here 5 to 1 in the only Canadian League game of the evening. It was Windsor's fourth straight win and the third straight scored at home.

For better than half the hour of play the Panthers, though disappointed that Joe Primeau did not join them, held the Bulldogs scoreless The first period went without a goal and the visitors took the lead midway through the second when Foxworthy, a sub forward, contributed their only goal.

But the Windsorites, aroused by the threat of defeat by their old enemies before a home crowd of five thousand fans, staged a whirlwind finish. They got two goals before the second period was over, and they ran in three as the desperate Londoners waged a game but losing fight in the last chapter.

One Goal Awarded.

Four of the Bulldog scores were the direct result of good teamwork, and the other was awarded. Sorrell took Roach's pass four minutes after Foxworthy had thrown his stick. Then got the equalizer. Mike Neville made it 2 to 1 when he beat Ironstone on Emm's pass just before the second intermission.

In the last period Sorrell again found the net, this time on Fournier's assist. Mike Neville slipped through all alone to get another himself. He actually scored, but the goal was awarded before he shot because Foxworthy had thrown hih stick. Then less than four minutes from full time, Mickey Roach paid down a pass on which Frank Carson bagged the final marker.

Ironstone played a sound game in goal for the Panthers, with Lever and Jackson the best of the forwards Moore, Corbeau and Voss offered a rugged defence from the start, but could not stand up against the Bulldogs when they started their combination attacks.

WEIGHT RESTRICTIONS.

Claim Is Disbarment To Say Boxer Cannot Hold Two Titles.

PHILADELPHIA, November 28. — Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion of the world, said last night that the New York Boxing Commission was "stifling ambition and restricting ability," in refusing him permission to compete for the heavyweight crown.

Loughran said he had been unable to discover any reason why he should not have "a chance to fulfill my life's ambition at constant sacrificing by winning the heavyweight championship of the world."

"It cannot be," the speaker declared, "that the New York commission in refusing me permission to compete as a heavyweight, is actuated by the idea that it is saving me from harm, or even setting a dangerous precedent. It only stifles ambition and restricts ability."

"In no sport that I can think of —wrestling, baseball, football or rowing—are the weight restrictions based on the same foundation that has led to my disbarment from the heavyweight class by the New York solons, and it is virtual disbarment to say 'this man cannot hold two titles.'

"Fight records will bear me out. Joe Walcott, a welterweight, knocked out Joe Choyniski, a real heavyweight and Stanley Ketchell held the welterweight, middle-weight and light heavyweight titles in his day. Ketchell weighed only 148, yet he fought big Jack Johnston and knocked him down."

MONTREAL, Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—The mooted transfer of Roy Worters, goal-keeper of the Pittsburgh Hockey Club to New York Americans will not be allowed, President Calder of the National League announced today.

"Worters is still under suspension," said Calder, "and when suspension is lifted, he will play with Pittsburgh or not at all."

THEATRES

"CHAIN LIGHTNING"

Buck Jones' meteoric rise from a mechanic in a small Indiana town to one of the most popular Western aces in pictures embraces more romance and thrills than has ever been written into any Western drama. "Chain Lightning," Buck's latest picture, opens at the Regent Theatre today.

When life grew dull to Buck, who had always had a "yen" to see the world, he went to Montana to get a job as a cowpuncher. It was there that he proved his real worth with horses. He could not only ride like a demon, but he understood how to handle the animal. It was this early experience that was to mean so much to him in his career in later years.

True to himself that he would see the world, he joined the United States Cavalry during a rebellion in the Phillippines. Following his return to the States, he did not even consider to return to his home in the East. His life from then on was to encompass color, thrills and hazards, so he joined Miller's "101" Wild West Show. In this he won for himself a name as a master of the most daring stunts ever accomplished on horseback.

During the World War he again joined the cavalry and sailed to France, where his feats of horsemanship gave him the title of "the greatest rider in the world." At the close of the war he was asked to perform before the crowned heads of Europe and in this exhibition he was first brought to the notice of William Fox. The producer sensed his great merits and asked Jones to sign a contract, which he did, this being the venture on which he was to settle his strength and ability for life.

This romantic and dangerous background in many ways explains the almost instantaneous success of the dashing young man in his debut in pictures. In the space of a few years' time he has become one of the most popular stars on the screen.

His new Fox Film production is instilled with all of the thrills and glamour of his daring personality; filled with hard-riding, sure-fire shooting and hand-to-hand fighting.

With him in an unusually fine cast are Dione Ellis, William Welch, Jack Barton, Ted McNamara, Gene Cameron, Buck Moulton, and Marty Faust. Lambert Hillyer directed the production.

AT THE CAPITOL.

RICHARD DIX SAYS RUTH ELDER'S CAREER ASSURED.

Ruth Elder has a great motion picture future, in the opinion of those who have watched her and worked with her during her first experience as a screen player.

With no previous experience, the girl who was the first of her sex to conquer the Atlantic Ocean by air, performs like a seasoned trouper, according to Frank Strayer, director; and Richard Dix, star of Paramount's "Moran of the Marines," the picture in which she makes her film debut, at the Capitol Theatre to-day.

"Ruth Elder isn't going to have to get by on her reputation," Dix said. "She has talent. She was very nervous before actual shooting of the picture started but when the cameras started grinding she forgot herself in her interest in the work, and she has really surprised me by her acting ability. I knew that a girl who did what she did would succeed in anything she attempted, but the extent to which she is going to succeed will astonish people.

"Just watch her is all I hvae to say," Strayer commented. "She is one of the most conscientious workers I have ever known. She has a consuming desire to learn and what is more, she can act. With that combination she can't fail to succeed in a big way.

Fish have been made to come for food at the sound of a buzzer or a slight rise in the temperature of the water.

"BABY STUDENTS" O.H.A. TEAM

Charged With Consipracy To Violate the Federal Prohibition Law.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 29. — (Canadian Press).—The arrest of three police officers here on charges of conspiracy to violate the federal prohibition law by co-operating with rum runners resulted to-day in the launching of an investigation to determine whether other officials are involved.

Patrolman J. A. Martin and special officer Charles Deane, of the Santa Monica force were arrested by Frank M. Reynolds, Federal Prohibition Administrator of this district, when he engaged three rum runners in gun battle at Ocean Park pier yesterday. Patrolman Sam Elzman of Venice Division of Los Angeles Police Department was taken into custody later.

More than four-fifths of those questioned, reports Popular Science Monthly, declared that winter is colder than summer because the sun is then farther away. Actually, the sun has nothing to do with the question. The real reason lies in the earth's changing slant which brings the sun directly overhead in summer, and lower in the sky in winter.

BARTSCH ARRESTED.

SANDUSKY, Ohio., Nov. 29 (Canadian Press).—Acute dilation of the heart caused the death of Donald "Tiger" Huff, local boxer, who collapsed during a contest here last night, the Coroner decided to-day. Huff fell to the floor just before the end of the sixth round, after his opponent, Emil Batsch, had delivered a series of blows to the head. Bartsch, who fights under the name of "Chuck Mangin" was arrested on a formal charge of manslaughter and released on $5,000 bail.

CALARIS SOLD FOR BIG PRICE

SOLD FOR $100,000.

NEW YORK, November 29. — Carlaris, one of the real blue bloods of the thoroughbred world was sold on Wednesday by W. T. (Fatty) Anderson for $100,000. The purchaser was B. B. Jones, owner of the Audley Farm.

This is one of the biggest transactions in the racing world for quite some time. Breeders have repeatedly tried to get Anderson to sell Carlaris, but he turned a deaf ear to all until Wednesday. There is no doubt in the opinion of the turf world that Jones bought a wonderful prospect, and should more than make up for his investment within a few years.

Carlaris is inscribed on the rolls of the winners of the rich Coffroth Handicap, the $100,000 stake made world famous by "Sunny" Jim Coffroth. By his victory in that event, Anderson won a fortune besides the purse, for he had wagered $1,000 across the board in Jack Atkin's winter book at 40, 20 and 10. This bet alone netted him $70,000. It was for this reason that the rotund horseman declined to part with the horse that made him wealthy.

After his Coffroth victory, J. L. Cooper made an offer of $250,000 for Carlaris. This was turned down for Anderson figured upon the colt winning the classics of that season. After his victory however he went off, and never showed his real form. He raced around here for a while but could never do anything worth mentioning.

He is a son of Phalaris and is as well bred as any horse in the English stud book. Phalaris has sired such great horses as Coronach, Derby winner, and Warden of the Marshes, a great stake winner. Coming from such fine stock, Carlaris should make good as a sire.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Bloor Collegiate beat University of Toronto Schools 11 to 2 in a sparkling game that had to go into overtime.

The hockey players had another strenuous workout in the "Y" gym last night under the snaporders of Bert Nichols, a man who knows his P.T. from army training. The following are some of the players who were out taking the jerks:—Cripps, Foley, Hall, J. Lebarr, T. LeBarr, C. Kenneally, Lightheart, Thornton, Swanger, J. Mayette, S. Mayette, Gillespie, Mahood, and King.

The signing of Roy Worters with the Pittsburg Club after months of holding out for salary of $8,000 comes as a surprise. The New York Americans were keenly interested in Worters because the goalie Forbes is ill and Flat Walsh, who was borrowd from the Montreal Maroons, was about to be recalled by that team. It was thought that there was a big deal pending between the Pirates and the Americans, but it is likely that Benny Leonard demanded too much for his holdout Worters. Then again he may have seen the light and come across with the $8,000 to the great little netminder.

* * * * * * *

It is reported that Worters will not play with Pittsburgh but will go to the team offering the highest bid in players. Leonard is badly in need of more players and he intends to try and obtain some for Worters. It it not to be supposed that Worters would feel comfortable in a Pittsburg uniform after all the row about salary.

The convention in Toronto next week of all the minor league magnates will likely see the deal sending Prudhome to Detroit and Alexander to New York fully ratified.

Entries closed for the O.H.A. last night. The executive will now have the job on their hands of grouping 165 teams of which five are senior, eighty-two in the intermediate and seventy-eight junior. Everything points to a banner year in the O.H.A. this winter with good teams being lined up in every part of the province.

After the game in Hamilton this Saturday "Pep" Leadley and Cap Fear have said that they will put away their uniforms for the last time. These two are perhaps the outstanding players in Canadian rugby in each one's particular sphere of the game. Leadley as a drop kicker has never had an equal on a Canadian gridiron and Cap Fear is equally as famous for his tackling. Leadley made the same statement last season and then the game proved too irresistible to him, and he came out to help the Tigers.

SEEMS like a lot of days, doesn't it? Loads of time—so you let it go until to-morrow—to-morrow when to-day will be yesterday. But the year is so full of yesterdays—so few to-morrows left — yesterdays travel fast, to-morrows never come.

Yesterday means regret, to-morrow hope, but to-day is opportunity—to-day is never too late, never too early. Do it to-day and you'll know it is done. Let it go until to-morrow and it may never be done.

BIG IMPROVEMENT IN NEW GUINEA

Life is Lovely if One's Habits Are Temperate, Declares Australian.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., November 2 (Canadian Press). — Life is lovely in New Guinea, if one's habits are temperate, according to C. A. LeMaistre Walker, who has returned here after several months on the big island. Australia's administration of the territory has been most successful he says, and a big improvement is noted during the last seven years.

"Life in New Guinea is amazingly attractive," said Mr. Walker. "The islands are a veritable paradise, and everyone seems happy. With good house boys, the servant difficulty does not exist, but it is very easy to become slack and drift into lazy habits, which bring in their train malaria, black water fever, and other tropical diseases. On the other hand, persons who have lived there for years and looked carefully after themselves, keeping fit by plenty of exercise and maintaining temperate habits in everything, enjoy perfect health.

"I heard of one man who complained that he was not feeling well. He could not understand it, he said, because he had had before breakfast two bottles of beer, two gin slings, and a brandy and soda. Young men especially have to be most careful, because life in the tropics is not conducive to the same speed as in our cities, and it is easy to become slack—in morals and everything.

"The administration of the islands shows marked improvement, but the low price of copra is causing many of those who have recently acquired former German plantations some concern, as these purchases were made at very high prices, which make it difficult or impossible for the planters to pay unless the price of copra improves considerably. Even companies well established are feeling the pinch. A planters' association, composed chiefly of returned soldiers has been formed so that combined efforts may be made in any representations regarding the handling of the properties.

"MYSTIC BOND" OF TWINS EXPLAINED

Science Reveals Astonishing Facts About Secrets of Duplicate Birth.

When Nature sets out to produce a pair of twins one of her methods is the exact reverse of the marriage service. Instead of joining two to make one, Nature divides one to make two. The chief reason why many pairs of twins are so astonishingly alike that even their own mothers get them mixed is that they are not really two individuals at all, but are two halves of one individual, split apart early in the formation of their bodies.

At a recent meeting of the Eugenics Research Association in New York, Dr. H. F. Perkins and Miss Laura Bliss, of the University of Vermont, reported a remarkable scientific study of fifteen pairs of twins.

When the right hands of both twins of one of these pairs were placed on a measuring chart they were found to be identical in size and shape. Even the lines on the palms were similar. The two left hands were also the same. But when the right hand of one twin was compared with his own left hand, differences were found. The corresponding sides of the different twins were more alike than the two sides of the same individual!

One of the most ancient ideas about twins, writes E. E. Freein the November Popular Science Monthly, is that there exists between them some unexplainable mystic bond," so that one twin knows what the other is doing and lives the same kind of a life. Modern science admits some truth in this idea, explaining it by the fact that some twins have exact similarly of brain as well as of body.

For example, when asked independently to draw an outline map of England from memory, twins in London began at the same point and made identical errors. In one college examination they were accused of cheating because their papers contained identical mistakes. They were exonerated only by the fact that they had been seated too far from each other for possible communication. A still more astonishing coincidence is that when one twin was caught throwing a paper wad in school, his brother on the other side of the room was detected about to do the same thing.

Green gooseberry sawflies are being reared at Manchester, England, with a view to fuller knowledge of their life history and "bionomics."

WOMEN ASKED TO USE SLOGAN "BUY AT HOME"

Women's Institute Meets in Annual Convention in TORONTO.

MAJOR HALLAM SPEAKS.

One Speaker Asks When Government Will Entertain 500 Girls at Royal.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—At the afternoon session on Wednesday of the Women's Institute Convention being held in Toronto, Mrs. I. Graves, of Scarboro Junction, presided in the absence of Mrs. C. Field Robertson, Lanark, with all the members of the federated Board on the platform.

Mrs. W. R. Steeper, of Mount Albert, spoke on Canadian industries and referred to the "Buy at Home" slogan. She mentioned the importing of coal when Alberta coal could be secured.

The convention committed elected was Chairman, Mrs. T. W. Meek, Alton; secretary, Mrs. Milligan, Halton County, including members of the Provincial Board, chairman of Central Ontario Standing Committees and District present.

Miss Emily Guest reported on education in the unavoidable absence of Miss K. F. McIntosh, Brampton, and included utilization of literature. She spoke of periodical programs, demonstrations of public speaking and debating, music, influence of radio, and mentioned the progress made in music and choral classes which was quite striking. In conclusion she asked when the Government would entertain 500 girls at the Royal Winter Fair.

Miss Florence P. Eadie, of Scotland, in her address, asked for a number of reports of Junior Institutes and these were given by junior members. Miss Eadie explained the facts of the judging competitions and stressed the benefits derived thereof. A number of members of the Junior Institutes gave reports of the year's activities.

Major Douglas Hallam, Toronto, in his address on "The Canadian Wool and Silk Industries," exhibited numerous articles for illustration, nummills in Canada made silk hose; forty-two mills make artificial silk. A display of many different kinds of clothing, products of one hundred and fifty mills in Canada, proved very interesting as an exhibit of our Canadian industries. The inspection of this exhibit brought the afternoon session to a close.

Tuesday Session.

Mrs. A. E. Walker, Bartonville, vice-chairman, presided at the meeting on Tuesday morning, with Mrs. J. W. Stone, Mrs. T. W. Meek, Alton; Miss K. F. McIntosh and G. Putnam, on the platform. Mrs. Ross, provincial convenor committee, gave a report on "Home Economics." She said that with a committee on "Home Economics" in the home branch, it would greatly aid in making out the program.

"A balanced ration of well cooked food, sufficient rest at regular hours is what produces the Canadian as the world knows him. We don't need to worry over the doctor's living. For assistance on the selection of foods, do not forget the bulletins to be had from the Department of Agriculture and Department of Health. If the Agricultural Representative puts on a short course for the boys, see to it that a similar one is provided for the girls, as it means so much to the young people.

Take Advantage of Course.

The real value of the judging competition is received during the coaching period. Besides meeting of new friends, the education of the competition is worth a great deal. Encourage the mothers to have their daughters take advantage of the competition."

Under the heading of clothing, Mrs. Ross suggested taking advantage of the dressmaking and millinery courses, apron contest and demonstration of what can be made from one yard of cloth. Under the heading of "Our Home," labor-saving devices, water supply and sanitation in the home were some of the suggestions given by Mrs. Ross. She lastly mentioned the value of the good work supplied by the Press.

Notes Advancement

Dr. Margaret Patterson was the next speaker and in opening her address, said she was glad to note the advancement in education in sending in these reports and suggested that township councils offer special prizes for best schools along lines of sanitation. One of the main facts stressed was safe water supply at the schools. Dr. Patterson said that the day was long passed when the planks on the well were two inches apart and the boys came to school in their bare feet on hot days and pumped water on them to cool them. She also stated that in responding to the Roll Call, "Best recipes for cooking vegetables" was a healthful subject. Dr. Patterson spoke of the good accomplished by Dr. Helen MacMurchy's little blue books and she suggested having a community nurse and making use of her at all occasions.

Mrs. W. H. Hunter, in reporting for the committee on agriculture, said, "Perhaps there is no occupation where the woman assists the husband more, than in farming." She spoke of the different conditions in farming life to-day with improvements such as the telephone, highways and lighting systems. Mrs. Hunter said that exhibits should be confined to the child's own work. She also gave a number of suggestions whereby the farm woman could assist financially by doing something such as poultry raising.

George A. Putnam

George A. Putnam, superintendent, in his address spoke of his delight at the conventions he had attended. During his twenty-five years connected with the Institutes, he has been but a silent partner, the great responsibility resting on the women. He also advised obtaining the free literature which was of great value. Mr. Putnam spoke of necessity of relief for the north country for families in low circumstances and hoped the branches would help in this work.

Time was devoted to the voting on resolutions put before the convention by Mrs. W. R. Lang, after which there was a lengthy discussion on "Hydro on the Farm."

At the close of the session, Mr. and Mrs. Putnam were asked to come to the platform and Mrs. J. W. Stone and Mrs. T. W. Meek presented Mr. Putnam with a purse and Mrs. Putnam with a large bouquet of 'mums, in honor of Mr. Putnam's birthday. Mr. Putnam replied, stating his pleasure in his association with the Women's Insti-tutes and Mrs. Putnam also expressed her thanks in a few well-chosen words.

Wedding Bells

O'CONNOR—PIERRIE.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Mary's church, Campbellford, on Wednesday morning at eight o'clock, by the pastor, the Rev. C. J. Phelan, when Nora Blanche Pierrie became the bride of Maurice Mackey O'Connor of Ennismore. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and bridegroom, were present.

The bride wore a dress of poudre blue cut velvet. Her sister, Miss Lillian Pierrie, acting as bridesmaid, wore blue crepe satin.

Mr. John O'Connor acted as best man for his borther.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast and reception were held at the bride's home, Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor leaving on the evening train for a short honeymoon in Toronto, Windsor and Detroit.

They will live in Ennismore, where they will be at home to their friends after December 15th.

ALLEGED RUM-RUNNER CLASHES IN LAKE ONTARIO WITH COAST GUARDSMEN

No Liquor Is Found in Craft—Agents Accused of Cruel Action.

SHOT WITHOUT WARNING.

Survivor Says He Was Left Lying in Boat Beside Companion's Body.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—Two light craft, one an alleged rum-runner and the other a coast guard, clashed i nthe darkness off the south shore of Lake Ontario in the early morning hours yesterday. The action was brief, but deadly. A hail to heave-to; manuvering of the alleged rum boat to escape, then a dash for shore, the crackle of the government's boat's guns, and it was all over.

Edmund Sahr of Niagara Falls, the other member of the crew, was wounded, but managed to scramble ashore.

According to the Federal authorities, papers were found in the dead man's pockets showing that the launch, known as The Bug, cleared from Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., on November 28, for Wilson, N.Y., with a cargo of 200 cases of ale.

There was no name on the clearance papers to indicate who was in charge of the launch when it left the Canadian port. It was said, however, that the coast guardsmen along the Niagara River and on Lake Ontario had orders to seize The Bug on sight. No ale or liquor was found on board the launch when it was searched after the shooting.

There is considerable difference in the version of the shooting by the members of the coast guards to their superiors and that given by Sahr, the wounded man, who was brought to a Niagara Falls hospital.

Start Investigation.

Federal and Niagara County officials to-day started an investigation of the capture by coast guardsmen in Lake Ontario yesterday of the cabin cruiser Bug.

The Bug lies on the beach near Lewiston to-day, bullet holes in it bring the witness to coast guardsmen's marksmanship. The boat was detected running without lights after the C. G. 2364, Federal chaser, had been ordered to watch out for it, reports having been received that it had been bringing beer and ale from Canada.

Niagara customs authorities reported that the Bug cleared from Niagara-on-the-Lake on Wednesday night with two hundred cases of ale aboard. It is the belief of authorities that the little cruiser had landed its ale cargo and was returning to port when it ran afoul of the C. G. 2364.

The body of Anderson is at the mortuary in Ransonville, Niagara county. He leaves a wife and three children, ranging in age from seven to thirteen years. Sahr, in St. Mary's Hospital at Niagara Falls, is expected to recover.

Wounded Man's Story.

Sahr told Coroner Frank T. Cramer of Newfane and Under-Sheriff Ralph Irish of Niagara Falls that he and Anderson were out in the motor boat with no contraband on board when they heard two shots fired.

The launch was disabled at the time, Sahr said, and he was tinkering with the engine, while Anderson was at the wheel. A few seconds after the warning shots, Sahr declared the volley was fired that killed Anderson, and wounded him in the chets.

The Bug, Sahr stated, was drawn

RECORD MADE AT CLUB SUPPER

Rev. William Allan Delivers Interesting Address To Y's Men's Club.

EVERY MEMBER PRESENT.

One hundred per cent attendance was the record made at the "Y's" Men's Club supper at the Y.M.C.A. last evening. Every member was present for the first time in the history of the club, which was organized over a year ago.

Rev. William Allan, the speaker, touched on a variety of subjects during his short address. He dealt with the many humorous stories referring to the Scotchmen's reputed thrift and economy and remarked that all the good stories dealing with this trait of Scotch nature come from Scotland itself for the foreign trade, and all the poor ones were mere copies of the original Scotch article.

"Travelling will give a man a better education than any university," said Mr. Allan, and he recounted some of his own journeys to places, especially Australia." The ribald laughter of the laughing hyena will always reach your ear when you land into some difficulties in travelling the Australian bush under the burning sun, and the noise of the fowl when they are disturbed at night in the land of the Southern Cross is most awesome," said the speaker.

Reference was made to high religious standards carried on in the Y.M.C.A. as compared to the same in branches of the work in the United States. It was pointed out that in the "Y" in the States the social side of the program predominated, and at the cost of the other training.

Dealing with a speech delivered at Hart House the other day, in which it was stated that the average high school student of to-day had more knowledge than Christ, the speaker exclaimed that such an idea bordered on blasphemy. The great minds of the past were recalled and the reason for their greatness was pointed out to be in almost every case founded upon a thorough knowledge of the Bible.

YOUNG PEOPLE MEET.

Inspector Mowat Delivers Address On Life of Joseph Howe.

The Young People's Society of St. Andrew's church held a very interesting meeting Monday evening. In the absence of the president, Miss Jean Anderson occupied the chair.

An inspiring address on the great Canadian statesman, Joseph Howe, was given by Inspector Mowat. Rev. C. V. MacLean thanked the speaker for the many new points he brought out in the life of Howe to the society.

It was decided that the students of the Peterborough Normal School will be entertained by the society on Friday evening, November 30.

Miss Alma Blanchard sang a solo, Miss Helen Ross gave a reading and a guitar duet was played by Misses Toy and May Petrie.

Northcott Breaks Down Under Severe Grilling

This startling statement was announced aboard the special train rushing the accused 22 year old Canadian youth to Los Angeles by Earle Redwine, deputy district attorney of Riverside County, who questioned Northcott for seven hours yesterday without a let-up

CONGRESSMAN IS IMPATIENT WITH DELAYS

Fred Britten Declares United States and Britain Want Naval Agreement.

FRIENDLY CONFERENCE.

Chairman of House Committee Says He Did Not Violate Logan Act.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 30 (Special to The Examiner by Ben Spence).—Smiling, jovial, unabashed and unafraid Congressman Fred Britten of Illinois, chairman of the House Committee on naval affairs, cordially greeted your representative in his office in the House building yesterday.

Over his head were gathering storms of official wrath, around him were mutterings of jealous dissatisfaction. He seemed to rather enjoy it. The State Department and the Senate undoubtedly disapprove of his action in going over everybody's head and cabling direct to Premier Baldwin an invitation to a conference on the vexed naval limitation question.

"Well? said the Congressman.

Then we both smiled. The smile broadened into a hearty laugh.

"Well?" we said again.

"Well?" said the Congressman, this time with a touch of belligerency.

This was the sententious beginning of an interesting interview with a real live-wire American Congressman who is a go-getter, and frankly impatient with the delays of diplomacy.

"America and Britain both want a naval agreement," said Mr. Britten.

"I believe we can agree. Then why not agree? Anyway, let us talk it over.

Member of Parliamentary Union

Then we launched into an hour's discussion, in which what Congressman Britten said might be paraphrased something like this:

"Look here; I am a member of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, which meets every year. Met last year in Berlin. The year before in Paris. There we discussed all sorts of questions. Not only law, but proposed laws. We discussed this very question. We discussed land armaments.

"On matters that come up, there is a free open discussion and the delegates report to their respective governments.

"At our last meeting the suggestion met with favor; that committees should meet in advance. Iron out some of the matter and have a considered report to present which would facilitate the proceeding of the union.

"My action now is just on a par with that suggestion."

"No, sir; I have not violated the Logan Act. That act simply does not apply to this action of mine now."

"No; I would not call this a matter of controversy, rather a matter for conversation, between the States and England. Anyway, if I have violated the Logan Act so have other representatives of the United States to the Inter-Parliamentary Union. The conference I suggest is just in line with the between-session conference the Union is planning."

"Here is a vitally important matter, at present it is hung up. Something ought to be done. It is not being done."

"Who can better represent the British nation that members of the Parliament and can better represent the views of the American nation than members of Congress? We have to vote naval appropriations."

"Why do I suggest Canada as a place of meeting? What better place is there to meet than Canada?"

"I thought of Washington, but that might look like saying 'Come into my parlor'."

"To go to London would appear to be 'bearding the lion' in his den."

"Geneva is jammed with conferences. No; Canada is the best place. Everybody would feel more at home there. I know I would like Canada. There is no place outside the United States where I would feel more at home."

"Open diplomacy—direct action, friendly conference—that's my policy. Why not?"

LONDON, November 30. Canadian Press.—It was learned authoritatively to-day that Premier Baldwin had despatched a friendly reply to the proposal made by Representative Britten for the Anglo-American Parliamentary Conference on naval affairs.

London Medical Journal in Reviewing Case Takes Very Optimistic View.

LONDON, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press).—The king's condition showed some improvement to-day but he is by no means out of danger yet. Official bulletin gives out that while some improvement is noted time of possible exacerbation of infection was not yet passed and that progress must be slow.

Bulletin was posted after prolonged visit of Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn during which they called in a third eminent physician, Sir Humphrey Rolleston for consultation. Doctors reviewed whole aspect of the case and an official bulletin was issued some two hours later than usual.

Owing to the delay in issuing the bulletin there was an exceptionally large crowd outside Buckingham Palace when the statement finally appeared. The crowd surged forward eagerly to read the brief words.

Hope for a normal recovery was perhaps stronger to-day than since seriousness of the situation became known. Lancet, leading medical journal, reviewing the case took de-

Mrs. W. R. Morris Denies Making Statement About Guns She Was Not a Member Of War Memorial Committee

Peterborough, Ont., 29th November, 1928.

Captain James Abraham,
President, Post Canadian Legion B.E.S.L.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir.—As certain statements have been attributed to me in the recent controversy over the German guns, may I be permitted to make the following statement to this meeting of War Veterans:—

1.—I have never been a member of the War Memorial Committee, as many people believe, and as stated in to-night's Examiner.

2.—I have never said that I disliked the presence of the guns because they recalled the death of my son in action, nor that I wished them removed.

3.—I did not give, nor did I send to The Examiner the statement in to-night's edition of the paper.

4.—I heartily approve the salvaging of the guns, and wish to congratulate the Veterans on the orderly manner in which they carried out this action.

KATE MORRIS,
Past President Ontario Ladies' Auxiliary.
Hon. President Peterborough Ladies' Auxiliary to Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L.

The Examiner regrets that it was made the subject of this regrettable mistake; the item referred to having been telephoned to the office yesterday afternoon, purporting to come in behalf of Mrs. Morris

British Farmers Worry Over Future Prospects

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Much less than 30 per cent. of the farmers in England own their farms. Burdened by high rents, handicapped by American, Canadian and Argentine competition and unable to make use of large-scale farming methods owing to the limited size of their holdings, British farmers have been signing a long Jeremiad since the latter half of the century. They require exceptionally good harvests to make a profit.

BIG FREIGHTER IS FOUNDERING IN MID-PACIFIC

Japanese Steamer Montreal Maru Is Standing By To Take Crew.

TUG LEAVES.

Eighteen Feet of Water In Reported in Chief Maquilla's Engine Room.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press). —Fears for the safety of the crew of the Canadian freighter, Chief Maquilla, in distress two thousand miles at sea were removed today when the Canadian American Shipping Company, owners of the craft received word that the Japanese freighter, Montreal Maru, was alongside. Two other ships were also standing by.

SEATTLE, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press). — The fate of Canadian freighter, Chief Maquilla, reported foundering in mid-Pacific was still undetermined several hours after Japanese steamer, Montreal Maru was due to have reached scene. Latest information was that there was 18 feet of water in vessel's engine room and that she was entirely helpless. The crew of forty were presumed to be still aboard.

Message from Japanese steamer Montreal Maru timed 5 a.m. said ship was still 52 miles from distressed British freighter Chief Maquilla. Message said the ship expected to reach Chief Maquilla between nine and ten a.m.

Two Hours Away

The steamer President McKinley wirelessed early today that the Canadian freighter Chief Maquilla, in distress in the North Pacific was foundering and that closest rescue ship, the Japanese steamer Montreal Maru was nearly two hours away.

Latest advice from Montreal Maru was that she would arrive at position of the sinking ship at four a.m. Steamer Atlantic City, another of the seven vessels rushing to aid, reported it would arrive about nine a.m. The Chief Maquilla is manned by eight officers and a crew of Chinese. She carried no passengers. She was bound for Shanghai with cargo of grain, having left British Columbia November 17.

CHILDREN ARE BEING MOVED

DANGER LESSENED.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—Evacuation of the children from the flooded Belgian villages was decided on by the authorities to-day because of appearance of whooping caught. Some of the villages will not be cleared of water for two or three weeks. It is possible that after the children have been removed the adults will be taken out.

There was a cessation of bad weather to-day, and the danger of further flooding from bursting dykes seemed to have lessened. It was decided to survey the whole dyke system with a view to revision, as one-sixth of Belgium can be flooded by bursting dykes.

Legion Hall Again Filled to Capacity for Meeting to Discuss Removal of Captured Cannons From Confederation Square on Monday Last.

THERE WAS NO INTENT TO OFFER INDIGNITY TO RETURNED SOLDIERS OR THEIR TROPHIES

"If I Had Been Here That Night, Boys, I Would Have Been Right With You to Help Pull Them Out," Declares Mayor Amid Applause.

"His Worship the Mayor having explained the circumstances surrounding the removal from Confederation Square of the three captured German guns treasured by ex-service men as symbols of victory and sacrifice, and having offered to replace them in suitable positions in Confederation Square, and there maintain them in good repair as lasting memorials, BE IT RESOLVED: that the veterans of the Great War here assembled accept His Worship's explanation, and his undertaking in behalf of the people of Peterborough to replace the guns in Confederation Square and care for them, and that these veterans express appreciation of His Worship's conciliatory attitude under the circumstances."

The above resolution, moved by Captain John A. Dewart, M.C., and seconded by Captain Deyell, and unanimously adopted by the returned soldiers who packed the Canadian Legion Hall to capacity last night, formally ended the four-day sensation that swept the city following the removal of Peterborough's quota of war trophies from their sites in Confederation Square.

His Worship Mayor Denne was well received by the gathering, and was welcomed by Major N. H. Sutton, M.D., first vice-president of the Legion, who was chairman for the occasion. The same dignified restraint that had marked the events of last Monday evening was evident throughout, and the Mayor himself took occasion to compliment the men on the gentlemanly conduct of that first meeting.

Last night's meeting was notable in many respects for not only did it bring to the platform, the most prominent figures on both sides of the "controversy," if such it might be called, but it afforded a place for discussion that had a decidedly healthy trend throughout. Among the speakers were:

Chairman, Dr. N. H. Sutton;

His Worship, Mayor Roland Denne;

Alderman R. S. Cotton, who suggested a set plan re the placing of the guns;

Lieut.-Colonel Gordon Hall, of the Peterborough Rangers;

Captain J. A. Abraham, President of the local branch of the Legion;

Mrs. W. R. Morris, whose name had been erroneously identfied with the Memorial committee; and a half dozen or more persons who spoke briefly or asked questions from their places in the audience.

Though the possibility of an out-of-the-city speaker had been mentioned previous to the meeting, Lieut.-Col. Ackerman explained to the press that Col. Peter Mackay of Toronto, had been overcome by a lingering illness while on a professional visit to the city yesterday. Had he been able to address the meeting, it would only have been upon general Legion matters—not relative to the gun episode. Col. Mackay is a member of the Dominion executive of the Legion.

Concern for the King.

There was a respectful hush as R. E. Layfield spoke of the illness of His Majesty the King, and complete accord when he suggested that the Legion express, by cable, its wishes for a speedy recovery.

Mr. Layfield was heard several times during the meeting, and on each occasion, his words were along constructive lines.

Oppose Gas Station

In last night's gathering, not only did the veterans reveal a genuine spirit of forgiveness, but they went further in their thoughtfulness regarding the beautification of Confederation Square when, on the suggestion of H. Burrows, they expressed, by resolution, their opposition to any gas station being erected across from the park on George street. The meeting opened with little ceremony, and closed with a thoughtful singing of the National Anthem, the King's illness adding special significance.

Chairman Dr. Sutton.

"Gentlemen, it is not necessary for me to state the purposes of this meeting. You have turned out in large numbers and are anxious to see the matters disposed of. I understand that Mayor Denne is present and he has expressed a wish to put himself before the meeting. As returned men, as gentlemen, and in a spirit of British fair play, we must give him a thorough opportunity to speak. I invite the Mayor to the platform," said Dr. Sutton.

Passing up the west aisle to the platform, His Worship Mayor Roland Denne was accorded a burst of applause that subsided as he doffed his coat and prepared to speak.

"Mr. Chairman and War Veterans: When I look over this meeting, I guess I must have started something like church union for it surely has brought you all together. I am going to give you the story as it really was. There was a special committee from the city council, comprising Aldermen Greene, Hamilton and Ackerman, appointed with power to act. I regret that this whole thing has happened and that I was out of town on Monday. If those who were in charge had waited another 24 hours, I would have been right there with them in bringing the guns from the place where they were put.

"A mistake was made. The matter was discussed in both committees and Judge Huycke must have forgotten. I was the one who brought it up. I'd have gone with you after the guns too. I admire the manner in which you conducted yourselves like gentlemen; there was no damage to property or roughness and I congratulate you. The Legion is an organization of the city and all organizations make for a better city.

Put Them In Good Place.

"When the guns were ordered moved, the orders were to put them in a good place—not there. I regret that Col. Ackerman was a busy man and not able to be at our meetings. There is not a man here whom I do not respect and I've worked for the city for sixteen years, and I have no intention of sidestepping the issue. When the committee was formed to raise funds for this Hall, I had the honor of helping and when Colonel Ackerman came to the city council for a loan of $4,000 to be used in installing a heating system in the Hall, I voted in favor of the loan.

"If there has been any offense, I apologize for myself and for the men working with me. There was no intent to hurt anybody's feelings but to help the beautifying of the park and to place the guns in a good place. You can see the work that is going on in the park and how it cannot be finished this year.

"I'm the same as ever and I'll turn a hand to help any thing that's right for any man. Once again let me say that I am sorry I was out of the city on Monday, for if I had been there I would have pulled the guns from the place wheer they were put with the city teams. Now I am willing to answer any questions. The man who tries is the man who makes mistakes and the man who doesn't try never gets into trouble. I regret the publicity given Peterborough from coast to coast for we have a good town and it shouldn't have gone out of the city."

Mayor Denne told of a prominent industrial man coming to the city and, in consternation, asking if this was the kind of trouble that might be expected here. "I told him absolutely not and that the returned boys would be behind him" said His Worship.

"As for the guns," he continued, "you can have them anywhere you want them and I suggest that you appoint a committee to work with the city. We have no axes to grind

He dealt with the many humorous stories referring to the Scotchmen's reputed thrift and economy and remarked that all the good stories dealing with this trait of Scotch nature come from Scotland itself for the foreign trade, and all the poor ones were mere copies of the original Scotch article.

"Travelling will give a man a better education than any university," said Mr. Allan, and he recounted some of his own journeys to places, especially Australia." The ribald laughter of the laughing hyena will always reach your ear when you land into some difficulties in travelling the Australian bush under the burning sun, and the noise of the fowl when they are disturbed at night in the land of the Southern Cross is most awesome," said the speaker.

Reference was made to high religious standards carried on in the Y.M.C.A. as compared to the same in branches of the work in the United States. It was pointed out that in the "Y" in the States the social side of the program predominated, and at the cost of the other training.

Dealing with a speech delivered at Hart House the other day, in which it was stated that the average high school student of to-day had more knowledge than Christ, the speaker exclaimed that such an idea bordered on blasphemy. The great minds of the past were recalled and the reason for their greatness was pointed out to be in almost every case founded upon a thorough knowledge of the Bible.

YOUNG PEOPLE MEET.

Inspector Mowat Delivers Address On Life of Joseph Howe.

The Young People's Society of St. Andrew's church held a very interesting meeting Monday evening. In the absence of the president, Miss Jean Anderson occupied the chair.

An inspiring address on the great Canadian statesman, Joseph Howe, was given by Inspector Mowat. Rev. C. V. MacLean thanked the speaker for the many new points he brought out in the life of Howe to the society.

It was decided that the students of the Peterborough Normal School will be entertained by the society on Friday evening, November 30.

Miss Alma Blanchard sang a solo, Miss Helen Ross gave a reading and a guitar duet was played by Misses Toy and May Petrie.

Lindsay Groceteria Is Heavily Fined

LINDSAY, Ont., Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—A fine of $1,000 was meted out to the Loblaw Groceteria here to-day by Magistrate Jordon for selling an unreasonable quantity of lemon extract. It was shown that one purchaser secured an average of four bottles a day for a week.

CONGRESSMAN IS IMPATIENT WITH DELAYS

Fred Britten Declares United States and Britain Want Naval Agreement.

FRIENDLY CONFERENCE.

Chairman of House Committee Says He Did Not Violate Logan Act.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 30 (Special to The Examiner by Ben Spence).—Smiling, jovial, unabashed and unafraid Congressman Fred Britten of Illinois, chairman of the House Committee on naval affairs, cordially greeted your representative in his office in the House building yesterday.

Over his head were gathering storms of official wrath, around him were mutterings of jealous dissatisfaction. He seemed to rather enjoy it. The State Department and the Senate undoubtedly disapprove of his action in going over everybody's head and cabling direct to Premier Baldwin an invitation to a conference on the vexed naval limitation question.

"Well? said the Congressman.

Then we both smiled. The smile broadened into a hearty laugh.

"Well?" we said again.

"Well?" said the Congressman, this time with a touch of belligerency.

This was the sententious beginning of an interesting interview with a real live-wire American Congressman who is a go-getter, and frankly impatient with the delays of diplomacy.

"America and Britain both want a naval agreement," said Mr. Britten.

"I believe we can agree. Then why not agree? Anyway, let us talk it over.

Member of Parliamentary Union

Then we launched into an hour's discussion, in which what Congressman Britten said might be paraphrased something like this:

"Look here; I am a member of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, which meets every year. Met last year in Berlin. The year before in Paris. There we discussed all sorts of questions. Not only law, but proposed laws. We discussed this very question. We discussed land armaments.

"On matters that come up, there is a free open discussion and the delegates report to their respective governments.

"At our last meeting the suggestion met with favor; that committees should meet in advance. Iron out some of the matter and have a considered report to present which would facilitate the proceeding of the union.

"My action now is just on a par with that suggestion."

"No, sir; I have not violated the Logan Act. That act simply does not apply to this action of mine now."

"No; I would not call this a matter of controversy, rather a matter for conversation, between the States and England. Anyway, if I have violated the Logan Act so have other representatives of the United States to the Inter-Parliamentary Union. The conference I suggest is just in line with the between-session conference the Union is planning."

"Here is a vitally important matter, at present it is hung up. Something ought to be done. It is not being done."

"Who can better represent the British nation that members of the Parliament and can better represent the views of the American nation than members of Congress? We have to vote naval appropriations."

"Why do I suggest Canada as a place of meeting? What better place is there to meet than Canada?"

"I thought of Washington, but that might look like saying 'Come into my parlor'."

"To go to London would appear to be 'bearding the lion' in his den."

"Geneva is jammed with conferences. No; Canada is the best place. Everybody would feel more at home there. I know I would like Canada. There is no place outside the United States where I would feel more at home."

"Open diplomacy—direct action, friendly conference—that's my policy. Why not?"

LONDON, November 30. Canadian Press.—It was learned authoritatively to-day that Premier Baldwin had despatched a friendly reply to the proposal made by Representative Britten for the Anglo-American Parliamentary Conference on naval affairs.

CONDITION IMPROVES

PRINCE AWAITS CRUISER.

LONDON, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press).—The king's condition showed some improvement to-day but he is by no means out of danger yet. Official bulletin gives out that while some improvement is noted time of possible exacerbation of infection was not yet passed and that progress must be slow.

Bulletin was posted after prolonged visit of Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn during which they called in a third eminent physician, Sir Humphrey Rolleston for consultation. Doctors reviewed whole aspect of the case and an official bulletin was issued some two hours later than usual.

Owing to the delay in issuing the bulletin there was an exceptionally large crowd outside Buckingham Palace when the statement finally appeared. The crowd surged forward eagerly to read the brief words.

Hope for a normal recovery was perhaps stronger to-day than since seriousness of the situation became known. Lancet, leading medical journal, reviewing the case took de-

Mrs. W. R. Morris Denies Making Statement About Guns She Was Not a Member Of War Memorial Committee

Peterborough, Ont., 29th November, 1928.

Captain James Abraham,
President, Post Canadian Legion B.E.S.L.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir.—As certain statements have been attributed to me in the recent controversy over the German guns, may I be permitted to make the following statement to this meeting of War Veterans:—

1.—I have never been a member of the War Memorial Committee, as many people believe, and as stated in to-night's Examiner.

2.—I have never said that I disliked the presence of the guns because they recalled the death of my son in action, nor that I wished them removed.

3.—I did not give, nor did I send to The Examiner the statement in to-night's edition of the paper.

4.—I heartily approve the salvaging of the guns, and wish to congratulate the Veterans on the orderly manner in which they carried out this action.

KATE MORRIS,
Past President Ontario Ladies' Auxiliary.
Hon. President Peterborough Ladies' Auxiliary to Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L.

The Examiner regrets that it was made the subject of this regrettable mistake; the item referred to having been telephoned to the office yesterday afternoon, purporting to come in behalf of Mrs. Morris

British Farmers Worry Over Future Prospects

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Much less than 50 per cent. of the farmers in England own their farms. Burdened by high rents, handicapped by American, Canadian and Argentine competition and unable to make use of large-scale farming methods owing to the limited size of their holdings, British farmers have been signing a long Jeremiad since the latter half of the century. They require exceptionally good harvests to make a profit.

BIG FREIGHTER IS FOUNDERING IN MID-PACIFIC

TUG LEAVES.

Eighteen Feet of Water Is Reported in Chief Maquilla's Engine Room.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press). —Fears for the safety of the crew of the Canadian freighter, Chief Maquilla, in its, tress two thousand miles at sea were removed to-day when the Canadian American Shipping Company, owners of the craft received word that the Japanese freighter, Montreal Maru, was alongside. Two other ships were also standing by.

SEATTLE, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press). — The fate of Canadian freighter, Chief Maquilla, reported foundering in mid-Pacific was still undetermined several hours after Japanese steamer, Montreal Maru was due to have reached scene. Latest information was that there was 14 feet of water in vessel's engine room and that she was entirely helpless. The crew of forty were presumed to be still aboard.

Message from Japanese steamer Montreal Maru timed 5 a.m. said ship was still 52 miles from distressed British freighter Chief Maquilla. Message said the ship expected to reach Chief Maquilla between nine and ten a.m.

Two Hours Away

The steamer President McKinley wirelessed early today that the Canadian freighter Chief Maquilla, in distress in the North Pacific was foundering and that closest rescue ship, the Japanese steamer Montreal Maru was nearly two hours away.

Latest advice from Montreal Maru was that she would arrive at position of the sinking ship at four a.m. Steamer Atlantic City, another of the seven vessels rushing to aid, reported it would arrive about nine a.m. The Chief Maquilla is manned by eight officers and a crew of Chinese. She carried no passengers. She was bound for Shanghai with cargo of grain, having left British Columbia November 17.

CHILDREN ARE BEING MOVED

DANGER LESSENED.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—Evacuation of the children from the flooded Belgian villages was decided on by the authorities to-day because of appearance of whooping caught. Some of the villages will not be cleared of water for two or three weeks. It is possible that after the children have been removed the adults will be taken out.

There was a cessation of bad weather to-day, and the danger of further flooding from bursting dykes seemed to have lessened. It was decided to survey the whole dyke system with a view to revision, as one-sixth of Belgium can be flooded by bursting dykes.

Mayor Denne Cheered By Veterans When He Tells Facts of Incident And Promises to Restore Trophies

Legion Hall Again Filled to Capacity for Meeting to Discuss Removal of Captured Cannons From Confederation Square on Monday Last.

THERE WAS NO INTENT TO OFFER INDIGNITY TO RETURNED SOLDIERS OR THEIR TROPHIES

"If I Had Been Here That Night, Boys, I Would Have Been Right With You to Help Pull Them Out," Declares Mayor Amid Applause.

"His Worship the Mayor having explained the circumstances surrounding the removal from Confederation Square of the three captured German guns treasured by ex-service men as symbols of victory and sacrifice, and having offered to replace them in suitable positions in Confederation Square, and there maintain them in good repair as lasting memorials, BE IT RESOLVED: that the veterans of the Great War here assembled accept His Worship's explanation, and his undertaking in behalf of the people of Peterborough to replace the guns in Confederation Square and care for them, and that these veterans express appreciation of His Worship's conciliatory attitude under the circumstances."

The above resolution, moved by Captain John A. Dewart, M.C., and seconded by Captain Deyell, and unanimously adopted by the returned soldiers who packed the Canadian Legion Hall to capacity last night, formally ended the four-day sensation that swept the city following the removal of Peterborough's quota of war trophies from their sites in Confederation Square.

His Worship Mayor Denne was well received by the gathering, and was welcomed by Major N. H. Sutton, M.D., first vice-president of the Legion, who was chairman for the occasion. The same dignified restraint that had marked the events of last Monday evening was evident throughout, and the Mayor himself took occasion to compliment the men on the gentlemanly conduct of that first meeting.

Last night's meeting was notable in many respects for not only did it bring to the platform, the most prominent figures on both sides of the "controversy," if such it might be called, but it afforded a place for discussion that had a decidedly healthy trend throughout. Among the speakers were:

Chairman, Dr. N. H. Sutton;

His Worship, Mayor Roland Denne;

Alderman R. S. Cotton, who suggested a set plan re the placing of the guns;

Lieut.-Colonel Gordon Hall, of the Peterborough Rangers;

Captain J. A. Abraham, President of the local branch of the Legion;

Mrs. W. R. Morris, whose name had been erroneously identfied with the Memorial committee; and a half dozen or more persons who spoke briefly or asked questions from their places in the audience.

Though the possibility of an out-of-the-city speaker had been mentioned previous to the meeting, Lieut.-Col. Ackerman explained to the press that Col. Peter Mackay of Toronto, had been overcome by a lingering illness while on a professional visit to the city yesterday. Had he been able to address the meeting, it would only have been upon general Legion matters—not relative to the gun episode. Col. Mackay is a member of the Dominion executive of the Legion.

Concern for the King.

There was a respectful hush as R. E. Layfield spoke of the illness of His Majesty the King, and complete accord when he suggested that the Legion express, by cable, its wishes for a speedy recovery.

Mr. Layfield was heard several times during the meeting, and on each occasion, his words were along constructive lines.

Oppose Gas Station

In last night's gathering, not only did the veterans reveal a genuine spirit of forgiveness, but they went further in their thoughtfulness regarding the beautification of Confederation Square when, on the suggestion of H. Burrows, they expressed, by resolution, their opposition to any gas station being erected across from the park on George street. The meeting opened with little ceremony, and closed with a thoughtful singing of the National Anthem, the King's illness adding special significance.

Chairman Dr. Sutton.

"Gentlemen, it is not necessary for me to state the purposes of this meeting. You have turned out in large numbers and are anxious to see the matters disposed of. I understand that Mayor Denne is present and he has expressed a wish to put himself before the meeting. As returned men, as gentlemen, and in a spirit of British fair play, we must give him a thorough opportunity to speak. I invite the Mayor to the platform," said Dr. Sutton.

Passing up the west aisle to the platform, His Worship Mayor Roland Denne was accorded a burst of applause that subsided as he doffed his coat and prepared to speak.

"Mr. Chairman and War Veterans: When I look over this meeting, I guess I must have started something like church union for it surely has brought you all together. I am going to give you the story as it really was. There was a special committee from the city council, comprising Aldermen Greene, Hamilton and Ackerman, appointed with power to act. I regret that this whole thing has happened and that I was out of town on Monday. If those who were in charge had waited another 24 hours, I would have been right there with them in bringing the guns from the place where they were put.

"A mistake was made. The matter was discussed in both committees and Judge Huycke must have forgotten. I was the one who brought it up. I'd have gone with you after the guns too. I admire the manner in which you conducted yourselves like gentlemen; there was no damage to property or roughness and I congratulate you. The Legion is an organization of the city and all organizations make for a better city.

Put Them In Good Place.

"When the guns were ordered moved, the orders were to put them in a good place—not there. I regret that Col. Ackerman was a busy man and not able to be at our meetings. There is not a man here whom I do not respect and I've worked for the city for sixteen years, and I have no intention of sidestepping the issue. When the committee was formed to raise funds for this Hall, I had the honor of helping and when Colonel Ackerman came to the city council for a loan of $4,000 to be used in installing a heating system in the Hall, I voted in favor of the loan.

"If there has been any offense, I apologize for myself and for the men working with me. There was no intent to hurt anybody's feelings but to help the beautifying of the park and to place the guns in a good place. You can see the work that is going on in the park and how it cannot be finished this year.

"I'm the same as ever and I'll turn a hand to help any thing that's right for any man. Once again let me say that I am sorry I was out of the city on Monday, for if I had been there I would have pulled the guns from the place wheer they were put with the city teams. Now I am willing to answer any questions. The man who tries is the man who makes mistakes and the man who doesn't try never gets into trouble. I regret the publicity given Peterborough from coast to coast for we have a good town and it shouldn't have gone out of the city."

Mayor Denne told of a prominent industrial man coming to the city and, in consternation, asking if this was the kind of trouble that might be expected here. "I told him absolutely not and that the returned boys would be behind him" said His Worship.

"As for the guns," he continued, "you can have them anywhere you want them and I suggest that you appoint a committee to work with the city. We have no axes to grind

MR. AND MRS. JAMES FALLS WERE BORN IN THE TOWNSHIP OF SMITH

Married by Rev. J. M. Roger on November 11, Sixty-Six Years Ago.

DROVE OXEN INTO CITY

For Sixty-Four Years They Have Both Read the Peterborough Examiner.

DUNSFORD, Nov. 30.—(Examiner Correspondence). — Mr. and Mrs. James Falls, who live on a farm with their eldest son William, about nine miles north of here on the road leading to Bobcaygeon and who were married 66 years ago on November 11th, by Rev. J. M. Roger, Presbyterian minister of Peterborough.

Mr. Falls is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Falls and was born in Smithtown, on the second concession of Smith, in the County of Peterborough, four miles west of the city, on December 14, 1834. He has always been noted as a hard worker and helped to clear the land on the old homestead where he spent the first 28 years of his life.

Mrs. Falls (nee Hannah Fairbairn), is a daughter of the late Andrew and Eliza Fairbairn, and was born on the 9th concession of Smith, Peterborough County, near Lakefield, on May 6th, 1839.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Falls settled on a farm in Douro township, four miles east of Peterborough, where they spent eight years at the end of which time they purchased the old homestead on the second concession of Smith township. After a period of eighteen years they moved from the old home place to a farm in South Verulam, where they spent 37 years. The last three years have been spent with their eldest son William, near Bobcaygeon.

Exceptionally Bright.

Mrs. Falls is exceptionally bright for her years and has been quite smart until recently. The last few months she has been an invalid from rheumatism and although up and dressed each day is confined to her chair. Her great delight all through life has been fancy work and when your correspondent called she was busy with a piece of crocheting.

Mr. Falls is slightly hard of hearing, otherwise he has splendid use of all his faculties and goes about every day being able to help with the farm chores, although he will be 94 years old in about two weeks. His great hobby through life has been a deer hunt every fall. This leisure he was able to follow until in his 84th year and now some one of his friends aim each year to present Mr. and Mrs. Falls with a piece of venison at the close of the hunting season. Mr. Falls states that he drove oxen in Peterborough when the city consisted of only a few log buildings and tells of the joy experienced when the first team of black horses, drawing a carriage found their way into the city.

Read Examiner For 64 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Falls have been constant readers of the Weekly Peterborough Examiner for 64 years and have their subscription paid for a year in advance, this being the first paper that found its way into their home. They have always been identified with the Presbyterian church and although now unable to attend are keenly interested and receive regular visits from Rev. S. H. Hill, pastor of the Bobcaygeon Presbyterian church.

Mr. Falls has been a life long Liberal and until the last year or two took an active interest in politics. Mrs. Falls states that she has never exercised her right of franchise and if she had would have voted Liberal so as not to kill her husband's vote although she is a member of a strong Conservative connection.

Mr. and Mrs. Falls have done their share of pioneering, have seen many of life's hardships and have shared in its sorrow having lost a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Van Norman, of Bobcaygeon, thirty years ago. They have reached the sunset slope of life happy and contented and are just waiting for the last trumpet to sound that they may answer the call to a well deserved rest.

They have three sons and two daughters living, William, at home; Andrew, in Bobcaygeon; Elmer, on the old home farm in South Verulam; Mrs. George Cosh, of Vancouver; and Mrs. Spurgeon Cosh, of Bobcaygeon.

There are thirteen grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Object To Tourists In France Taking Skulls

BERLIN Nov. 30—The German war veterans' organization, "Kyffhaeuser" has petitioned the German Foreign Office to take diplomatic steps to prevent American tourists visiting the battlefields in France from taking skulls and bones of fallen soldiers as "souvenirs."

"This is a shameless and impious behavior which violates the holiest feelings of all our war veterans and especially of the families of the dead," the petition reads.

SINGERS GIVE FINE PROGRAM

Peterborough Organization Visits Omemee—Present Excellent Entertainment.

GREETED WITH APPLAUSE

OMEMEE, Nov. 30 (Examiner Correspondence).—The music-loving people of Omemee who were fortunate enough to be in Coronation Hall on Monday night received the musical treat of the season, in the presentation of a splendid program by the Madrigal Singers, of Peterborough, under the direction of Dorothy Allan Park, assisted by Prynce Nesbitt, pianist, and Gwen Donley, accompanist.

The choral work was of a very high order and most enjoyable.

The elocutionist, Hazel Davidson McClelland, was greeted with rounds of applause after each selection, and graciously responded with humorous encores.

The Madrigal Singers came to Omemee under the auspices of St. John's Anglican Church, East Emily. It is to be deplored that a full house did not greet the singers, and insufficient advertising is thought to be the reason. Those who did attend are loud in praise of the splendid type of entertainment put on by the singers.

KNOWS 200 LANGUAGES.

The world's record for proficiency in foreign languages is said to be held by a retired mathematics professor in Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany. He knows 200 tongues. He claims to be able to read and write in all these languages, ranging from Sanskrit, through Egyptian heiroglyphics and Chinese picture writings to modern tongues, and he is constantly adding to this list.

Last year, although he is an old man, he tackled four new languages. In the little house where he lives he has 15,000 volumes, collected from all over the world and representing dialects and characters that would puzzle a trained philologist, says Popular Science Monthly. Men from the Orient and other distant places have journeyed to this modest house to consult him.

THRILLERS SOOTHE NERVES.

If you are nervous, read a murder story before going to bed! The value of this paradoxical advice seems to have been shown by a series of tests conducted recently in the University of Chicago psychological laboratories. By means of charts of pulse and respiration, and similar scientific data, it was shown that after reading a "thriller" for an hour or more the average person tested had a quieter pulse, slower respiration and greater self-control than before he began reading, says Popular Science Monthly.

KING GEORGE IS IMPROVING SAYS REPORT

PASSED QUIET DAY.

His Majesty's Physicians Are Satisfied With Progress Shown.

LONDON, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—An anxious nation began to breathe more freely yesterday as the condition of the King showed distinct signs of improving.

Two favorable bulletins in the morning and one in the evening announcing that the infestive process was being held in check and recording a quiet day with sleep, followed Home Secretary Joynson-Hicks' hopeful statement that His Majesty was on the mend.

It was understood that the King's physicians, Lord Dawson and Sir Stanley Hewett, were greatly satisfied with the King's progress yesterday and would omit the usual late night visits to the Royal patient, paying their next visit this morning. Unofficial reports from the Palace, however, point out that His Majesty's recovery must necessarily be slow.

Review Illness.

The leading English medical journal "The Lancet," will review to-day the progress of the King's illness and incidentally dispel the idea that the King's illness occurred through a sudden onset of his attack by stating that for several days prior to the issue of the first medical bulletin His Majesty had not been in his usual health, although he continued to carry out his official engagements. Then, dealing with the illness itself, the Lancet says that the return of high fever last Sunday inevitably resulted in sleeplessness and discomfort, and the public was warned that a further spread of pleurisy might be expected. Up to the present, however, there had been no change, while a certain amount of rest had been secured and this was of great importance.

Serious When Over 60.

Reading the bulletins as showing a curtailment of the forces of infection, the Lancet concludes: "At the same time it would be idle to pretend that an illness of this kind is not serious for a patient over sixty. The official bulletins have been informative though restrained, the journal says, and medical men reading them can form a picture of the illness and its course. Everyone will earnestly hope they may give increasing confidence in His Majesty's recovery."

The public mind was further reassured by the fact that neither the Queen nor other members of the Royal family in London are departing greatly from their customary occupations. The Queen drives out daily, the Duke and Duchess of York and Princess Mary continue to attend public engagements, even making engagements ahead. For example, the Queen has just consented to open next spring an extension of the famous London Hospital, run by women.

The Duke and Duchess of York were under engagement to open an agriculture exhibition at Birmingham next Tuesday and had intended to stay three days. They so far changed their plans as to limit their stay to one day, but it is expected that the Duke himself, provided the King be no worse, will return to Birmingham Thursday to visit a number of industrial centres.

PEACE.

A peaceable man doth more good than he who is well-learned. A passionate man turneth even good into evil, and easily believeth evil. A good peaceable man turneth all things to good.—Thomas A. Kempis.

Mexican Authorities Forbid Cemetery Picnics

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 30.—The Mexican authorities have forbidden the holding of picnics in Mexico City's largest cemetery.

It is a Mexican custom to take baskets and bundles of food to the graveyards on the "Day of the Dead," which corresponds on the calendar to All Soul's Dad. Theoretically the refreshments are taken to the cemeteries as the calendar to All Soul's Day, the living do the eating and drinking with considerable enjoyment.

Families, groups of friends, relatives and neighbors form parties. This year, however, the largest cemetery turned away swarms of picnickers.

The "Flu" Left Her With A Wretched Cough

TOWN SCHOOL BOARD HEARS APPLICATIONS

Teachers On Campbellford Staff Seeking Increase in Salaries.

COMPLAINTS HEARD.

Wesley Stephens Tenders Resignation as Secretary of Board.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 30 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Last night was the regular meeting of the school board for the month of November. Dr. Richardson occupied the chair, and there were present Trustees Longmore, O'Sullivan, Birmingham, Loucks, Benor, Stevens, Cock, Hall and Watson. Principal Grieg of the high school, and C. Massie, caretaker of the public schools, were also present.

Generally, the meetings of the board are not long, but last night's session did not adjourn till nearly ten o'clock. This was directly due to the fact that an increase in salary had been granted one member of the staff at a previous special session of the board, and there were certain applications from other teachers to be heard. The matter was left in the hands of the internal committee to investigate and report to the board at the next meeting.

Among the communications to be read was a request from Miss Ferris and Miss O'Shaughnessy to have the agreement signed by them in 1922 withdrawn and the conditions of their engagement on the staff made identical to that of any other teacher. There was some discussion when the communication was read, but since a contract was not before the board, the matter was left with the internal committee to investigate and bring in a recommendation to the board at the next regular meeting.

Matter of Salaries

Asked if there were any present to address the board, E. H. Greig, high school principal, took the opportunity to lay the matter of salaries before the board. He pointed out that one teacher had asked for an increase and had been granted it. He thought that the other members of the staff including himself ought to be taken into consideration as well. He had thought of bringing the matter to their attention in June, but had refrained from so doing. At the end of the present term, he said, he would have completed six years as principal of the school. His seventh year would begin in January. During this time there had been an increase

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—With a surplus of unfinished cattle left from previous day's trading, the market opened slowly yesterday. A radical decline of prices has been effected on all classes of stock, not excluding finished cattle, this week. With receipts for the week fairly heavy, and made up of poor quality beef, prospect of a good clean-up is negligible.

Choice heavy steers are draggy to $9 to $9.50. The best handy weight steers and heifers are the first to move at $9 to $9.50. Common to good are slow sellers at $7 to $8.75.

Canners and cutters move freely at $4 to $5.50. Choice cows bring $7.25 to $7.75 on a weaker feeling. Stocker and feeder sales are following the easier market. Western heifers are bought for $7 to $7.25, and steers $7.75 to $8.50.

Best baby beeves bring $12 to $12.50, with medium $10 to $10.50. Feeling is not too bright for them.

Choice calves sell at $14.50 to $15.50 to a steady trade; good $13 to $14. Grassers $6 to $7.

Purchasers of lambs are made $11 to $11.25 for the best. Prices eased indifferent to pressure applied by prospective buyers.

Hog bids are placed at $8.75 f.o.b. selects.

Receipts: Cattle 10; calves, 3; hogs, 70; sheep, 85.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., November 30 (Canadian Press). — Owing to the fact that foreign bids were below a working basis the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was extremely dull and little business was done.

There was a steady demand foc cash grain in the local market and a moderate amount of business was done in car lots. Prices for Manitoba wheat were one cent per bushel lower with sales of No. 6 wheat at 95c, feed wheat at 91, while feed barley sold at 74c.

A fair trade was done in spring and winter wheat flour, and values were unchanged.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were firmly maintained under a good demand from all sources. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was steady.

The trade in fresh eggs was quiet owing to the scarcity of supplies, but a good business was done in storage grades, and values were firm. Receipts were 235 cases.

The demand for potatoes was good and prices were steady. New Brunswick Green Mountains sold at 50c to 55c per 90 pounds, in bulk; Prince Edward Island Cobblers at 70c in bags, and Green Mountains at 80c per 90 pounds in bags.

Canadian beans were steady at $5.20 per bushel. Yellow beans sold at 8½c per pound, and Yellow Eyes at 9c per pound.

The undertone to the butter market was steady, with a moderate amount of business passing. Receipts were 89 packages.

Owing to the continued indifferent demand from English importers for cheese at present and the small volume of business passing with domestic buyers an easier feeling prevailed and prices were reduced ¼c to ½c per pound. Receipts were 1,037 boxes.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 30 (Canadian Press). — Montreal.—The local egg market is quiet and unchanged. A car of Alberta turkeys was sold here Wednesday at 41c for birds 12 pounds and over; 39c for 10 to 12 pound birds, 36c for 8 to 10 pound birds, and 34c for 6 to 8 pound birds and old birds f.o.b. The general quotations are about 2 cents above these figures, but there is not much interest shown at the higher levels.

American markets closed yesetrday.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—Prices for butter were generally steady yesterday and firmer in spots. A fair volume of business was passing on the Curb market to meet demands for immediate wants. Dealers intimated that further expansion might be expected about the first of December, which may also result in higher prices. Underlying firmness in the local butter movement this week was partly attributed to a report issued by the United States Department of Agriculure, which sates that the first of the New Zealand butter shipments would be delayed. Operators here advise that imports will not now reach New York until on or about Dec. 7 next. This may mean that finest New Zealand creamery will not reach consumptive channels here until late in the year. In the interim local creameries will have a better chance to clean up their supplies.

The cheese market remains quiet under limited demand from all sources. The quotable rate for cheese is unchanged at from 21¼c to 21¾c per lb. for No. 1 large, colored, paraffined and Government graded, delivered Toronto.

Cheese offered for grading in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, exclusive of Quebec City, for the week ending Nov. 24, amounted to 17,409 boxes, compared with 17,529 boxes for the corresponding week a year ago.

Fresh eggs are the strongest market feature in the produce world today. Scarcity of supply has resulted in close competition between houses, and in some instances dealers are paying country shippers next week special top prices for fresh gathered in order to satisfy domestic users, who prefer the fresh article to storage grades. The trade believe that prices have now reached their peak, and that a gradual decline will be seen. Lowering of values, however, will naturally depend a great deal on future weather conditions.

The weekly revision of poultry prices took place yesterday for next week's deliveries. A survey of quotations to country shippers for all lines reveals only slight changes from the preceding week. Receipts are moving in steadily, and dealers are being called upon to fill fairsized orders for immediate needs. The turkey movement will be well under way in about two weeks from now, and local houses have their representatives in the field buying up supplies for Christmas and New Year requirements.

EXECUTIVE HOLDS LEAGUE MEETING

Officials of Young People's Department Render Program at Bailieboro.

BAILIEBORO, Nov. 30.—(Examiner).—The Young People's Executive of the Peterborough Presbytery motored to the village on Tuesday evening from Peteborough, and conducted the Young People's League meeting in the United Church.

There were eight in the party, including the Misses Hamilton, Miss DeLong, and C. Robb, president; W. Gamble, superintendent of Mark Street Sunday School; E. A. Forbes, secretary-treasurer; F. Stevenson and Mr. Bachelor.

After a few words of introduction by the president of the local society, the chair was given over to W. Gamble, who made a very efficient chairman and during the program delivered a very inspiring address to the large number of young people present. The members of the Peterborough Presbytery Young People's Executive were called to take their places on the platform and those present were: President, C. Robb; vice president, F. H. Barnard; secretary-treasurer, E. A. Forbes and Mr. Gamble.

Varied Program.

Miss DeLong presided at the piano and during the program, duets were played on guitars by the Misses Hamilton, and these were very much enjoyed. Numbers ably given by Messrs. Bachelor and Forbes also received hearty applause. A solo, "In the Garden", sung by Mr. Bachelor was a most enjoyable number. E. A. Forbes led the song service and conducted the business of the meeting. Mr. Robb then delivered the address of the evening and the attention received during his address told of the interest taken by the young people.

At the conclusion of the meeting, lunch was served by the local society. The Peterborough Presbytery Young People's Executive are planning to visit every Y.P.S. in the Presbytery during this year, to find out the difficulties of the societies and to give what aid they require.

Won't Last Long

At the rate the demand for Radio has opened up this season, and continues every day, our visible supply of sets for Club members can't last much longer. The Rogers Batteryless factory have stretched a point to the limit to promise us

18 Extra Sets

Even before we obtained this concession, there were several waiting members who have since joined up, and already the number has been very materially reduced.

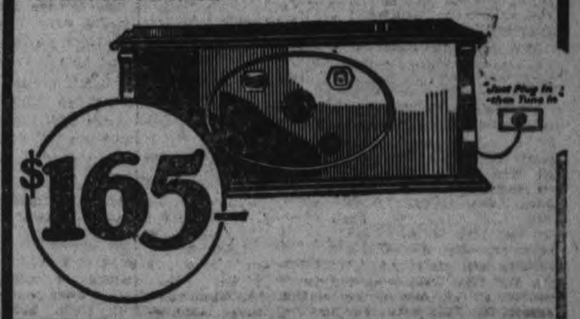
GREENE'S Christmas Radio Club

In fact, so many have either closed or signified their intention of doing so that we are practically able to announce definitely that the 18 Rogers sets are already

Nearly Half Gone

That only leaves an opportunity for nine or ten more music-lovers to obtain a Rogers set before Christmas, and about the same number to be supplied a Day-Fan outfit.

A week or ten days will probably see our enlarged Club entirely filled up, and no more can be promised for delivery in time for Christmas.



The Rogers set is the original electric set—a purely Canadian product for Canadians. It has been tried and tested by an exacting public for the past four years, and found fully capable of more than holding its own in a field of established competitors. With a the home is linked up with hundreds of musical programs, the best reserved seats at all the big games, ringside seats at championship prize fights, lectures, church services, and a wonderful selection at your own choice every day as long as desired. Always ready to tune in, clear reception, and remarkable selectivity. All this our Club Members get on our easy Club plan, and only

There are always a number who wish to keep their expenditure down, and for these we have still left 9 or 10 more of the reliable and eminently satisfactory sets. Up to this year the Day-Fan was a high-priced outfit, and worth its price, but this season we are selling a limited number to our Club members at about one-third less than ever before.

THE INCOME TAX.

Hon. James Robb, Minister of Finance, has made so many pleasing announcements and been so generally accepted as a sort of Federal Santa Claus, that it was almost with a feeling of shock that the people of Canada read yesterday of his definite statement in Vancouver on Wednesday that the end of the income tax is not in sight.

For months there have been predictions that this tax was soon to be wiped out; and the slashes Mr. Robb has made in succeeding Budgets perhaps helped to confirm the impression that the levy would soon be completely abolished.

True, the Finance Minister had never said so, but hope ran high, and continued to run high until Mr. Robb delivered his Vancouver speech, and the vision of a Canada-without-an-income-tax was realized to have been a mirage.

The watchdog of the Treasury, usually makes his meaning plain, and he did so on this occasion.

"This income tax will be lighter as conditions permit," said he, "but the income tax is going to remain in Canada for a long time."

And that's that.

TOO MUCH SPREAD.

The Examiner asked the question a few days ago in referring to the apple situation as to why the consumer should have to pay the price of tropical fruit for apples while the producer was losing money.

This inquiry comes to mind again now, in view of a recent conference in Vernon, B. C., between representatives of the British Columbia fruit farmers and Hon. J. H. King, Federal Minister of Health, in which some interesting figures were disclosed.

The returns presented to the Minister showed that while it costs 80 cents a box to produce apples, the apple-growers' receipts will not exceed 16 cents a box.

Meanwhile the consumer in Eastern cities pays $3.00 or more for the same fruit.

There is surely something radically wrong with our methods of marketing in Canada when the apple-grower out in British Columbia receives only 4c out of every dollar paid by the consumer in Eastern Canada.

The fruit farmer spends 80c to get a revenue of 16c, and meanwhile his product costs the ultimate consumer at least $3.00.

Where does the spread go?

An accurate answer to that question might be of value to both producer and consumer.

THEY DISCOVER CANADA.

One of the most pleasing features of the post-war period in Canada has been the steadily increasing volume of tourist traffic with its large revenue, which this year is estimated in excess of $300,000,000.

Tourist travel is a seasonal activity looming up in ever-increasing importance and greater potentiality. Spontaneously generated and for some time permitted to develop largely of its own accord, this holiday and vacation travel from the United States and other countries has now come to rank as a major source of revenue, taking a place in this respect with the Dominion's greatest natural possessions.

Every Province of the Dominion is sharing to some extent in the benefits derived from this travel, since each has its special appeal and attraction and new sections of the country are continuously being developed and popularized by those in search of recreation, new and strange lands and scenic wonders. Each Provice reports that its tourist business increases each year.

While travel is naturally greatest in the more densely populated eastern Provinces adjacent to the States of greatest population, the beauties of the western Provinces and their peculiar attractions are drawing tourists from even greater distances.

The tourist crop of Western Canada is second only to the wheat crop, and the Dominion's favorable balance of tourist traffic represents an invisible export exceeded in value only by Canadian wheat and newsprint.—Oshawa Times.

THE COST OF GOVERNMENT.

The Citizens' Research Institute in its series of investigations into the cost of government in Canada has issued an interesting bulletin dealing with municipal expenditures in 1927, considering seventeen cities throughout Canada.

Although Peterborough is not included in the list, the general findings of the Institute are of interest.

It is not perhaps surprising to find that educational expenditures form the largest single item in the per capita costs, and that the general upwards trend in this branch has been one of the main reasons for the rising per capita expenditures in many Canadian cities.

The figures show that the per capita expenditure on education increased in all but three cities, as compared with 1921, and that in eight of the 17 cities the expenditures increased, as compared with the previous year, indicating that the limit of these increases have not been reached.

At the same time the per capita expenditures on general services show a decrease in most western cities, which were over-developed, while in the older centres increased population has been followed by increased per capita costs.

It does not necessarily follow that educational expenditures in Canada are too high, but the figures at least show one reason why municipal taxes are not decreasing.

A CAUSE FOR SATISFACTION.

It is a matter for general satisfaction that the controversy over the captured German guns has been satisfactorily terminated by reason of Mayor Denne's frank and conciliatory attitude in admitting his mistake to a meeting of war veterans last night, and of the willingness of Peterborough's ex-service men to meet His Worship half-way.

The episode can be considered as closed.

The guns return to Confederation Square where the men who fought for them believe they should be kept, and it can readily be believed, after the events of this week, that it will be a long time before the trophies are disturbed without the consent of those most interested in them.

The conduct of Peterborough's veterans throughout the whole proceedings has been admirable.

In rescuing the guns on Monday night they took the only course that self-respecting service men could take when indignities had been inflicted upon what the veterans rightly consider symbols of victory and sacrifice, and they carried out the operation in an orderly, dignified and sportsmanlike manner that earned them the endorsation of the community.

Again last evening they were fair enough to give the Mayor a courteous hearing, and to accept his explanation and bring the undesirable controversy to a close.

It would have been infinitely better for Peterborough had the incident not occurred, but at least there is occasion to rejoice that the men most aggrieved by the affair have been big enough to accept a frank explanation and thus bring to an end a most unpleasant interlude.

The conclusion of the controversy was brought about in a spirit of common sense, level-headedness and fair play that might well be hoped for on all occasions.

If the episode commenced in a storm of indignation it has at least terminated with a refreshing demonstration of conciliation, and for that the reasonableness of the ex-service men and the Mayor's bold facing of the situation and willingness to admit the error in judgment are to be thanked.

AND WHAT THEN?

Mr. Hoover, the President-elect, is running true to form in hopping on a warship and hiking for South America. He is reticent about meeting people, and apparently is not going to take advice or listen to the clamor of many supporters in arranging his Cabinet. Unlike the situation in Canada, members of the United States Cabinet do not have to be elected, but they represent the selection of the President, and he alone is the judge of their qualifications. They never have to appear in Congress to answer any questions that may percolate through the minds of the members of that body, while Canadian Ministers are compelled to run the gauntlet of innumerable inquiries, many of which are far-fetched indeed. As a matter of fact, the questions asked Ministers in the House of Commons in Canada are on account of the political game, for the most part, and particularly during the passing of the supplies, days, weeks and months, sometimes, are occupied in firing questions at the Ministers and demanding replies. Many of the answers to these questions could be obtained by members if they would just open the blue-books that are in their rooms, but this would not worry the Ministers, or get the question and answers on Hansard, so they could be sent home to the electors.

However, Mr. Hoover has gone, and for a time at least he will be where the wicked cease from troubling him, and can think his own thoughts without prompting. Of course, he will visit some of the South American states and probably will have conversations that may relieve a bit of strain that has existed in some quarters; but it would be a safe gamble that Mr. Hoover's chief object in taking this voyage is to get by himself where he can, unmolested and undisturbed, work out some of the great problems that confront him. Will he select for members of his Cabinet the gentlemen who are there now or will he drop all of these, or a number of them, and bring in brand new men? He is in a position to form a fair judgment as to the ability of the gentlemen who have been his colleagues, and it is not credible that they will all pass the test that Mr. Hoover will set up. It will be of great strength to his Cabinet if he can induce ex-Governor Hughes, of New York, to return, because, in the opinion of this journal, he is one of the very ablest men of the United States. It has been intimated that he will reach out after the Honorable Mr. Phillips, the United States Minister in Canada, and if this rumor be true it will mark Mr. Hoover as a good picker of men, as well as a strong candidate, as Mr. Phillips has more than made good in every position he has held, and his sojourn in Canada has added to the lustre of his public service.

But outside of choosing his Cabinet, the President-elect has utlined a number of policies that will keep him stepping to successfully put into practice. He has practically told Canada that so far as her natural products are concerned the duty is going to be increased, and this means having a very high protective tariff. Of course, Canada was not mentioned in his pledge, but she is the one country that will be materially affected. Our wheat for United States consumption is now penalized to the limit, and the tariff against many of our products, including cattle, is very heavy. In spite of this, however, we find entry to the United States market to quite an extensive degree, but a duty can be imposed that may have a marked effect on our international trade, and at this distance it does not appear as if it would be of any aid to the farmers of the United States.

Mr. Hoover may perambulate a bit through the British West Indies to see what effect the full operation of the treaty between these Islands and Canada is going to have. The new steamers, purchased by Canada under this treaty, through the Canadian National Railways, will begin to make regular trips very shortly, one starting on December 14th, "The Lady Nelson," and both the Islands and Canada expect a profitable trade between them.

Just what attitude Canada will assume, of course, cannot be conjectured until such time as Mr. Hoover puts his new tariff against Canadian natural products into force. The law in the United States, unlike that in Canada, does not require that a change in tariff be approved by Congress, as it has to be in Canada by Parliament, but under an existing statute a Tariff Commission in the Republic is empowered to make investigations and recommendations, and the President has authority to bring these recommendations into force without reference to the elected members. Representatives of the Tariff Commission have been making investigations in Canada along several lines, and it may be that the object of these investigations is to be able to report promptly to the new President when he assumes office on March 4th next. It will then be President Hoover's move, and Canada will await with considerable interest the significance of that move.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Regina football team may capture the senior championship, but somehow we imagine the Tiger will do most of the smiling on Saturday night.

And now Mr. Robb says that the income tax will be continued for a long time. Well, newspaper men should worry.

The Port Hope-Peterborough highway is to be kept open all winter. That should be a great convenience to Port Hope people.

A Thought

THE PHILOSOPHER

"If you ever find happiness by hunting for it, you will find it as the old woman did her lost spectacles—safe on her own nose all the time."

I wonder if we all realize the true philosophy contained in these homely words of Josh Billings, or if we are still on the quest for something that lies within ourselves.

Would you like to know the secret of true happiness? It lies in one word, "unselfishness," or to use a better word, "selflessness."

The minute you begin the task of making every human being you come in contact with better for having met you, more cheerful, more courageous, and with a firmer faith in the kindness of God and man, that minute you will have begun to attain one of the greatest things in life.—Personal Happiness.

TRUE WORK.

All true worwk is sacred; in all true work, even if but true hand-labor, there is something of divineness. O brother, if this is not worship, then I say the more pity for worship, for this is the noblest thing yet discovered under God's sky. Who art thou who complainest of thy life of toil? Complain not.

Look up, my wearied brother; see they fellow workmen there in God's eternity; surviving there; they alone surviving; sacred band of the immortals, celestial bodyguard of the Empire of Mankind. Even in the weak human memory they survive as sanity, as heois, as gods; they alone surviving peopling, they alone stand the unmeasured solitude of time.

To thee Heaven, though severe, is not unkind; Heaven is kind; as a noble mother, as that Spartan mother saying, when she gave her son his shield. With this, my son, or upon it. Thou, too, shalt return home in honor, to thy far distant home in honor, doubt it not, if in the battle thou keep thy shield.—Thomas Carlyle.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Before They call, I will answer—Isa. 65:24.

Jehovah, our God, "How excellent is Thy name in all the earth." We come to Thee, acknowledging Thy goodness and greatness, reverently bowing in the name of Jesus Christ, to give Thee praise and seek at Thy hands the strength needed for the duties of today. Most humbly do we confess our sins. In thought, word and deed we have transgressed Thy holy laws and "done despite unto the Spirit of grace." We recognize, O God, our weakness and failures in life; when we would do good, evil is ever present. We have brought shame upon Thy sacred name and dishonor to Thy cause. Led from the path of righteousness by the alluring influences of sin around us. But in Thy infinite love Thou wilt not refuse to hear to grant our petition. Forgive us of our many sins, and make possible, O God, a greater work of grace in our lives. Help us to be true to Thee each day. Help us to remember Thy mercies and to acknowledge Thee at all times. Strengthen us, dear Father, that in the hour of trial we may stand true as Thy children. Grant Thy blessing to all who seek Thee in truth. Bring back those who have wandered from Thee, that all may be saved. Accept this petition in the name of Jesus Christ, our Saviour and Redeemer. Amen.

The Question Box

R. L. A.—Q. As a farmer, interested in the West, I would like to know what has been the development of Manitoba?

A. Manitoba is making great strides in development, especially during the last two decades. With only a quarter of its agricultural area of 25,000,000 acres under the crop the field crops have reached an annual value of $125,000,000. Dairying has risen from small figures to $13,000,000, an has stock-raising. There has been important hydro-electric developments while the mineral belts have great potential value. The pulpwood industry shows a corresponding growth.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XLV.

It seemed a lifetime while he waited. Every little sound in the hall was magnified a thousand times by his anxiety. The shutting of the front door—steps across the hall—the manservant's monotonous announcement:

"Mr. Schofield, sir."

Then the soft closing of the library door.

Chittenham was across the room in a stride.

"Is anything the matter—Miss Farrow—"

In his desperate anxiety Giles forgot that this man in all probability knew nothing of his relations with Julie—and when he did not immediately reply, he broke out again hoarsely:

"If anything is wrong—"

"That all depends on what you mean by 'wrong'," Schofield answered slowly.

There was an eloquent silence, then the elder man went on in the quiet, level voice of a man who is really laboring under passionate excitement.

"Yesterday evening I had the doubtful honor of a visit from a man named Lombard. I have met him before—usually I believe in your company. I think I am right in assuming that he is a friend of yours?"

"He was—yes."

Chittenham knew now what was coming and his face whitened. For himself he cared nothing, but for Julie—it was not fair that she who was innocent should have to pay so heavily.

Schofield's face twisted into a mirthless smile. He looked old and ill and he kept clenching and unclenching his hands in a nervous and yet almost violent way.

"Yes," he said, still in that level, unnatural voice. "I believe there has been a little upset between you—over a question of money, I believe—or should we call it the price of a woman's honor?"

There was a tragic silence. Chittenham's hands were clenched behind his back and his face was grim.

"Perhaps you would like me to explain, Mr. Chittenham," Schofield went on, and now every sneering word was a studied insult. "Or will it be sufficient if I just call you the cad and the blackguard which I know you to be?"

Chittenham did not move. His instinct was to strike this man across his sneering face, and yet the thought of Julie was like a restraining hand.

Any ill-considered action on his part would only reflect on her, he knew. It would be greater wisdom to wait until Schofield should lay all his cards on the table. But it was only with the greatest difficulty that he controlled himself, and his voice shook when he spoke.

"I can only conclude that you're drunk," he said sharply, "and that being so, the kindest thing I can do is to ring and have you shown out of the house."

He took a step towards the bell, but Schofield was too quick for him.

"That won't do," he said thickly. "I've seen that trick tried before. I'm not drunk and you damn well know I'm not. You're a younger man than I am, Chittenham, but I spoiled Lombard's beauty for him last night—he won't show his face amongst decent people again for some time to come—and by God I'll spoil yours if I—"

Chittenham caught his upraised arm and held it with fingers of steel.

"Don't be a damned fool," he said rather breathlessly. "You're no match for me, and you know you're not. If you've got anything to say, say it and be done. As far as Lombard goes, if you have given him a thrashing I'm in your debt. I owe him one myself."

He released Schofield's arm, at the same time giving him a little push away from him, and for a moment the two men glared at one another silently, then Schofield seemed to break down. He groped towards a chair and fell into it, hiding his face against his clenched hands. Giles watched him for a moment without speaking, then he fetched whisky and soda from a side table.

"Help yourself," he said. "If you've got anything against me, let's talk it out sensibly, instead of flying at one another's throats like wild beasts. I know what Lombard has told you. He tried his blackmailing games on me, and when he found it was no use, he threatened to go to you. Good God, Schofield what sort of a man are you to believe a lying hound like that?"

Schofield raised his haggard face.

"What reason have I to disbelieve it?" he asked sullenly.

Giles shrugged his shoulders.

"Isn't your knowledge of Miss Farrow the best of all reasons?"

Schofield rose to his feet and began pacing up and down.

"Lombard was so sure. He had got every detail of the story—that you and Julie spent the night together at the St. Bernard Hostel—"

"So we did. It was impossible to get home. If all such unforeseen situations are given the same vile interpretation as you have given to this—"

Schofield's face flamed suddenly crimson.

"But I believe it!" he shouted. "I've always known that Julie was unhappy. She has hinted at trouble to me again and again. The reckless way she talks—all that pretended gaiety. It's never really deceived me, though for her sake I've let her think it has. Lombard had the whole story pat. He even spoke of your brother's relations with Julie's cousin—and of his suicide. He said that you mistook Julie for her cousin, he said that you intended punishing her for the way she treated your brother—he said that when you came back from St. Bernard you boasted to him of the easy conquest you had made—"

Chittenham made a sudden passionate gesture.

"That is a blasted lie," he broke in savagely, "and by God, if Lombard were here—"

"If he were here he would bear out every word I have said."

The faces of both men were white as they glared at one another. Suddenly Schofield broke into bitter laughter.

"Perhaps you will deny that you are a married man," he sneered, "and that your wife is Sadie Barrow." He laughed again as Chittenham winced. "You can't deny that!" he jeered. "You see I know more than you think I do. You're clever enough, Chittenham, but if you think I'm fool enough to marry your discarded—"

He never finished his sentence, for Chittenham's hands were at his throat, shaking him like a rat, almost choking him.

"By God, you dare say that to me! You talk of Lombard—how much better are you? Believing the first foul lies that come to you about a woman for whom you're supposed to care! You're not worth a thrashing. Get out—that's all I've got to say to you!"

Still keeping one hand on Schofield, Chittenham dragged him to the door and flung it open, shouting to one of the servants:

"James, show this gentleman out, and if he refuses to go send for the police."

He released Schofield so violently that he almost fell. He waited a moment—then went back into the library, shutting the door behind him.

He was shaking from head to foot with uncontrollable passion, and his face and head were burning.

That any man should dare to accuse him of such a thing—and Julie of all people—the woman he adored.

He stood against the mantleshelf, his forehead resting on his arm, trying hard to regain his self-control. Why had he allowed Schofield to get away so lightly? Why hadn't he broken every bone in his body?

Then as he grew calmer he knew why.

He was sorry for Schofield because he loved Julie—sorry for him because he, too, was suffering—a poor devil whom she had never loved. Schofield had no wonderful memories to help him through.

Again Chittenham lost himself in the thought of that night on St. Bernard when they had been shut in on all sides by storm and snow and tempest and he had held Julie in his arms.

"Giles." He heard his mother's timid voice at his side, and Giles started guiltily and turned.

"Giles, is anything the matter? I thought I heard shouting and a noise like people fighting. Is anything the matter? You look so strange, just like your father used to look when I had made him very angry."

Giles tried to smile.

"There's nothing the matter, dear; go to bed and don't worry. I'm just off, back to the hotel."

She gave a little cry of dismay.

"But won't you stay. What about Sadie?"

"She'll be all right the nurse is there."

"I know, dear, but your own wife—and so terribly afflicted, poor soul!"

Giles broke in harshly.

"I can do no good by staying. I am going back to the hotel. I shall be here early in the morning to take Sadie away."

He moved to the door, then came back to say remorsefully:

"I don't mean to be unkind, but I've had as much as I can stand for one day. Good night."

He kissed her and turned away.

"And this should have been such a wonderfully happy day for me!" Mrs. Ardron walked after him. "I remember the day your father asked me to marry him, and the day darling Rodney's father asked me, I—"

Giles shut the door in the midst of her tearful eloquence; he felt he could not bear to hear his father spoken of in the same breath as Marco Esen.

Lyrics of Life

ADVICE

I've gone to strangers for advice,
And even asked my kin,
Nor had the same opinion twice
When trouble I was in;
And I've about decided now,
No matter what the task,
To find just when and where and how,
That I'm the one to ask.

The stranger sees your motor stall,
And gives some wires a jerk.
It isn't his car, after all,
In case it doesn't work.
And you will find, as I have found
When doubtful what to do,
Though lots of others stand around,
The one to ask is you.

For friends will brush your cares away
With just a wave of hand;
They always have the more to say
The less they understand.
So when you have to throw the dice,
And throw to win or miss,
Don't take some other man's advice—
Perhaps not even this.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY THROWING A BALL NEAR THE LOST ONE HELPS TO FIND IT

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

In "The Merchant of Venice" Bassanio says, "In my school days, when I had lost one shaft, I shot his fellow of the self-same flight. And by adventuring both I oft found both."

This ancient method of finding a lost arrow is sometimes used to find other lost articles, such as a ball. There must be something to it else the practice would not continue. It is sometimes successful.

When you throw a ball in the direction of the one you lost, it gives you a clearer idea of how the lost ball will look. That is, it enables you to set the mental mechanism involved into proper working condition. A very feeble impulse will then go through. The slightest indication of the lost ball will be perceived. This enables you to attend intensely to the indications of the lost ball.

The more vividly you hold an idea of the thing you are looking for, the better chance you have of locating it. One man spies a bird in the near-by tree. He points it out to his friend who has a hard time locating it. But a description of the size and color of the bird makes the creature vivid in the other man's mind so that he also sees the bird.

Furthermore if the idea of a thing is held vividly enough you will see it when it is not there at all. This shows how important it is to have a vivid mental picture of the thing you are searching.

Still another illustration of the same thing is the ticking of a clock. When you attend you can hear it tick at a much greater distance. In listening for the clock to tick you are organizing the mental centers for the ticking process, so that little resistance is encountered. Thus the faint impulses will go through. When you are not listening the dendrites are not so close together. The connections are poorer. Therefore it takes a stronger impulse to go through. The clock must tick so much louder to be heard.

Throwing a ball near the lost one helps you to find it not only because it strengthens and vivifies the idea of the lost ball, but also because it gives you an added incentive to look. It makes it worth your while to look diligently.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper and send stamped self-addressed envelope for reply.

Uncle Wiggily

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE WHITE MARBLES

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time Uncle Wiggily caught cold. The old rabbit gentleman caught his cold without even running after it a little bit. Oh, such a cold as Uncle Wiggily had!

He coughed: "Koch! Hack! Hick!"

He sneezed: "Ker choo! Her chow! Ker chee!"

"Dear me!" squeaked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, "we must send for Dr. Possum at once, Uncle Wiggily!"

When Dr. Possum called he said:

"Uncle Wiggily must stay in bed three days!"

"Oh, dear! What shall I do for adventures?" asked Mr. Longears. And he coughed: "Hoch! Heck! Hick!" And he sneezed: "Ker choo! Ker chow! Ker chee!" But Dr. Possum only poured out some medicine and said:

"Perhaps you may have some adventures in bed, Uncle Wiggily!"

So Uncle Wiggily stayed in bed. All day he kept under the covers, which were made of soft layers of bark between which were sewed soft, warm cotton from inside the pods of milkweed plants. And it was lonesome for the old rabbit gentleman who always hopped out of doors whenever he wished to look for adventures. But not an adventure came to him that day in bed.

However, at night, when all was still and quiet in the hollow stump bungalow and Uncle Wiggily was trying to sleep, all of a sudden he saw, in the middle of his room a queer looking little elf.

"Hello!" said the visitor.

"Hello!" answered Uncle Wiggily. "What do you want here? Have you come after my cold? If you have, take it and welcome!"

"I have come to bring you an adventure," said the little elf.

"What kind?" the rabbit gentleman wanted to know.

"An adventure with marbles," was the reply. "Come we will play a game of marbles on the quilt of your bed."

"But I have no marbles," said Uncle Wiggily.

"I have," chuckled the little elf. Reaching out of the window he brought in his two hands filled with round, white marbles. "Your bed quilt has red rings on it," said the little elf, which was true enough, for Nurse Jane had embroidered the rings with silk thread. "We can play with my white marbles in the red rings of your quilt," said the little elf.

So Uncle Wiggily sat up in bed quite pleased that he was going to have a marble adventure with the little elf and the game began. Now the rabbit gentleman had not played in many years. But he remembered how he used to shoot when he was a rabbit boy so he won the game and had quite a lot of white marbles for himself.

"Ha! Ha! I win!" cried Uncle Wiggily. We'll play another game!"

"Not now," said the little elf. "I must go. But I will come back tomorrow night and play you again. I'll bring a lot of white marbles then."

So Uncle Wiggily put the white marbles he had won on the floor under his bed. He fluffed up his pillows, said good-night to the little elf and, turning over, went sound to sleep. And as he closed his eyes he thought:

"I will surprise Nurse Jane and my wife in the morning by showing them the white marbles I got in the game I played. It was quite a jolly adventure even if I have a cold."

So the next morning when Uncle Wiggily awakened he felt better. But he still coughed: "Hoch! Heck! Hick!" And he sneezed: "Ker chool Ker chow! Ker chee!"

Nurse Jane came into the room.

"How are you?" asked the muskrat lady housekeeper.

"Fine!" answered Uncle Wiggily, twinkling his pink nose. "I had a funny adventure in the night. A little elf came in and played marbles with me—white marbles. I have quite a few under the bed. Will you please hand them up to me so I can see how they look in daylight."

Nurse Jane peered under the bed. "Why, Uncle Wiggily!" she squeaked. There are no white marbles here at all. There is only a little puddle of water! I guess you must have dreamed it all! It was just a dream!"

"Oh, no it wasn't!" said the rabbit. "Just you wait! The elf is coming back tonight and I'll have more white marbles. But I can't think what became of those I put under the bed. However, tonight I'll get more." Nurse Jane shook her tail. She did not know what to think.

HOROSCOPE.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Conflicting planetary influences are seen in the horoscope for today, according to astrology.

Under this sway of the stars there may be a distinct clash between the spiritual and material impulses that control humanity.

Early in the morning attention should be given to routine pursuits, both personal and business. Judgment and foresight at this time should be fairly trustworthy.

During the busiest hours Saturn is in an aspect inauspicious for important matters and it is well to delay initiative that carries big possibilities.

Late in the afternoon the rule is more dependable and for this reason it may be well to delay one's week-end trip until evening.

The hours after sunset are read as promising for amusement and helpful for psychic studies.

All the signs appear to be favorable to big business projects and prosperity is foretold for large going concerns.

Between the successful and the unsuccessful a greater gulf may be expected as the winter progresses, for the world requires only the best brains and best training.

Under this planetary government women should benefit so far as domestic interests are involved.

Education is well directed and there will be extraordinary interest in lectures this season, it is forecast.

Music and all the arts are to benefit amazingly, it is predicted, and new stars of stage and screen will multiply.

Saturn is in an aspect supposed to presage trouble with mines and possible labor difficulties.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a decided broadening of all their interests in the coming year. Journeys may be frequent.

Children born on this day probably will be unselfish and very generous. These subjects of Sagittarius usually have high ambitions which they are able to attain. Both girls and boys are likely to have varied talents.

News Fom the Miners

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

Porcupine Paymaster

According to a field report just received the mine and mill of Porcupine Paymaster have been completely closed down and the men paid off. A loss of close to $150,000 for the four months ending September is reported. It is thought also that the directors of the company will change the stock from assessable to non-assessable, so that the stockholders may be relieved from future financial effort to bring the mine to profitable production.

Clericy

According to a progress report issued by the company, diamond drilling was started a few days ago on their West River property. It points out that the surface exploration program including trenching and test pitting and geological mapping has been concluded. Several veins have been opened up during the past two months and have been traced for varying length of from 40 to 600 feet with widths estimated at 3 to 14 feet. Surface assays were decidedly good.

Teck-Hughes

A recent report by Charles L. Dennison, president of Teck, tends to show that expansion at their property will not be held up any more than is absolutely necessary. He says in part "It is certainly our intention to extract the gold as rapidly as the ore can be got ready for mining and milling. Our shareholders want the reward now, not a great many years from now."

Sherritt Gordon

Splendid progress is reported as being made in crosscutting on the 125, 250 and 375 foot levels of Sherritt-Gordon. This work is being carried out on the western end of the zone from the No. 2 shaft, and it is anticipated the ore zone may be intersected very shortly. Two diamond drills are in operation on the Ook claim, where high values have already been reported. At the eastern end from the No. 1 shaft two machines are employed drifting and crosscutting from the 125 and 250 foot levels. One drill is also employed in raising from the 250 to the 125, and from the 125 to surface.

Dome

According to a despatch from Haileybury yesterday morning, Dome have located the downward extension of their north ore body on the 13th level. It is reported as showing high grade over drift width. This now gives them this important ore from the 11th to the 13th.

Mining Corporation

Shaft sinking has started on the Murray claims north of Noranda. A depth of about 280 feet has now been reached and five feet a day is being made.

Noranda

The spectacular advance in Noranda was accomplished, near the close with comparatively small blocks of stock. The eager bidding for large blocks, after the market was closed, up to $71.00, leads us to believe a strong openeing will result this morning.

Liverpool Quotations Weaken Wheat Values

CHICAGO, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press.)— Wheat values here went downward early to-day, influenced by the weakness of Liverpool quotations and by snow falls in the domestic winter wheat teritory, southwest and west.

Liverpool despatches told of much cheaper offerings of wheat from Argentina. Starting at a shade to 5-8 to 3-4 decline, Chicago wheat showed but little power to rally. Corn opened at 3-4 off to 1-8 up and held near to the initial range. Oats were easy.

Wheat, December 114 5-8, March 119 7-8. Corn, December 84½, March 87 7/8. Oats, December 47¼, March 47⅛.

International Nickel Quotations Unchanged

TORONTO, November 30. Canadian Press. — Trading remained firm during the morning session on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day with only slight changes in most issues. International Nickel at noon was 223, unchanged from yesterday. There was a heavy liquidation in Imperial Tobacco and the issue dropped 1-8 to 11. Office Supplies firms were down, F. N. Burt losing 5 to 86. Pacific-Burt common dropped 8 to 180, and preferred 5 to 180, while American Sale Bood remained unchanged. Brazilian was also down at 75, a loss of 1 1-2.Massey-Harris gained 2 to 92 and Page-Hersey 1 to 120 1-2. Orange Crush was up 2 to 20 1-2 and Hiram Walker's up 1 to 84; Kelvinator gained 3-4 to 13 1-4, and Hayes Wheel 1 to 46. British Columbia Packers went up 4 points, to 32, and International nickel, new, dorpped 2 to 37. Oils were steady.

Canadian Marconi Stock Drops On New York Curb

NEW YORK, November 30 (Canadian Press). — Sweeping reaction in stock prices inspired by the marking up of call money rates from eight to ten per cent. and a wide open break in Canadian Marconi on the New York curb market took place this afternoon after a wild outburst of bullish enthusiasm at the opening of the New York Stock Exchange had carried several issues up five to nearly fifteen points. Early gains quickly melted away under the flood of selling orders and several of the high-priced specialties dipped five to nearly twenty points below Wednesday's final quotations.

The rise in call money followed the calling of between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 in bank loans, presumably to meet unusually heavy month-end disbursements.

Call money has not been as high as ten per cent. since October 1, when a similar month-end "squeeze" took place and while the high rate is regarded as temporary, bankers look for relatively firm rates until after the end of the year.

The break in Canadian Marconi was attributed to a statement of Sir Joseph Flavelle, president of the company, that the stock was too high. It has been estimated that the 1928 earnings will be only about two cents a share, so that the stock has been selling at 1,400 times its earnings.

Favorite Issues Down On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, November 30. Canadian Press. — With trading increased generally throughout the list, prices were irregular on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Uoranda dropped 2.40 to 66.60, and McIntyre went down 50c to 22.25; Amulet advanced 13 to 3.08; Barry Hollinger 1 to 31; Bathurst 1 to 41; Graham 1 to 26; Howey 1 to 1.02; Hollinger consolidated 25 to 8.40; Murphy 2 to 77; Nipissing 10 to 3.00; Sherritt-Gordon 5 to 6.75; Teck-Hughes 15 to 8.45, Amity Copper was down 3 at 27; Bidgood 2 at 34; Malartic 5 at 90; Mining Corporation, 5 to 3.95 and Sudbury Basin 5 at 8.60. Coast Copper sold at 62.00, a gain of 1.00. Hudson Bay dropped 25c to 21.00; Jackson Manion at 24 and Mandy Mines at 1.26 were each down 1 and Big Missouri 1-2 at 63, while Falconbridge advanced ten at 5.20.

KIWANIS CLUB VISITS BAZAAR

Members Are Guests of Catholic Women's League at Dinner.

PRIZES PRESENTED.

Though there was no speaker, and the lack of a piano rendered a musical program impracticable, save for intermittent attempts at group singing, the meeting of the Kiwanis Club to-day provided a pleasant hour for a good turnout of members. On invitation from the Catholic Women's League, the club patronized the league's dining hall at the bazaar, now in progress in the Market Building. An appetizing dinner was served, followed by the National Anthem.

J. A. O'Brien's booster prizes were given to John Meyers, Joe Wearing, and Jack McKone in recognition of their faithful attendance records, while among other features of the meeting was the introduction by Bill Merrill of Bert Wainman, a new member. Charlie Cook welcomed him into the club, as did President Joe John.

Following the singing of 'O Canada' the Kiwanians dismissed in favor of the games and other features of the bazaar.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE OFTEN EXPERIENCE SYMPTOMS OF DISEASES WE READ ABOUT

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

We often experience symptoms of diseases we read about. The same thing happens when we listen to a recital of a lot of symptoms. We soon begin to feel these things coming on.

The reason for this is that every idea that you read or hear about produces a mild reflex action of the same sort of thing in your own system. For example, if I mention a ripe luscious peach or a cut lemon your mouth waters.

Every idea has a tendency to express itself with appropriate action. You could not possibly understand what you are reading or hearing unless you experienced in a measure the very things you read or hear. That is why the type of literature you read makes such a big difference in your life. Smutty literature is immoral because it stimulates the same sort of reaction in the reader.

All this means that when you read about diseases and symptoms of diseases the corresponding feelings that go with each of these experiences are awakened within you and before you realize it you begin to suspect that you have the disease itself. The nervous centers and mechanisms involved are stimulated to action so that in very truth you experience the thing itself although in a very mild form. The imagination magnifies the feeling and you are likely to become quite ill if you brood upon the subject and allow it to remain at the focus of consciousness.

When we entertain an idea, a nervous impulse is traversing the corresponding center. When we read about the symptoms of a disease, impulses traverse the corresponding centers and we experience in a mild way the symptoms of that disease and the corresponding feelings. If we begin to attend negatively to these feelings and symptoms, we can intensify both to such an extent that an expert will be deceived. The technical name for this condition is hysteria. A large percentage of the cases a doctor is called upon to treat are of this kind of illness.

Sometimes a distinction is made between functional disorders and structural diseases. Functional disorders are largely the result of hysteria and the dwelling in one's mind on the symptoms of disease. The fear of a disease or infirmity often brings it on. Even blindness is sometimes brought on in this way while the mechanism of the eye remains healthy.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

LYRICS OF LIFE

TIMES AND PLACES

You'll find it rather hard to be
Good certain times and certain places,
To manage your profanity.
So no one's party it disgraces.
For, with the minister about,
A word will now and then slip out,
Or else some story you may chatter
That somewhere else might never matter.

It's hard to be a gentleman
Or lady at another's table
If at your own you think you can Adopt the manners of the stable.
In public one is often known
To act the way he acts alone.
It's hard to keep your mind upon i
And change your habits with you bonnet.

In fact, I've found the only way,
In spite of Satan's soft persuasions,
Is being decent every day,
And just the same on all occasions.
To those whose standards never fall
Life isn't difficult at all.
The good are good in certain cases
Because they're good all times and places.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY.

To Scotsmen throughout the world this (St. Andrew's Day) is one of the red letter days in their calendar. Celebrations in honour of St. Andrew, Scotland's patron saint, will be held wherever natives of the Land o' the Heather are foregathered. In Peterborough, the Caledonian Club will to-night listen to an address on "St. Andrew" and "The Early Pioneers of Canada" by Rev. Mr. McDonald, of Knox Church.

THANKOFFERING MEETING HELD

Memorial Certificate is Presented in Honor of Memory of Miss Fannie Ray.

SEVERAL ADDRESSES

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 30—The annual thank-offering meeting of Knox United Church W.M.S. was held in the school room of the church on Tuesday afternoon with the president, Mrs. J. A. Porter in the chair. Following the opening exercises, Mrs. J. R. Hull and Mrs. G. E. Renwick sang a duet, "Bringing them back to the Fold", with Mrs. Wesley as accompanist; Mrs. W. J. Charlton read the scripture lesson and Mrs. Grant offered prayer.

As Mrs. H. J. Hutton hung a memorial certificate to the late Miss Fannie Ray the ladies stood and repeated the Lord's prayer and before being seated sang three verses of Bishop How's beautiful hymn "For All the Saints." The certificate was presented by Miss Mary Ray and is hung directly beneath Miss Fannie Ray's Life Membership certificate. Miss Fannie's generosity and interest in the work is now, and will be for many years a beautiful memory for the society. Miss Mary Ray too, has been a generous supporter of the society.

Mrs. Porter gracefully welcomed the visitors and introduced Mrs. Allan of St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough.

Mrs. Allan expressed pleasure at being present declared that a beautiful day like this was the suitable day for a thank-offering. The world, which God gave us is beautiful and the only ugly things are those put there by man. Mrs. Allan said she would not speak on any particular branch of the mission work for the returned missionaries can do that so well, but she urged greater zeal for missionary work. The church which does most for missions is the live church and while some say "Oh I do not believe in missions, charity begins at home," we don't find they do very much even there. Those who are fulfilling the Lord's command to "go into all the world" are also serving at home.

Mrs. Allan spoke on the work of the prophet, Jeremiah, often called the "weeping prophet" but Jeremiah bore witness for God in the face of greater discouragements than any other prophet. Mrs. Allan read a part of the 20th chapter of the book of Jeremiah telling of the greatest crisis in the life of the Hebrew nation and like an interlude in a great orchestra selection comes the heart-broken cry of Jeremiah lifted in warning.

Called Very Young

Jeremiah was called by God when very young and only the extreme urgency of that call enabled him to overcome his natural diffidence and as Lord Roseberry so aptly put it, "plowing a lonely furrow." His devoted life and earnest pleading brought no response but contempt and derision and persecution. With dogged perseverance and a heroism, as magnificent as it was rare, he "carried on." It was no wonder that his courage gave way and he doubted the reality of his youthful call, but something within him kept him from turning back.

We live in one of he most interesting periods of history and are enjoying comforts, conveniences and pleasures which were never ever dreamed of a hundred years ago. With so much materialism in the business and social life of to-day it is necessary to emphasize the ideal and spiritual. It is often hard to distinguish the so-called Christian from the non-Christian. The earnest followers of the lowly Jesus should hold aloft the gleaming light of a high ideal remembering that Christ's success was failure in the eyes of the materialistic world. His victory was defeat and His Cross an offence. A church to-day which strikes at the root of commonly accepted conduct encounters hostility. If the rule of conduct be governed by the Sermon on the Mount, both Labor and Capital would look askance. Jeremiah, with his wondrous fidelity and heroism, was not appreciated till long after his death. Surely we should bear as faithful witness to the spiritual Lordship of the Saviour. A worldly church is no higher in ideals than the world, the true Christian must stand on one side or the other, there is no compromise for the strength of the church lies in its individual members and we must live near to Him and spend ourselves for other as He did. The speaker pleaded for fearless church membership which would be reflected in civic and industrial life, in national politics and international relations. Many do not realize that it is more important to have one's name written in the Lamb's Book of Life than in the society column.

Ruskin said "a nation takes its model from its women" and in the light of that, let us pause and think of the prevalance of smoking and drinking among women, there is evidence of inter lack of reverence and a lack of appreciation of what is pure and lovely and of good report, when women lose their self respect they sink far lower than men and we would do well to remember that the idleness, self indulgence and resulting vice brought the downfall of the great Roman empire.

Questions Asked

Where do we stand? Is our faith strong enough to endure persecution and martyrdom. We need more of the austerity of the Puritans, more of the high ideals of true womanliness. Although men were diabolical in their cruelty to Christ, women honored and were kind, women were last at the cross and first at the tomb, and accepted most readily the story of the resurrection. Mrs. Allan urged greater use of prayer, women should pray more for aid, for strength and guidance. We must go forward in Christian work and we cannot be more circumscribed than Our Lord's command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature"; "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son that who so believeth in Him Shall not perish, but have everlasting life." Let us take the gospel to the whole world, for "we pass this way but once."

Mrs. Allan closed by reading John Oxenham's beautiful poem "Darkness and Light."

Mrs. Porter thanked Mrs. Allan for her excellent address which was an inspiration and a benefit to every woman present. Mrs. (Rev.) S. A. Kemp offered prayer and Mrs. Georgie Craig Bell sang very sweetly "God So Loved the World", that beautiful selection from Stainer's "Crucifixion."

Mrs. (Rev.) T. W. Wesley gracefully proposed a vote of thanks to Mrs. Allan which was seconded by Mrs. E. W. Bailey and heartily endorsed by everyone present.

The thank-offering was taken by Mrs. W. J. Charlton and Miss Frankish; Mrs. W. W. Yale offered the dedicatory prayer and the meeting closed with the singing of a hymn.

Following the meeting, afternoon tea was served by the ladies of the Knox United Church, W.M.S. and a pleasant social hour was spent.

YOUNG PEOPLE HEAR ADDRESS

DESCRIBES YUKON.

HASTINGS, Nov. 30.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Rev. George C. F. Pringle gave an excellent address, full of interest and inspiration, at the meeting of the Young People's Society of Trinity United Church held on Monday night.

Rev. Mr. Pringle was born at Galt, Ontario, and educated in the public and high schools of Galt, at the University of Toronto and Queen's University, Kingston. A year was also spent in post-graduate work at Edinburgh University, Scotland. In 1899 Rev. Mr. Pringle answered the call of the Presbyterian Mission Board and went to the Yukon, where for ten years he ministered to the miners in and around Dawson City and to many scattered settlements throughout the Yukon territory. During the long winters, eight months in length, he travelled thousands of miles by dog teams, while in the brief summer he travelled by canoe and boat, or on foot. When Rev. Mr. Pringle reached Dawson City, there was a population of about fifteen thousand people, many of them having gone in with the gold stampede of 1898. In later years, with the introduction of modern mining machinery in the hands of strong mining corporations, the individual miners sold out their claims, and left the country with the result that the preesnt population of Dawson City is said to be less than one thousand.

Describes Yukon.

In describing the Yukon, Rev. Mr. Pringle said that it is one of the most beautiful and interesting places in the world, in spite of its many advantages. The ground is frozen to a great depth and has possibly been in that state for thousands of years. The miner, when sinking a shaft, has to use artificial means of thawing and even then rarely goes below the fifty foot level. During the brief summer, the soil will thaw out to a depth of from twelve to eighteen inches, and is exceedingly productive.

Served Overseas.

From 1910 to 1914, Rev. Mr. Pringle served in the regular pastorate of the Presbyterian Church in British Columbia. On the outbreak of the Great War, he was accepted for overseas service with a regiment of Cameron Highlanders, with whom he served as chaplain. During the period of demobilization, he crossed the Atlantic fourteen times in one winter, bringing home from 700 to 800 wounded soldiers each time. When released from military service he was chosen to be pastor of a leading church in Edinburgh, Scotland, but at the end of one year was recalled to Canada by his mother church, and was asked to take charge of the missions among the loggers of British Columbia. In this position, Rev. Mr. Pringle was signally successful and held the positon until the United Church of Canada came into being. Then he was appointed to take charge of the Marion Missions of the Pacific Coast. In this work, he is still engaged, going from place to place among the fifty thousand islands, with their scattered settlements, in a little forty-foot motorboat, "The Sky Pilot," provided by the United Church Mission Board.

Extremely fascinating are the stories told by Rev. Mr. Pringle of the redemptive work that is thus made possible among the islanders and also among the few settlers along the coastline of 600 miles. A feature of his work that has been very rich in results, is a chain of some sixty lending libraries scattered throughout the immense area which he attempts to serve. In most cases the books have been given by those deeply interested in the Pacific Coast Missions. Recently a gift of 4,000 books was made by the Carnegie Library Foundation. Rev. Mr. Pringle has the faculty of letting his audience see the most important principles of such missionary work, and after having spoken for more than an hour, many were heard to say, "I wish he had continued to tell us more about such an interesting and worthwhile activity of the United Church."

Other items on the program were, scriptural lesson with comments by Mrs. D. E. Scriver; piano solo, Miss Marjory Scriver, and a cornet solo by Wilfrid Knight.

ANNUAL BAZAAR IS BIG SUCCESS

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, November 30. — All roads seemed to lead, on Monday evening, to the Parish Hall of the Sacred Heart Church, where, in the spacious basement, was served another of those chicken suppers which bring fame to Marmora's modest cooks. No one was hurried, and he who ate the most leisurely would be asked, not once or twice, but oftener, if there was not something else he fancied which as yet he had not sampled. Upstairs there was other animation, for a well-organized bazaar was in full swing. One first encountered the candy stall with its pretty blue and white decorations. Four young ladies of the Sodality were in charge, the Misses J. O'Neil, F. Doyle, K. Doyle, and A. O'Connor and this dispensary of sweetness seemed to be a necessary calling place for many who had supped. The fancy stall also proved very attractive and its goods were particularly artistic besides being serviceable. A handkerchief cover with an hand-worked chrysanthemum design was truly a work of art. The ladies at this stall were Mesdames J. P. Marrin, C. A. McWilliams, and E. Deacon, and Miss Hilda Hughes. The fish pond, also managed by young ladies of the Sodality, was well patronized. Misses Mary Auger, Mary Brady, Florence Auger, and Dorena Gehan exemplified "fishing made easy." Decorated in a nice yellow style to represent a country store was the home cooking stall presided over by Mrs. Hannah Auger and Mrs. James Brady. Good success was also the report given here. The bazaar was continued the next day, a euchre party winding up the two days' program.

MAYOR DENNE CHEERED WHEN HE TELLS THE FACTS; PROMISES RESTORATION

and we want your help."

Somewhere in the audience a firm voice answered: "We will."

Mayor Denne: "We want to make Peterborough a bigger and better city and I am ready to answer any other question." "We'll give you the benefit of the doubt", someone replied.

"I would like to ask Mr. Greene.. someone began.

"Mr. Greene will answer for himself if it's necessary" cut in His Worship.

Harold Burrows: "Before we go further I would like to voice the wish of the comrades here for Mrs. Denne's recovery from illness which, I understand, she is now suffering. Mr. Denne, you said that 'if we waited 24 hours' but remember, back in 1914 we learned to do it 'now' rather than afterward."

"Mr. Mayor", came another voice. "isn't it remarkable that when it was decided to move the guns, no word was given as to where they should go?"

Mayor Denne: "The removal of the guns was discussed in the Board of Works and I took it upon myself to bring it up. The thing was, I didn't expect they were going to be removed at that particular time.

Comrade "Buff" Guerin: "Last Monday morning when I saw what was happening, I went to look for the mayor. He was out of town so I went to Colonel Ackerman. Later I got in touch with the city teamster who told me that the foreman had told him where to take the guns. If anyone is to be chastised, it is Foreman Evans."

Mayor Denne: "He might have come and asked where to put them."

Why Take the Bases Away?

"May I ask why the concrete bases were taken away if you intended putting the guns back", asked another.

Mayor Denne: "Anyone who knows anything about concrete will tell you that they couldn't be removed and that new bases would have to be built wherever we placed the guns.'

"I think Evans should have to apologize," declared one in the gathering. And yet another said: "I think this is just a smoke screen. On that committee was our chief commander and it was plain that Mr. Abraham didn't give a damn."

Mayor Denne: "Be fair to Mr. Abraham."

"Yes but I think that through Abraham and Hall the soldiers were partly to blame. They should be in the witness box too.

Father Costello: "If Comrades Abraham and Hall must go in the box, then I must go too. I have worked for you for ten years and have attended two Dominion conventions, once at my own expense. Anything that was said by either of them or by me was for the good of the returned men. You may have gained a wrong impression but if I can't tell you the truth I'll resign the Dominion Chaplaincy. I am speaking honestly when I say that as a member of the Memorial Committee I am standing by Mr. Abraham and Col. Hall. We all spoke for the beauty of the park and what we said was in good part. If a mistake was made, I am ready to repair it."

Not Removal of Guns.

Chairman Sutton: "I think we are getting away from the point. It wasn't the removal of the guns that had such an effect as it was the place where they got to. The responsibility for that has been acknowledged in a good broad way and Mayor Denne has approved of our part. It isn't our fault that publicity contrary to the good of the city went abroad. We went down to repair the damage and to do what we could for the good name of Peterborough.

"It is apparent that orders were given without expecting so immediate a movement of the guns, and so no place was named that they should be taken to. The foreman, no doubt, is sorry too. It was in another capacity that Mr. Abraham was a member of the Memorial Committee and we had no direct representation on that committee."

Mr. Abraham: "I maintain that the statement regarding Colonel Hall and myself was wrong. I think I made myself clear on Monday night."

Father Costello: "There was no intentional indignity and if there was, we would not stand for it. If a mistake in judgment was made, surely we, who were men enough to go overseas and fight and lay down our comrades' lives, can stand and say to Mayor Denne and others: 'You are men, for you have acknowledged a mistake.'

R. E. Layfield: "The Mayor has been a man about it and I say, 'Now for a committee such as he suggested, and right after that, another committee of veterans to help him through with Peterborough's Old Home Week'!"

"Someone must have told Evans", persisted one in the gathering.

Mayor Denne: "I'd have found another place for the guns if I had been home but he is not to be blamed any more than I am."

Shakes Hands With Mayor

"As the one upon whom the honor of presiding over Monday night's meeting was thrust, I think that anything further said might only stir up bitterness" said Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman in rising to address the men for the first time during the evening. "Mayor Denne has admitted the mistake that we knew had been made on Monday. As Chairman of that meeting I would like to shake hands with Mayor Denne and call for three cheers for him."

The response of the men signalled their complete accord and the acceptance of the Mayor's explanation. Every man was on his feet for the familiar "Hip, Hip!"

Major G. G. Winterbottom: "I move that Mayor Denne's apology be accepted.

Resolution Moved.

Mr. Guerin: "On Armistice Day, they said that they would bring the veterans together again and I move a vote of thanks to Mayor Denne for doing so on this occasion." Captain John Dewart then read the resolution quoted above.

Father Costello: "I wonder if, now that you have heard the resolution, you would say where the guns are to be placed. I am in favor of placing one gun at each side of the War Memorial and one in front of it." (This suggestion brought forth the loudest applause of the evening excepting the cheers for Mayor Denne).

"I would be in favor of the Mayor seeing that the guns are painted and made in keeping with the park and I would also say that this has been a most wonderful meeting," said he, smiling. Speaking more seriously, the reverend gentleman said: "I don't know whether we used the proper method the other night or not. I would have been in favor of selecting a committee to wait on Mayor Denne. I'm sore, men, I'm sore—over Peterborough being adversely advertised to the four points of the Dominion."

Mayor Denne: "In fairness to Col. Hall and Captain Abraham, I don't think when I asked them about placing the guns on the Legion lawn that either of them gave it a serious thought. We should clear the air here and give them a clean sheet."

The man who had suggested that Colonel Hall and Captain Abraham take the platform here declared that it was not his idea that they should be criticized but that they be given an opportunity to speak for themselves.

Chairman Sutton: "There has been a motion that you hear these men. Are you satisfied not to?" "Yes," came the reply from the majority of the audience. But Colonel Hall was on his feet, and on attempting to speak, was hailed to the platform. "Mr. Chairman," said he, "the only matter that I am concerned with is the remark in the press regarding me. Some time ago, the Mayor spoke to me regarding our taking over of the guns from the city. I was not approached regarding a temporary storage place. It is apparent from what Mayor Denne has said that it was all a mistake and not a slight, so that it would be quite proper to let it stand at that. I had no responsibility for the removal of the guns."

Captain Abraham: "I think I made myself clear last Monday night. It was the same with me as with Colonel Hall. I was not approached regarding a temporary storage place and could not well have authorized their removal to the Legion lawn."

Seconds Resolution.

Captain Deyell, in seconding Captain Dewart's motion for the adoption of the resolution, stated that he did so, hoping that the matter might be healed without leaving a scar, and healed forever.

Comrade Guerin: "We want to be sure it is 'forever'."

Some discussion then took place as to the placing of the guns about the memorial, one man agreeing with Father Costello and another suggesting that possibly the third gun would be better placed at the rear of the memorial rather than in front of it. The Chaplain finally moved that this detail be left with the committee to be appointed to act with the City Council. This was seconded.

Alderman Cotton.

"I have a suggestion to make regarding the placing of the guns," said Alderman Cotton as he mounted the platform, midst hearty applause. "Your committee might be formed with the suggestion that it draw up a plan to be submitted to the veterans, showing the most suitable locations of the guns about the memorial. It would be better than guess-work and would leave no room for complaint."

Chairman Sutton—"Alderman Cotton has talked real sense. It would be wise to appoint a committee to report back to the veterans.

"This flurry has shown the necessity for a closer union among the veterans and the Legion should have a larger membership. I shall call upon Colonel Ackerman to tell you of how widespread the Legion has come to be—it has taken something to drive home to us the fact that in union there is strength."

Father Costello—"Do you think we should insist on the committee reporting back to the Legion, or should we place our confidence in the judgment of the committeemen?" The applause which greeted this latter suggestion showed that the committee would have a free hand.

Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman.

"I'm glad that that's that, and its over with," was the salutation of Lieut.-Col. Ackerman as he faced the men to tell them of the Canadian Legion, in which he is president of the Ontario Command, and a past president of the local branch. "I resigned from the city council some two months ago," he continued, "because my frequent absence from the city prohibited my giving aldermanic service. I felt that I was working for a better cause, going about the province, showing the ex-service men just what the Legion means, or can mean, to them. To-day, in the province of Ontario there are 138 branches, with a total membership of nearly 17,000 ex-service men. Better facilities for adjustment services have assisted the progress of the northern and western branches, and more and more, the Legion has shouldered responsibility for the best interests of the returned men.

"Some of you still have matters for adjustment, and not until you show the department that you know the service is there (through the Legion) will you benefit fully. And none of you feel that the ex-service men in the Legion should be asked to finance adjustment of problems which you will some day call upon the government to settle.

"In my travels during the past weeks, I have found that there remain hundreds of problems of returned men to be settled. Many of these cases have not been given attention because of that very fine fabric of pride and modesty that so many of the men possess. There is only one way for these matters to be given adequate and dignified attention-through the machinery of the Canadian Legion."

Colonel Ackerman went on to give details of the local branch and urged the men to get into the Legion for their own good, and for the good of their comrades. Speaking of the recent gun episode, he declared: "I am proud that I am a native of Peterborough despite it all, and am proud of the splendid manner in which the returned men have conducted themselves. If you could see the telegrame selves. If you could see the telegrams on the gentlemanly way in which you have handled the situation, you would be struck more than ever with the worth of the Legion. Our greater responsibility now is among ourselves, for we must obtain proper consideration from those who are sympathetic, but do not understand our problems. Within a short time, there will be stationed in this city an adjustment officer to take up the cases of war veterans, whether they be members of the Legion or not."

Mrs. Kate Morris

Chairman Sutton, at this juncture, read a communication from Mrs. Kate Morris. It appears elsewhere in this issue, and in speaking to it, Mrs. Morris declared that she did not wish to have small things or large, cause any misunderstanding. She had given service and assistance to the city and to the veterans and here congratulated the latter on an amicable ending to another episode in the life of Peterborough.

Chairman Sutton, in reply, paid tribute to the worth of Mrs. Morris as a citizen, and to the great value of the Ontario Ladies' auxiliary and other organizations with which she has been identified in war time and in days of peace.

Appointment of Committees

In accordance with suggestions made earlier in the meeting, and with discussion on the entire matter pretty well concluded, the appointment of committees was proceeded with. To co-operate with the city council to the end that it make available to the returned soldiers, knowledge of how the guns are to be placed, the following committee was selected:

Lieutenant-Colonel D. Lawrie
Comrade E. Hardy
Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon Hall
Captain J. A. Dewart
Major J. Winterbottom.

Father Paul Costello's motion that the committee be given power to act, here gained a seconder and was passed almost unanimously. Then followed the appointment of a committee to co-operate with the city council in putting across Peterborough's Old Home week. It will report to the legion as representing the returned men of the city. It comprises J. R. Heron, R. E. Layfild, E. Hardy, C. Rogers, F. Bradburn, F. Hart, J. Turnbull, B. Guerin, Dr. V. H. Sutton and T. D. Johnston.

ALLEGED RUM-RUNNER

ashore by a line from the government boat. The three members of the crew of the Coast Guard boat, he declared, left him beside the body of his dead companion, saying they were going for a doctor.

After waiting for an hour Sahr further stated, and fearing that he would bleed to death, he made his way to the farm of John Streblow, who took him to the office of Dr. William Falkner, of Youngstown. Dr. Falkner brought Sahr to the hospital here and notified the Niagara Falls police, who in turn informed the sheriff's office of the shooting.

Under-sheriff Irish said that when he reached the shore of the lake where the Bug was aground, Anderson's body was on the beach, and the three members of the Coast Guard crew, Boatswain's mate N. G. McCune and Surfmen Roy Rush and Chris Dew, were standing by. Their boat was at anchor a short distance from shore. Irish ordered Anderson's body removed to Ransomville.

Say Warning was Given.

The members of the Coast Guard, in their report to superiors, said that it was at their orders to seize the Bug, they hailed her off the south shore about five miles east of Fort Niagara at 2.30 a.m.. Two warning shots were fired, it was stated, when they saw the launch running without lights. Instead of stopping the Bug made directly for the Coast Guard boat. The Federal men said it was a deliberate attempt to ram them. As the Bug slipped by, missing their boat by inches, it was stated they fired a volley. Sahr, they declared, jumped from the boat as it was beached and ran away. Two of the Coast Guard crew remained beside Anderson's body while a third went in search of a doctor, it is claimed. This part of the Coast Guard report also contradicts Sahr's version of what happened immediately after the shooting.

TOWN SCHOOL

both in the staff and in the attendance of the school. There was also an increase in the number of county pupils. The results of the school had been highly satisfactory both from the reports of the examinations and from the report of the school inspector. This year, there were 207 pupils in attendance. Of these twenty-five from Peterborough County and three from Hastings County. The increased attendance this year would mean an increased county grant next year. The average salary for the principl of seven-teacher schools throughout the province was $3,190, Mr. Greig pointed out. If the present rate of increase was maintained, it would only be a matter of a very short time till this school would become an eight-teacher institution. He asked the board to discuss the matter and volunteered to answer any questions they might ask regarding the school. After giving some information regarding the increased attendance and the county grant, Mr. Greig retired to allow the trustees to arrive at their decision.

The discussion which followed brought out other business than the matter of the salary of the principal. But it was finally left in the hands of the internal committee to bring in a recommendation at the next regular meeting.

Resigns From Board.

Another unexpected turn of affairs came when Wesley Stephens, secretary of the Board, tendered his resignation. He explained that he had received orders to report to the office of his company in Montreal and could not say whether the move would be permanent or temporary. That his resignation was thus made necessary was a matter of regret to the board. But since Stephens would be in town for the Christmas holiday, it was arranged to allow him finish his year. If there was no assurance then of his return to town, his resignation would be accepted. For the present, it was left in abeyance.

After the minutes of the last regular meeting and the special meeting had been read and accepted, the chairman reported that he had received a satisfactory report from the Department of Public Health on the analysis of the water from the school well. Regarding the water supply in the High School, the principal, E. H. Greig, reported that it was warm on the upper floors of the building and this made it necessary to run considerable water before it was cool enough for drinking purposes. The caretaker had been instructed to insulate the pipes with asbestos material where they passed through the furnace room. It was not known whether this had been done. But it was believed that this would aid considerably in keeping the temperature of the water lower. Dr. Richardson also advised the trustees that the counties' grant which had been deferred for some time would be paid on December fifteenth.

Complaints Heard.

Complaints were aired regarding nails sticking up on the seats of the chairs in the primary rooms. These were damaging the clothes of the children, and the teachers had received complaints ffom the parents. The matter was left in the hands of the property committee.

The report of the Public School Inspector, which was the first communication to be read, stated that the water supply was not satisfactory. It also recommended that shelves be placed for the supplementary reading books. The school attendance was not satisfactory to the Inspector. Of the 437 pupils enrolled in the school, only 393 had been present. This set the number of absentees at 44. All the classes had been examined, and the Inspector had found the work of the staff highly efficient. He also commented on the work of the caretaker as good.

In a review of the report, the Board did not know exactly what was meant by the unsatisfactory water supply unless the Inspector was recommending that the schools be supplied with a drinking fountain system. In that case, the trustees did not consider that anything could be done at this time of year. The absentee report also caused them some concern, and they thought the truant officer should be advised of the situation, as outlined by the report.

A request for supplies from the teacher of the kindergarten was soon dealt with. The amount was $25.00, and the list was laid on the table. It was pointed out that the requisition should have been submitted to the principal of the school for recommendation or otherwise. J. C. Birmingham reported that the piano required tuning and a certain amount of repair was also indicated. The Board ordered this work done.

Insurance Premiums.

Three insurance premiums which fall due almost immediately were left in the hands of the Finance Committee for payment. A fourth will be discussed with the local representative of the company holding the policy and the policies generally will be checked over to make certain that none have lapsed, or for any reason are not in good standing. This duty was left in the hands of the Finance Committee, who will submit a report to the Board at the December session.

After passing the accounts, the Board adjourned.

Two Killed in Feudist Raids Forty Miles From Nanking.

MANY MADE HOMELESS.

PEKING, Nov. 30.—So lawless are conditions existing in the countryside even forty miles from the capital city of Nanking that last week six villages were looted and burned, 200 persons were killed and 1,200 were made homeless as the result of a feud between the natives of the district and immigrants from the north.

Two years ago, when the conditions north of the Yangtse River became intolerable, about 10,000 peasants immigrated to the south bank, bought or reclaimed waste land and founded villages of their own.

At first the more prosperous natives felt only contempt for the immigrants because they lived in mud-walled and straw-thatched huts instead of building houses with brick walls and tiled roofs.

But the newcomers were more diligent and more frugal than the natives; they prospered and in time the contempt changed to envy. Then some of the lawless elements of the natives raided the villages of the immigrants, who retaliated by organizing Little Sword Societies for self-protection. Then the natives organized Big Sword Societies.

In the meantime economic conditions became worse and the margin between comfort and poverty narrowed. Last year the taxes in this area averaged $6.00 an acre. This year they mounted by 20 per cent. and the crops were poor.

FINAL PLANS ARE MADE FOR BAZAAR

Committees Are Formed to Look After Big Event of Ladies' Aid.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, November 30. — A special meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the United Church was held at the home of Mrs. G. E. Burnham Tuesday afternoon, the vice-president, Mrs. H. W. Johnston, being in the chair.

The particular business to come before the meeting was the arrangements of final details for the bazaar to be held on Saturday, December 8. After considerable discussion, and in view of the fact that the vacant store at first decided upon as the place for holding the sale, might be rented by the date mentioned, the basement of the church was finally arranged for as the place where the event will be held. For convenience sake, the basement is the best place for the bazaar, as the kitchen is well furnished, and dishes, stoves, etc., are right at hand for the supper which will be served at 6 p.m.

There is also plenty of space for a rest room, so the older folks especially may have opportunity to visit with their friends while the sale is going on. Last year the basement was found the most suitable in every respect, and it is hoped that the same success will be met with again this season.

In Charge of Supper.

Mrs. Will Armstrong and Mrs. W. Brown will have charge of the supper, which is always a well-patronized feature of the bazaar. Each convenor of a committee will be responsible for the decorating of her particular booth, and articles for the sale are asked to be left at Mrs. G. E. Burnham's not later than Wednesday, Dec. 6th, so they may be marked in good time for the opening hour of 2.30 p. m. on Saturday. Any pieces of fancy work which cannot possibly be brought in before the day of the sale, will be marked by a committee appointed for that purpose: Mrs. H. W. Johnston, Mrs. Burnham, Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. G. Locke, Mrs. Garside, Miss Duncan and Miss Burnham are members of the committee mentioned.

The matter of paying the taxes on the parsonage, which has been done by the Aid for some time past, was brought up, and on motion it was decided that the treasurer, Miss Duncan, be authorized to pay this amount again this year.

A 'country store' will be a feature of the bazaar this year, as will also an apron counter, a table of fancy work, another of homemade baking, and a booth for homemade candy, with the fishpond as a special attraction for the kiddies.

The annual meeting takes place the first Tuesday in December, when the election of officers, and the reports of the year's work, will be the main business to be transacted. The place of meeting has not yet been decided upon, but will be in the pulpit announcement the previous Sunday.

ANNUAL BAZAAR.

Mission Circle of Hastings United Church Holds Successful Sale.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, November 30.—Saturday was a red letter day in the year's activities of the Mission Circle of Trinity United Church, it being the occaion of the annual bazaar and sale of home-made cooking. From early afternoon until nearly nine o'clock there was more than usual activity around the building formerly occupied by N. Malcove, Front Street. Throughout the afternoon the young ladies were kept busy selling goods to the many customers, and serving lunches to citizens of every religious body in the town.

There was a fish-pond for the children, which was well patronized, but at an early hour the "fish" had been all caught, and those children who came late were sorely disappointed. The proceeds of the event amounted to $80.00, and the young women are exceedingly grateful to all who patronized their bazaar and sale.

STROPPING IS ESSENTIAL TO THE PERFECT SHAVE

a Million barbers can't be WRONG!

Stropping a razor blade can't be foolish—surely a super-keen blade must be preferable

YOU must know that after the first shave the cutting edge of the finest blade that can be made is a row of tiny jagged hooks—until it is stropped.

Stropping smooths out and re-aligns these minute points. That's why barbers everywhere always strop before each shave. They've done it for 2,000 years.

And that's why shavers everywhere are eagerly adopting the famous new Valet AutoStrop Razor. Its automatic self-stropping device guarantees a perfect blade for each morning's shave. No trouble. A flip of the thumb—a few swift strokes—and the edge is as keen as can be. No need to remove blade to strop or clean it.

What's more, 21 years of research and the expenditure of a million dollars have made this famous razor the most perfect shaving device ever offered. The Million Dollar Valet AutoStrop Razor recently introduced is already a nation-wide sensation. Even if you thought that the original Valet AutoStrop Razor could not be improved, get one of the great new Million Dollar models today. Try it with the keen, new Valetite-processed blades. Judge its betterments for yourself.

You'll say this Million Dollar Razor is worth all it cost to make—yet it costs you so little that you can't afford to be without it.

MANY PROBLEMS BEFORE HOUSES

Beauharnois Power Developmen on St. Lawrence Expected to be Thorny Struggle.

PROVINCIAL RIGHTS

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—The development of Canada's wealth in water-powers is bringing with it perplexing problems so that the approaching sessions of not only the Dominion Parliament but the Provincial legislatures as well, will find Hydro developments holding an important place in the debates. The international character of some of the proposed developments, the different viewpoints of the provinces with respect to public ownership of Hydro utilities, the clash of big private interests, all combine to create one of the most complex situations with which the governing bodies have had to deal.

In the offing there is the proposal that Canada and the United States co-operate in developing a deep water way from the Great Lakes to the sea through the St. Lawrence River which would result in large amounts of electrical power being produced. In order to find out just where the Dominion Government stands should such a proposal be undertaken, a stated case has been argued before the Supreme Court of Canada to define the Federal and Provincial rights to such power development. Streams which are not navigable belong to the provinces, but those which are navigable are under the control of the Dominion. Whether this means that the Dominion owns all the water in such rivers or only the amount used for navigation, with the surplus which might be developed into electrical energy belonging to the provinces in which the river is located, is one of the questions for the Supreme Court, whose judgment has not yet been announced.

Gigantic Struggle.

The application of the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company to have its plans for the development of the power between Lake St. Francis and Lake St. Louis on the south side of the St. Lawrence River adopted by the Dominion departments of public works and railways and canals, it is claimed, has brought to the surface a gigantic struggle between this company and the Montreal light, heat and power interests which have power developments on the north side of the river at this point in the Cedar Rapid.

The Beauharnois Company has already obtained a charter from the Quebec Provincial Government and the plans it has submitted provide for a development of almost 2,000,000 horse-power. It is on the opposite side of the river from that proposed by engineers under the deep waterways scheme. The Department of Railways and Canals comes into the question because of the effect of the development on the canal system. Although the Province of Quebec is on both sides of the river at this point, and it is in the national section of the St. Lawrence, there is a possibility that in view of the international status of the St. Lawrence the International Joint Commission may also have a say as to whether the development will be permitted. If the Supreme Court holds that waterpower in navigable streams belongs to the Dominion, the situation will be further complicated.

Developed 476,000 H.P.

The Beauharnois is the biggest, but only one of the power problems to be faced. The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission is the backbone of public ownership in that province, whereas in Quebec, all the development is by private interests. The Canadian International Paper Company has developed 476,000 horsepower on the Gatineau River, Quebec, and is selling large quantities of this to the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario, thus public ownership and private ownership join hands. This company has 340,000 horsepower more to develop. Many smaller developments have been undertaken during the present year.

But it is not only in the central provinces of Ontario and Quebec that governing bodies have to wrestle with waterpower problems. In Manitoba the Seven Sisters Power deal is one of the major issues which that government has on its hands. In New Brunswick the development of Grand Falls is making excellent progress, but the proposal to harness the tides of the Bay of Fundy is bringing out much opposition from the fishing interests.

In British Columbia the Bridge River Company is working on a 100,000 horsepower development with an ultimate goal of half a million horsepower. The West Kootenay Company is also making extensive additions, while two other big projects are being worked out. Developments on the Bow River in Alberta will add 30,000 horsepower and plans are being made for harnessing the Churchill River in Saskatchewan.

At the end of last year Canada was producing 4,777,921 horsepower from its waterpowers. The Department of the Interior estimates that the close of this year will find the figures increased by 550,000 h.p.

BEAUTIFUL GIFT

British Resident in Tokio Give Prince and Bride Silver Candlesticks.

TOKIO, Nov. 30—(Canadian Press)—A beautiful wedding gift of eight antique English silver candlesticks from British residents of the Japanese empire has been presented to Prince Chichibu and his bride.

The canodlesticks were made in 1758-87. Six of them are intended for use on a moderate-sized dining table and a smaller pair of exactly the same design are intended to adorn a writing desk. Shape and ornamentation are exceedingly refined; the plan is oval and the decoration is confined to a charming radiated gadrooning (oval fluting) and narrow borders of a neat string-and-disc pattern.

PLANS FERTILIZING BIG ARID COUNTRY

Many Square Miles of Australia May Be Reclaimed for Sheep Raising.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Nov. 30.—Canadian Press).—Efforts which may lead to the use of many square miles of arid country in Central Australia were outlined by Professor T. G. B. Osborn in an address to the Royal Society here recently.

Many important sheep stations, Professor Osborn said, were in the dry western areas, but difficulties were met when over-grazing depleted the natural pasturage The study of salt bush flora had been taken up at the Koonamore vegetation reserve and field laboratory, about 100 miles west of Broken Hill. An area of nearly 1500 acres had been securely netted against stock and rabbits, and the laboratory placed in charge of a science graduate. The Council for Scientific and Industrial Research had made a grant towards the investigations, which Professor Osborn was directing. It was the object at Koonamore to study the growth and powers of regeneration of the salt bushes. The program of experiments and observations had been in operation for two and a half years, and already much promising data had accumulated.

PLASTER FALLS AT CABINET COUNCIL

Renovations Will Be Made To White House During Holiday.

WASHINGTON, November 30. — Emergency repairs are to be made to the office of President Coolidge and the Cabinet room while the President is away for the Thanksgiving Day holiday.

Bits of plaster fell in the Cabinet room at yesterday's meeting of that body and caused fear the walls are not so strong as they should be. As this room adjoins that occupied by the President, there is a suspicion on the part of engineers the same condition may exist there.

While the President and his official family are absent over the holidays a thorough examination will be made, and, if necessary, the rooms closed until they can be made thoroughly safe. This particular section of the executive offices, containing the offices of the President and his secretary and the Cabinet room, were built when Theodore Roosevelt was first the story of the men who occupied the White House as President.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN

Dear Neighbors,—

I have received so many letters in which the writers apologize for asking for helps that I just wish to make an explanation.

The helps offered on the Women's Page every day are prepared as part of my work for our page, and are gladly given to all. There is no obligation entailed, and no one need feel embarrassed by asking for several at once, if they have been missed.

The help offered this week is a splendid one, prepared by "Laura" of The Examiner staff, telling about games, tableaus, decorations and contests for Christmas parties. It is always a problem to know what to do after the meal—but this year "Laura" makes the program easy, with her two big pages of ideas.

If you desire also the four-page folder telling how to make Christmas gifts at home, all you need do is put a check mark opposite it on the coupon and it will be included—the same with any of the other helps.

I am always glad to receive letters from the neighbors, and really this is what makes the page worth-while. Make it a real neighborly circle of home builders by passing on your ideas.

Yours sincerely,

Marion

GERMANY OPPOSES FRENCH DEBT PLAN

Reich Will Insist On Naming Own Experts To Fix Reparations.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Germany will not agree to the latest French proposal to have the expert commission for settling the reparations problem appointed by the present Reparations Commission so far as the German representatives are concerned, it was learned yesterday at the Wilhelmstrasse. The Geneva agreement provided that the experts would be appointed by the governments concerned and the German Government will insist on that right regarding its own delegation, it was declared.

However, if France, England and the other countries desire to have their representatives on the new board chosen by the Gilbert Commission, Germany would have no material objection nor does she feel able to interfere, it was said. No question as to such procedure will be raised, mainly because Germany wishes no further delays, it was explained.

As for such method of appointing the commission as the French suggest, there is one major objection as the Wilhelmstrasse sees it, namely, that the Reparations Commission cannot ask the American Government for permission to have some of its Nationals serve on such a commission in an important post. What the Reich insists upon is that the German delegates be appointed by the German Government and that the Reparations Commission shall not influence the actions of such delegates as it appoints.

The Foreign Office again declared that Germany would oppose all efforts to roll the debt and reparations questions into one issue. Implications in the Belgian press that Germany was trying to get the debts massed and to have America made the creditor nation to Germany alone was declared here to be without the slightest foundation. It is considered bad taste for the Belgians to intimate that Germany's purpose in seeking to effect such a debt amalgamation is to be in a position later to beg off on some of her obligations on the ground that she is poor and America wealthy. Germany, it was said, has never countenanced for a minute joining the debt and reparations questions and is firm in her stand that the two must remain entirely separate.

CANADIAN HORSES OUTSTANDING

HEAVY SNOWFALL IN MIDDLE WEST

District East of Rocky Mountains Covered By White Blanket.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 30 (A.P.).—Under clearing skies, the Rocky Mountain region last night lay beneath a heavy Thanksgiving snow.

All of the states in the mountain territory—Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Colorado and New Mexico—were covered with a blanket of white as the storm, marked by unusually high temperatures, moved slowly eastward. Many cities and town in Colorado and Wyoming, where the snowfall was heaviest, were left with a covering of from one to two feet of snow.

The flakes which fell continuously for thirty-two hours were hailed with joy in the farming areas and the storm was passing without leaving any extended damage. Livestock was not injured. Automobile accidents were singularly few and transportation and communication systems were only slightly affected.

The snow ranged from a depth of ten inches at Denver to seventeen inches at Lander, Wyo., and reached much greater depth in the mountains. Pike's Peak got a twenty-two inch covering.

A certain tribe of Southern India, the Todas, regard their purveyors of milk as holy men.

Lettuce Soup.—Shred two medium size heads of lettuce and put into a large kettle over a low fire with three or four cups of water. Let simmer for an hour and strain off the liquid, mashing as much as desired of the cooked lettuce through the colander. If liquid does not equal three cupfuls, add hot water. Next, add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and three cups of whole milk. Return to the stove and heat to almost boiling point, seasoning with a little salt. When ready to serve add a generous sprinkling of chopped parsley and a teaspoonful of whipped cream to each plate. Thin strips of Melba toast may be used if desired.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Dwarfed Child.

Question: Mrs. H. J. writes: "Our little girl now six years old is very small for her age and backward. Two of the doctors who have examined her say she is a cretin and another says the trouble was rickets. Is there any cure for cretins and how may we be sure that this is the trouble?"

Answer: Cretinism is caused through improper functioning of certain ductless glands, while rickets comes from a lack of organic salts and minerals in the food supply of the child or adult. X-ray examination of the bones of your child will determine whether or not she has rickets but the diagnosis of cretinism is more difficult, and you should seek the services of an experienced diagnostician who through physical examination and various tests will be able to tell you the truth about your child's condition. It is possible to bring about at least a partial cure, but the glandular treatment usually advised for this trouble would be injurious to your little girl if she has rickets.

Ovarian Cysts.

Question: Mrs. O. H. W. asks: "Is there any method of curing a cyst of the ovary without an operation? I have been told that electrical treatments would be helpful."

Answer: Various kinds of cysts have been reduced by the patient using electrical treatments and living on a restricted diet—virtually a diet which allows the blood to absorb these false growths. These treatments should be tried first, and surgery resorted to if the treatments do not show good results after a short time.

EUCHRE PARTY.

Held Under Auspices of Catholic Women's League at Campbellford.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 30 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — The enchre party held in the Catholic Women's League room last night, under their auspices, was the largest they have ever held. Certainly it was the largest they have held to date.

There were twenty-nine tables of players and the evening generally was the most enjoyable of the series so far. After the playing ceased and while lunch was being served, the Rev. Father Phelan expressed the appreciation of the league for the excellent attendance, and hoped that each player had fully enjoyed the evening. He also presented the prizes. The men's prizes were won by V. Morrow for the number of games, and by Eli Brunelle for lone hands. Mrs. Malhoit won the lady's prize for games, and Mrs. Lee's score was the same as Mrs. P. Collins' for the lone hand honors. They followed the time-honored custom of cutting the cards, and the prize went to Mrs. Lee.

BREAK AT NANKING DISAPPOINTS TOKIO

Japan Blames Chinese Politicians For Halting Parley—Will Adopt Waiting Policy.

TOKIO, Nov. 30.—The breaking off of the Nanking parleys attributed here entirely to the Chinese, after preliminary conversations had given reason to believe that a settlement was within reach, is disappointing to Tokio. The Tanaka Government does not propose to take any special steps in the matter, but its watchful waiting policy will be resumed until the Chinese are prepared to reopen negotiations.

Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japanese Minister at Peking, will not return to Peking at once but will remain in Tokio a week or two before proceeding to Nanking.

The break-down is believed to be due to internal factors in the Kuomintang, the Nationalist Party, and not to insuperable differences between Nanking's and Tokio's terms. The Nationalist Left Wing is discontented with the present regime and is demanding a firmer policy. Agitation against Japanese troops in Tsinan, which the Nanking Government has encouraged and is unable to check, has become inconvenient and has to be reckoned with. The cessation of negotiations with Japan appears here to be largely a gesture for home consumption and hopes are felt on the Japanese side that negotiations may be resumed without excessive delay.

IN POLICE COURT

COBOURG, Nov. 30.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Charged with a breach of the L.C.A., Thomas Samson, Jr., was sentenced to two months imprisonment this afternoon by Magistrate Floyd in police court here, and Thomas Samson, Sr., was ordered to pay a fine of fifty dollars and costs, seventy-four dollars in all. The charge was for selling liquor contrary to the act and was an adjourned hearing from Tuesday, November 27th in Campbellford. On this date J. J. O'Brien of Peterborough, had been unable to be present since he was attending court in the city. He appeared yesterday afternoon for the defense. Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr conducted the prosecution.

A Frightful Time in Toyland

LAST NIGHT when it was dark an' spooky and even little Toyland folk were feeling just so drowsy they simply couldn't keep their big, heavy eyelids popped up one second longer—what do you thing happened? Well, Fluffy, an' Fido an' Spot (the three, wee woolly dogs), decided to give Nigger's tail one long, hard yank! And so up they crept on tiptoe. Creak, creak, creak went one of the boards in Toylands' floor....."Me-e-o-w," shrieked Nigger's shrill voice. Plunk! Plunk! Plunk! Fluffy, then Fido, then Spot, tumbled flat on their fat little backs on the floor—fainted with fright.

"GOSSIPER" TELLS HOW TO MAKE A GOOD GRATE FIRE

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

EAR MARION,

I was talking with one of the neighbors the other day, and you came up for discussion. We wondered just what kind of person you are—you seem to be all things to all people, ever ready with a quick answer for any question, however absurd or difficult, and withal very gentle and kind.

I suppose, however, that you prefer to keep your personality unknown. I think it would be awfully nice to meet you.

You have mentioned in your Whatnot doing your work in front of an open fire, and I just wondered if you ever tried using hard coal instead of the mussy cannel or soft coal? I just tried it the other night and it worked so well that I'm never going to use soft coal again. I used stove anthracite, and it gave a much better and lasting heat, without smoke or soot. If you have a fire of your own you should try it.

I wonder if anyone is going to decorate the streets for Christmas, as was done last year? They looked so pretty. Hasn't Christmas shopping started a lot earlier this year? I never remember so much Christmassy appearance in the stores before December 1st—and it seems so sensible to get the shopping done before the rush! But, goodness knows, I don't think I'll get around to mine before the usual time!

Your Christmas helps are just splendid. I got busy right away with some goods I had in the house, and I've nearly finished the holders "Another Friend' suggested. I plan, too, to make lamp shade as suggested by "Amler"—in fact, I have an old satin dress (pink) already cut out; and if my first shade (which I intend for myself) is a success I have a blue that I can cut up for a shade to give away. My daughter (15) is making several of the needle books told about by "C. G." One is already cut out in the shape of a duck, and it looks real cute. I haven't got Donnie (my son) enthused yet, but I want him to make a wastepaper basket on Mrs. M. F's. idea for dad's room.

I don't know, Marion, how we ever got along without you, and I surely hope you are with us for a long time to come.

I hope this letter doesn't take up too much of your time, with its gossip.

Your sincere friend,
Gossiper."

I thoroughly enjoyed reading your nice letter, "Gossiper," as I'm sure all the neighbors will, and I'm very glad to know the Christmas helps are so useful to you.

Yes, I do a lot of my work while sitting in front of a gratefire. I have a portable typewriter that sits on my knee, and I just seem to draw inspiration from the blaze. To-night I persuaded the keeper of the fire to try your idea, and it works well. One needs the damper wide open for quite a while to get the stove coal started, but the fire that results is worth the extra trouble. We had to use a little soft coal to make a "bed" for the anthracite. Your idea is well worth while.

I'm a very common kind of person, indeed; not at all the brilliant kind you have pictured. I can't talk for sour apples; I don't feel at all "gentle and kind" on occasions—such as when I get a letter like "Thinker's"!

I haven't heard yet about the decorating of the streets. Last year, you know, someone made a fuss about the waste of trees, which I think is absurd. In many places trees are grown specially for Christmas use, and those which made a fairyland of Peterborough streets last Christmas were taken from the bush up north where the thinning was really good.

I DO hope that you write another nice gossipy letter soon again.

"Dear Marion,

I like your idea of printing extracts from good books and poems, and I, for one, intend to follow them from day to day. Little pieces such as you are printing do not take long to read, and yet one can imagine that, stored up for 365 days, the knowledge will be well worth while.

Yours truly,
STUDENT."

I'm glad you like the "Daily Rea ding", but it wasn't my idea 'Student'. The suggestion came from a neighbor, "Mariana," to whom our thanks should be given.

"Dear Marion:

I enjoy reading your page very much and fully appreciate the effort it takes to make it a success.

I am fond of needlework, so am sending in to-day's coupon and a 2 cent stamp which I hope is sufficient to cover postage on those marked.

This is a very helpful service to the lady subscribers of The Examiner.

Thank you, and best wishes.

Sincerely yours,
C. I. E."

I hope you find the helps just what you want, "C. I. E." I am very glad to have position to give these helps, and you must feel free to call on me whenever you wish. If I can't tell what you wish to know, the neighbors never fail!

* * *

Dear Marion,

I sent you a short story a few days ago, and I haven't heard from you yet. When may I expect to learn whether it is any use or not?

Mrs. B. H."

In this case, "Mrs. B. H.", no news is good news. If your story hasn't been returned to you it means it is being set up in type and will be used. I must reserve any comment until the prizes are decided, you know!

"Dear Marion:

I enjoy reading your page very much and also like your recipes and advice. I am enclosing a coupon for helps and will thank you in advance.

With best of luck to your page,

Yours sincerely,
Lover of the Farm."

Thanks, "Lover of the Farm," for your good opinion of our page. The helps have been sent you.

FLOATING DISHES

New sponge soap dishes are on the market, colorful and inexpensive. They float about, holding the soap aloft.

LOWER RACKS

Book racks, closet poles and so on should be made low enough for children to put things away by themselves.

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion,

I noticed someone was asking about how to remove marks from a polished table, caused by hot dishes. I use paraffin, rubbing it well in and polishing it with a soft cloth. If the spot is bad, it may be necessary to do this for several days.

Yours faithfully,
I. D."

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

Fortunate is the young mother who knows how to tell stories to her children as well as read them—and fortunate too is the child whose mother counts among her other varied talents this of spinning a good yarn. My own experience has been that children always like the stories that are told without the help of a book, doubtless because so often book stories are read in a mechanical tone of voice that does not arouse the child's interest and that is sometimes difficult to follow.

One young mother of my acquaintance who is an adept at the telling of children's stories tells me that because of this ability she is able to enjoy much more repose than would otherwise be possible.

"You see you can tell a story while you are lying down or lounging in a comfortable chair, so I always manage to combine the children's story hours with a little time for physical relaxation for myself. And when Bobby had the measles," she continued, "and couldn't sleep at night and wanted to have a story I could lie beside him in the dark and spin a yarn while physically I was perfectly comfortable. And because there was no light in the room Bobby would soon be asleep."

There are times when nothing works so well to quiet down a little family of lively children as a story, and the mother who can distract her children in this way while she continues her housewifely tasks has a decided advantage over the mother who has never mastered the story-telling art.

One's stories need not, of course, be original. It is quite possible in ten or fifteen minutes spent with some good story book to acquire the foundations for a number of good tales that may be used later on when occasion comes.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

Apparently this column is as much appreciated by the neighbors as the Whatnot was a week after we started it last June. I am specially pleased because the "Daily Reading" column arose out of a suggestion by a neighbor, "Mariana," last week. I have several suggestions for selections for next week, sent in by other neighbors, and I want every reader of our page to feel free to give ideas along this line.

NOVEMBER 30, 1928.

This is the natal day of Samuel Langhorne Clemens (Mark Twain), born November 30, 1835. Everyone knows Mark Twain and his works: "Innocents Abroad," "Roughing It," "The Gilded Age," "Adventures of Tom Sawyer," "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" and a dozen others that I can't recall. The following extract is from "The Jumping Frog." The writer had called on garrulous old Simon Wheeler to inquire after a friend's friend, Leonida W. Smiley, and the inquiry called to Simon's memory a certain JIM Smiley, about whom he persisted in telling the caller.

"Well, this yer Smiley had rat terriers, and chicken cocks, and tomcats, and all them kind of things, till you couldn't rest, and you couldn't fetch nothing for him to bet on but he'd match you. He ketched a frog one day, and took him home, and said he calc'lated to edercate him; and so he never done nothing for three months but set in his back yeard and learn that frog to jump. And you bet he DID learn him, too. He'd give him a little punch behind, and the next minute you'd see that frog whirling in the air like a doughnut—see him turn one summerset, or maybe a couple, if he got a good start, and come down flat-footed and all right, like a cat. . . Well, I've seen him set Dan'l Webster down here on this floor—Dan'l Webster was the name of the frog—and sing out, "Flies, Dan'l, flies!" and, quicker'n you could wink, he'd spring straight up, and snake a fly off'n the counter there, and flop down on the floor again as solid as a gob of mud, and fall to scratching the side of his head with his hind foot as indifferent as if he hadn't no idea he'd been doin' any more'n any frog might do. And when it came to fair and square jumping on a dead level, he could get over more ground at one straddle than any animal of his breed you ever see. Jumping on a dead level was his strong suit, you understand; and when it came to that, Smiley would ante up money on him as long as he had a red.

Well, Smiley kept the little beast in a lattice box, and he used to fetch him down town sometimes and lay for a bet. One day a feller—a stranger in the camp, he was—come across him with his box, and says:—

"What might it be that you've got in the box?"

And Smiley says, sorter indifferent like, "It might be a parrot, or it might be a canary, maybe; but it ain't: it's only just a frog."

And the feller took it, and looked at it careful, and turned it round this way and that, and says, "H'm! so 'tis. Well, what's HE good for?"

"Well," Smiley says, easy and careless, "he's good enough for one thing, I should judge: he can outjump any frog in Calaveras County."

The feller took the box again, and took another long, particular look, and gave it back to Smiley, and says, very deliberate, "Well, I don't see no p'ints about that frog that's any better'n any other frog."

"Maybe you don't," Smiley says. "Maybe you understand frogs, and maybe you don't understand 'em; maybe you've had experience, and maybe you ain't,—only a amature, as it were. Anyways, I've got MY opinion, and I'll risk forty dollars that he can outjump any frog in Calaveras County.

And the feller studied a minute, and then says, kinder sad like, "Well, I'm only a stranger here, and I ain't got no frog; but if I had a frog I'd bet you."

And then Smiley says, "That's all right: if you'll hold my box a minute, I'll go and get you a frog." And so the feller took the box, and put up his forty dollars along with Smiley's, and set down to wait.

So he set there a good while, thinking and thinking to himself, and then he got the frog out and prised open his mouth and took a teaspoon and filled him full of quail shot—filled him pretty near up to his chin,—and set him down on the floor. Smiley he went to the swamp and slopped around in the mud for a long time, and finally he ketched a frog, and fetched him in, and give his to this feller, and says:—

"Now, if you're ready, set him alongside of Dan'l, with his fore paws just even with Dan'l, and I'll give the word." Then he says, "One,—two,—three,—jump!" and him and the feller touched up the frogs from behind, and the new frog hopped off, but Dan'l gave a heave, and histed up his shoulders,—so—like a Frenchman, but it wa'n't no use; he couldn't budge; he was planted as solid as an anvil, and he couldn't no more stir than if he was anchored out. Smiley was a good deal surprised, and he was disgusted, too, but he didn't have no idea what the matter was, of course.

The feller took the money and started away; and when he was going out the door he sorter jerked his thumb over his shoulder—this way—at Dan'l, and says again, very deliberate, "Well, I don't see no p'ints about that frog that's any better'n any other frog."

Smiley he stood scratching his head and looking down at Dan'l a long time, and at last he says: "I wonder if there ain't something the matter with him: he 'pears to look mighty baggy, somehow." And he ketched Dan'l by the nape of the neck, and lifted him up, and says, "Why, blame my cats, if he don't weigh five pound!" and turned him upside down, and out dropped a double handful of shot. And then he see how it was, and he was the maddest man—he set the frog down and took out after that feller, but he never ketched him.

DATE CAKE

(Contributed by F. M., East Emily.)

1-3 cup soft butter
1 1-3 cups brown sugar
2 eggs
½ cup sweet milk
1¾ cups flour
1 teaspoon cassia, a little nutmeg
½ lb. dates, stoned and chopped
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
Beat all together for three minutes; do not beat ingredients separately as it will not be a success.

STEAMED PUDDING

(Contributed by Mrs. R., Cavan.)

¾ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup sweet milk
½ cup fruit juice (of any fruit)
1½ cups flour.
1 teaspoon soda.

After all is well beaten steam 1½ hours. A couple of spoons of orange marmalade improved the flavor. Serve with carmel sauce.

STICKING DOORS

Doors and drawers that stick are a nuisance. If you rub the offending article with soap or bees-wax the annoyance will cease.

High above the earth the air becomes so thin that sound waves cannot travel.

That Body of Yours

THE MEDICINE MAN

When we used to read about the strange customs of savages, particularly about the "medicine man" of the tribe, we were thankful indeed that we were in a land where such "foolishness" did not exist.

And yet it is only in these last few years that we are beginning to learn that some of this foolishness of the medicine man of the tribe must have had some sound reasons underneath, which had been handed down for perhaps centuries.

What the sun did for some of these natives, we in this twentieth century are only beginning to realize.

And when we used to read of how these medicine men, or witch doctors, made up medicine from the different organs of the animals that were slain, it made us smile.

And yet, what is happening today?

Our largest drug manufacturers have a corps of men whose work is to carefully remove glands and other organs from slain animals, cattle, sheep, pigs, horses and other animals, and from them make up some of the most valuable and important products in use in medicine today. Think for a moment about insulin, which actually cures in young people that formerly incurable disease, diabetes.

This is secured from the pancreas or gland that secretes or manufactures one of the digestive juices in the animal.

Then the thyroid gland in the neck, which has the power of regulating the speed of certain functions of the body. It is being used for a great many purposes by physicians these days.

The juice from two little glands, situated one on top of each kidney, is being used to slow and strengthen the heart beat where necessary. A few drops of this injected into a heart that has stopped beating has restored many folks, apparently dead.

A tiny little gland in the base of the skull manufactures a juice that is used daily by physicians for emergency cases.

You know how the liver and liver extracts are being used to cure pernicious anaemia and to lower high blood pressure.

In fact, as we think of all these ductless glands and realize that we are only now beginning to realize something of their value to health and life itself, we cannot afford to smile at the medicine man of the savages.

ASPIRIN BRACES UP CUT FLOWERS.

Experiments have confirmed the fact that cut flowers may be prevented from fading by giving them an aspirin tablet. The experiments were conducted with chrysanthemums. The treated blooms outlasted the untreated by three days. Flowers which were badly wilted were given fresh water and an aspirin tablet. They revived in two hours, looking as fresh as they did when picked. The leaves, however, remained wilted. The aspirin acts as an antiseptic, interfering with the enzyme which causes the clogging of the stem at its cut surface.

A LITTLE THING LIKE CLOTHES

By JESSIE DOUGLAS

"That," said Tom Winship, knocking the ash from his cigarette, "is the primmest girl in this town."

They both looked after the retreating figure of Daisy Miller, dressed so neatly in her blue serge, with a black hat that was meant to cover, not adorn, the red-brown hair.

"If you give me a month I could have that girl so dead in love with me that any one could see it!" Arthur Baldwin offered.

"You've lost already, and I'll put ten on it, Art."

Daisy Miller's heart beat very fast as she washed the dinner dishes. She had really not seen anything of Arthur Baldwin since they were in high school together; she had thought less of him, and yet tonight he had telephoned to ask if he could come to see her.

"I don't see why he should want to see me," she thought, "I can't understand—" and yet her heart fluttered strangely and she felt a new glow in the dullness of her gray days and a new romance in her life of monotony.

In her own room she surveyed her wardrobe critically. The gray challis was beyond redemption as her best crepe needed a patch under the arm; the only thing left was what she had on, the blue serge dress that had never been anything but useful.

Again she felt that strange new excitement when the bell wheezed and she opened the door to Arthur Baldwin. He stood a moment in the hall under the tiny blue flame of gas, retaining her hand.

"I am glad to see you, Daisy!" he said, scrutinizing her white face.

There was an awkward silence for a moment after he had seated himself in the comfortable living room in the big chair across from Mr. Miller.

"How're you getting on with your law?" old Mr. Miller gasped.

Arthur Baldwin found himself in the clutches of that inveterate old talker, and he listened to drowsy reminiscences of the 40's, while he fidgeted in hischair.

When at last he said good night he admitted it was one of the dullest evenings he had ever spent and quite unsuccessful except for his last remark to Daisy.

"You certainly have wonderful hair, Daisy." he said as he took her hand under the whimpering gas flame in the hall.

He smirked to himself as he remembered the slow, almost painful flush that touched her cheeks.

"I'm old enough to know better," Daisy thought next morning as she scanned the paper; but a new infection in the air had caught her and she explained to her father briefly that shewas going to the city.

It must have been the hair that did it, but Daisy was unable to resist a hat that looked altogether alluring in one of the smartest shops on Fifth Avenue.

But the hat made her suit look even older than ever; and Daisy plunged. She gasped when she saw herself in the new suit with its long, slim lines and its delicious golden brown color; with the bewitching hat. But how shabby her shoes looked.

As a very last touch she bought herself a new pair.

"It'll take me years to save it all again," Daisy thought shamefacedly. "All the money that I put by for a rainy day!"

She settled herself down by the window in the train, feeling in her new clothes that she was too noticeable. She prayed that she would meet no one she knew. She moved over to the very margin of her seat as a big man sat down beside her; he looked at her casually and then cried, "Why, if it isn't Daisy Miller!"

"Mr. Armstrong!"

"I used to be Bill when we were in school together," he laughed.

Daisy looked up at him: perhaps it was the new hat, perhaps it was the consciousness of that smart suit, yet there was a charm about that shy, bird-like glance that touched William Armstrong.

"Just come back to civilization," he explained. "I'm going to surprise my people. It's a long run from Arizona to New York!"

"How wonderful!" Daisy exclaimed softly. "I've always thought that was about the most interesting place to live—" then for some unaccountable reason she blushed.

"Not for your kind!" Armstrong said gruffly.

He touched tentatively the rich fur on her cuff.

"Oh, this!" said Daisy, with disdain. "As if clothes matter!"

"When a girl's as pretty as you are, Daisy, I guess you're right!" he said heartily.

"I'd like to drop in and talk with you about God's country!" he said as he wrung her hand in farewell.

That was why two days later Daisy Miller, answering the telephone, said softly:

"I'm sorry, Mr. Baldwin, but I have another engagement tonight!"

"Congratulations!" Tom Winship cried, holding out his hand to his betting partner. "When it comes to a lady killer, Art, I must admit you never fail." He pointed a jeering finger to the notice in the evening paper.

"The engagement of Miss Daisy Miller is announced to Mr. William Armstrong, of Tucson, Ariz.

Would Have Men Wear Stockings Used By Wives

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—A method of saving the cost of men's socks, by making over their wives' old ones was suggested to the members of the women's institutes of the Central Ontario section by Mrs. Walter Ross of Embro, convener of the household economic committee, in her report at the annual convention meeting in Hygeia auditorium yesterday.

It was a man who gave the unique recipe to Mrs. Ross. "He said that he never had to buy any socks because his wife always wore her stockings out heel and toe; then she cut them off just above the ankles and made him socks from the stocking tops—"very comfortable socks, too," the speaker concluded.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Bisurated Magnesia to Overcme Trouble Caused by Acid Indigestion

Gas in the stomach accompanied by a full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessiv hydrochloric acid in th stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful or four tablets in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there si no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never in liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Singing as an exercise is a great benefit to anyone suffering from chest or throat weakness.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Shoe-string shoulder straps sounds very much like the opening line of one of those alliterative young twisters that we found so amusing a year or so ago. And I assure you that I'd a great deal rather write about them than talk about them.

No, they are not really made of shoe strings—only they are very narrow and string like, sometimes so narrow that a single one could not be trusted, and hence two or three are used instead of one.

Quite the most surprising effect in shoulder straps is produced by those made of narrow flesh-colored satin ribbon which at a distance looks amazingly like nothing at all.

In general there is a tendency to break away from the perfectly straight strap type of shoulder support. Frequently this shoulder section is cut in one with the rest of the frock and even more frequently the strap or the bodice where it is joined is shaped so that there is a curving line for the entire decolletage.

Shoulder straps, you have doubtless observed, are set a little further in toward the neck, thereby adding to their security. That and the continued trick of cutting evening gowns rather low under the arms gives to the evening bodice a degree of comfort and wearableness that was not known when there was danger of bodices slipping off the shoulders, and when it was considered rather shocking to have even a bare fraction of an inch show beneath the arm. Now we find it much more comfortable and convenient to allow an inch or two of bareness beneath the arms, and evening bodices fit much more comfortably in consequence.

HATS KING WORE ARE ON EXHIBIT

Edward VII. Had Headgear for Every Occasion—Shown in Canada.

MONTREAL, Quebec, November 30. —Canadian Press. — A collection of historic hats, the majority of which were worn by the late King Edward VII., and which are now on display here, will presently travel across Canada, being exhibited at various points on the way, and on its return from Vancouver, will once again be shown in Montreal.

Part of a collection owned by Henry Heath, Ltd., of London, these hats have never before been exhibited in Canada, an dthey are attracting much attention from the passers by. The most interesting exhibit is a black silk hat worn by the late king in 1909, when amid the plaudits of the crowd he led his victorious "Minoru" into the winners' ring at Epsom.

A hat more characteristic of the popular monarch is a light grey topper, inside which the royal monogram "E.R." ma, be seen. There is also a light brown bowler and a dark brown one, both worn by King Edward. The other two hats in the collection were worn by the late Sir Henry Irving on the stage of the Lyceum Theatre in London. One, a dark brown silk, in shape something like the modern opera hat, but with a curved brim and a bow in the front, he wore during the first performance of "The Bells," November 25, 1871, when playing the role of "Mathias," he became famous overnight. The other is a silk, a little more pointed in the crown and of an unusual shade o fsilver brown, which he wore in the part of Robert Landry in "The Dead Heart," which opened at the Lyceum in September, 1839.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

DID you ever stop to think of the absurdities in the remuneration we give certain people, and in the recognition we accord them? It seems to me this is a fruitful and for women's work; a place in the scheme of things where we may do some good.

* * *

The idea came to me last week when I read what Wilson Macdonald told the Kiwanians, and when I heard from one of the girls what he had to say at the Collegiate.

* * *

Many will disagree with Macdonald's pronounced antipathy to the popular poets, whose productions he terms "doggerel." It may be an admission of a low literary standard, but I must say that I get a lot of entertainment out of reading Edgar Guest and Douglas Malloch.

* * *

And after all, should one be a stickler for form? In the newspaper world we desire above all things to have a reporter tell the story, the whole story—and quit. He may split infinitives, even, so long as he writes all there is of interest in the item.

* * *

Why should we be purists in our poetry, if we can find relaxation and entertainment in something not quite perfect?

* * *

But I wander from my topic. What I wish to say is that in spite of Macdonald's antagonism to all that is not perfect in poetry, we must admit the force of his argument that Canadians do not appreciate the genius of their own country.

* * *

And to be more particular, we in Peterborough do not half appreciate the writers of poetry and the artists in our midst. There was, to use Mr. Macdonald's illustration, Miss Crawford, who lived for some time on Brock street, and while there wrote poetry that was perfection itself.

* * *

What a struggle it was for her! Her book of poems did not sell until after her death. The publishers say scarcely thirty copies of the first issue were sold!

* * *

I asked in a Peterborough book store for a book by Isabella Crawford, and found the salesman had never heard of her!

Then there was James McCarroll, who was editor of the Chronicle in Peterborough in 1845, and published a collection of poems in 1889.

* * *

How many have heard of him or his work? Try to find a copy of "Madeline" in a store to-day.

* * *

And yet there was real humanity and a kindly spirit in his work that sh ould have endeared him for all time, especially to those with whom he worked. Read this, from "The Waif":

"Oh! poor little barefooted, hollow-cheeked thing,
How early dost thou and thy destiny meet!
Neither bright bud nor blossom thou comest in spring,
But a windfall of childhood struck down at our feet.

"Then come to my arms, meanly clad as thou art,
Till the anguish that wastes thee for once is beguiled;
Lay thy head on my breast, with thine ear to my heart,
Till it rocks thee to sleep my poor barefooted child."

I have heard learned lecturers rhapsodize to Peterborough audiences about poetry not half so alluring as this—and yet THIS man lived with us, worked with us, and we know him not!

* * *

And how about Mrs. Traill, who wrote "Lost in the Backwoods" and "Pictures of Life and Scenery in the Woods of Canada"? Ten miles from Peterborough, she settled in the bush and wrote of things that touched her life in a way that brought her government recognition.

* * *

What do we know of this talented lady, who at thirty years of age was one of the district's pioneers, and for sixty-seven years lived at our very door?

How much do we appreciate the work of Mrs. Moodie, of the same family, who started writing for the press at fifteen years of age, came to the shores of Rice Lake in 1833, and there wrote several stories that entitle her to rank with the real pioneers of Canadian literature?

There is a delightful little book of verse by Emily Marguerite Marshall, centred about the "Legend of Lovesick Lake," that, so to say, comes right into our back-yard and invites us to enjoy it.

* * *

There is a gifted executive in the city who writes lovely little poems for his own enjoyment—some future generation will have them gathered into a book and will rhapsodize over them.

* * *

And now, having wandered twice from my topic, I will come back to it once again. All of these poets and writers of the past went unrecognized, and many of them went hungry because their work was unappreciated. Yet an entertainer with appearances and a thin voice is paid $1,050 a week for singing in a musical show that she isn't quite as bad a little girl as people say.

* * *

A slip of a girl does religion in a popular way and gathers in money by the shovel ful—but right around Peterborough are ministers of the gospel who are of genuine help in their communities and yet often wonder how to make ends meet.

* * *

It isn't right that these genuinely talented people should go unrecognized that these servants of the people should be passed over for more sensational, but less real, workers. It is a little late to think, now, of the Peterborough writers whom I have named. We cannot help THEM by buying their works, but we can help OURSELVES by reading them.

* * *

And we can take the suggestion made by Mr. Wearing at Kiwanis Club—give, this Christmas, either to ourselves or to someone else, a copy of a book by a Canadian writer.

* * *

And we women can help, in a really big way, by considering more the splendid people we have in this Canada of ours, and less the flashing stars of other lands.

* * *

Mr. Macdonald and I cannot agree on his dictum that in order to be worth reading poetry must be perfect, but we most certainly do agree in saying that Canadians should support their own fine writers.

* * *

If you haven't quite planned your Christmas party, there is offered this week the outline of games, menus, etc., prepared by Laura, who writes the "Entertaining" articles every Saturday.

* * *

This help is, of course, free for the asking.

DAISY-MAY - By FANNIE HURST

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Lummox", "Humoresque"

THERE must have been hundreds of replicas of Daisy-May, as she stepped out of her slit of a room in a theatrical boarding-house in West Forty-fifth Street and stood for a moment, at the top of the narrow stoop, before she descended into the eleven o'clock swirl of that part of Broadway known as the "Rialto".

The Daisy-Mays are a gallant army. If they have tears to shed, and alas, they all too often have, they shed them in the narrow privacy of their lodgings.

No Daisy-May ever ventures into the glittering stream of theatrical Broadway without her best foot forward; her very best foot forward. A foot that must be expensively, faultlessly clad in shoes and stockings that almost invariably cost more than her week's board and lodging.

If you are a Daisy-May, you are the world's plaything. Your tears, your aches, your discouragements, your sorrows are your very own private affairs. You must be lithe of limb and ready with smile.

Particularly the Daisy-May in question, who had been in New York three months where she came from Centralia in some Middle West State or other, was both lithe of limb and ready with smile. She had been class-poet of her graduating class and the leading-lady of her dramatic society.

All of Centralia knew and admired and loved Daisy-May, who was one of those girls advised by her friends to go on the stage. One of those girls swept by the platitudes of her environment out of surroundings that fitted her like a glove, into the maelstrom for which she was wholly unfitted by temperament and preference.

It was the old story of the girl forfeiting a legitimate passion for the man she loved and reaching out arms to an adventure that was little more than mirage.

Left alone, free of the artificial stimulus of the admiration of her friends; free of the lure of the motion-picture magazine and the theatrical twaddle of her dramatic-club friends, Daisy-May would have settled down into the normal routine of wife-and-motherhood, with a young fellow named Glenn Brown who clerked in his father's shoe-store in Centralia.

But strange, riotous ambitions found their way into Daisy May's bobbed, yellow head. At the price of an angry and bitter break with Glenn Brown, who swore that if she went their relationship would end with finality, Daisy-May went to New York with a capital of one hundred and seventy-five dollars and a letter to Ziegfeld from a cousin of hers who had known a girl in the "Follies".

The one hundred and seventy-five dollars had been exhausted in two months. How Daisy-May managed to live from week-to-week, to be prettily shod, to be bravely bedecked, is one of those secrets that the city hides carkingly unto herself. With what deprivation, with what manipulation, with what fear and even despair Daisy-May began to face her days, she wore debonairly behind the smile that she daily presented to the theatrical booking-office on Broadway.

It was simply no use.

In a garden of girls, many of them more beautiful and countless of them as beautiful as Daisy-May, she was only one more blossom to get trampled under foot. There was nothing about Daisy-May to make her interesting to her profession. Casual prettiness, somehow, just could not accomplish for her what she had set out to do, and Daisy-May was too naive, too unsophisticated, too simple-minded to even consider any of the other avenues that might lead to her success.

The shocking truth is that most of the time, this nicely-clad, brightly-smiling, courageous little seeker was hungry. Lodgings were more of a terror than a solace; of night after night of fairly oozing into the house in hope of escaping the predatory, demanding palms of landladies demanding their due.

Daisy-May, with a nostalgia that was like a fever consuming her, wanted home. Her frail little body was tired. Her gallant little heart was tired. Sometimes, seated in the slit-of-room, it seemed to her almost unthinkable that another horrible day could pass over her head without her living again old scenes that were so heart-hurtingly dear to her. Only Daisy-May knew that there was no returning. The widowed aunt and five children with whom she had made her home in Centralia, expected great things of Daisy-May. So did her friends. To have returned would have been an admission of defeat unendurable to her pride.

And then there was Glenn. There was never a moment that the yearning for this boy was out of her heart. It seemed to her sometimes, when she lay in the dark alone in her half-room, that the terrific pull of her desire must bring him to her side. He had such blue, bright eyes set in a pair of eyebrows shaped like Mercury's wings. They used to pop out in the dark and smile upon her and break her heart. She thought of him all the time with a hunger that was more poignant even than her physical hunger for food.

Fearing the irate landlady and oppressed with a cold on her chest that was bothersome, Daisy-May kept to her room two successive days, not venturing out into the sham battle of Broadway.

Those two days were the breaking down of her morale. The third day, Daisy-May, in a tired little way, knew that there was no going out again for her. Hope was gone.

It was the old, the moss-grown, the rather monotonous newspaper paragraph of the gas turned on and the bit of rubber hose.

There was something sweetly pleasant about it to Daisy-May, as she inhaled. A relaxed, floating sensation enclosed her.

Just as that sensation was carrying her far out into the stream, a young man with blue eyes and Mercury's wings for eyebrows, was ringing the bell at her front door.

FANNIE HURST

There was never a moment that the yearning for Glenn was out of Daisy-May's heart. It seemed to her that the terrific pull of her desire must bring him to her side.

PARISH HALL IS CENTRE OF BAZAAR

St. John's Women Hold a Most Successful Sale of Articles.

A "Touch and Take" table provided one of the centres of amusement for the patrons of the sale conducted by the Church Women's Association of St. John's Church, yesterday afternoon and evening. This was located at the entrance, with gaily covered parcels that contained articles of a sort to interest and entertain their buyers.

The sale was very successful and the large downstair rooms of the parish hall were filled with a crowd of women who appeared to be enjoying the pleasant, friendly atmosphere in the enclosure which was decorated with little Christmas trees and poinsettias. The ladies' parlor was used for a pretty tea room and a profusion of lights with a warm grate fire, added to the attraction of the arrangement of the little tables and the serving table where Mrs. J. A. Aylmer poured tea. This table was charming with a Cluny lace cloth, silver basket of bright pink baby 'mums and tall pink candles in low silver holders.

Mrs. T. W. H. Young, president of the C.W.A., welcomed the guests. Mrs. W. Hall, Mrs. H. W. Morphet and Mrs. J. Mills had charge of the afternoon tea, assisted by Mrs. E. W. Borbridge, Mrs. P. Bond and Mrs. L. W. Scott.

The "Touch and Take" table, with the Christmas tree on which hung mysterious small parcels, and a candy table where dainty holders held home-made sweetmeats, were in charge of Mrs. J. Comstock, assisted by Mrs. B. D. Hall, Mrs. G. M. Lyons, Mrs. A. Gibson, Mrs. J. J. Howden and Miss H. Hugel.

A sale of delicious home-made cooking was supervised by Mrs. H. W. Darcy and Mrs. J. Chadwick, assisted by Mrs. J. H. McClellan and Mrs. C. D. Hewett.

Mrs. H. Bender had the sale of books and convenors of a large table strewn with pretty articles in fancy and plain sewing were Mrs. H. A. Morrow and Mrs. A. H. Stratton, assisted by Mrs. A. L. Amys, Mrs. W. J. Kent, Mrs. Chas. L. Brewer and Miss Margaret English.

ANCIENT ABBEY TO HAVE A SACRISTY

Model of Proposed Building Being Erected Beside the Historic Fane.

LONDON, England, November 30. — (Canadian Press.)—A full sized model of proposed new Sacristy at Westminster Abbey which is to meet a long felt need in providing a common meeting place at the Abbey such as the vestries and sacristies provide in other cathedrals, is now being erected in the corner formed by the north wall of the abbey and the east wall of the north transept. The Abbey has no such place of accommodation now. Even the Chapter House, it is pointed out, is not available as it is under the control not of the Abbey but of the Houses of Parliament. The Abbey has been increasingly used in recent years for great national acts of worship and religious gatherings, and there is a need of a suitable chamber where the leading dignitaries can assemble on such occasions and robe.

There is another important consideration. The Abbey possesses many treasures in the form of vestments of great antiquity and delicate workmanship, besides a collection of gold and silver plate and costly furniture and ornaments. It has been reported by experts that unless more adequate means are found for housing the ancient vestments which are delicate fabrics heavy with embroidery, the present arrangement which requires them to be folded up and kept in presses, boxes and drawers in different parts of the Abbey will eventually cause them to be injured and destroyed.

In external appearance the new sacristy is likely to resemble the Jerusalem Chamber. While conforming with the Abbey in line, it will not be Gothic in style, as it has been thought desirable to avoid the appearance of copying the old building, and because Gothic windows would not allow of sufficient lighting in what the Dean and Chapter desire to be a well-lighted room. Besides being a robing room and a place for the storage of vestments, the sacristy will be a museum in which the historical treasures of the Abbey wil lbe kept and where the public will be able to see them.

APPEAL MADE TO SAVE STONEHENGE

National Trust To Preserve Monument By Buying Surrounding Land.

LONDON, England, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—Stonehenge is the object of a good deal of anxiety on the part of local historians and others interested in ancient monuments because of the possibility of part of the surrounding land being taken for development purposes if the option secured thereon is allowed to expire the limit date being December 31, 1928. In August, 1927, The Times published a letter signed by Premier Stanley Baldwin, appealing for $175,000 for the purchase of land surrounding Stonehenge in order to give back to the monument, and preserve forever, its ancient surroundings of nature and solitude.

In response to that appeal about $100,000 has so far been received by the Stonehenge committee and paid to the National Trust, in whse hands it is proposed to vest the property. The first and second plots included in the scheme have been purchased, and some progress—delayed much longer than we hoped by legal difficulties—has been made in removing the unsightly buildings erected during the war. For the third plot, which is essential to the completion of the scheme, the price agreed upon is $80,000, towards which about $25,000 has been so far received. There is $55,000, therefore still to raise, and only a few weeks to raise it, as the vendors refuse to extend the option.

An urgent appeal for the necessary $55,000 has been made by John Bailey, chairman of the National Trust, who says:

"There is nothing in England; nothing, perhaps, in all the world, quite like Stonehenge. Its extraordinary appeal to the imagination has been largely due to the mystery of its origin and the loneliness of its site. If learning should ever clear away its mystery, there will at least be compensation for the loss. There will be none at all if commercial development is allowed to destroy its loneliness."

"Stanhengist," a Saxon name for Stonehenge, or hanging stones, comprises a circular group of huge standing stones situated on Salisbury Plain, Wiltshire, said to have been erected as a monument in commemoration of 400 nobles who were treacherously slain near this spot of Hengist in 472 A.D. Hengist and Horsa were brother chieftains who led the first Saxon bands which settled in England.

REPAYS BE NEFACTORS

Some years ago, Rt. Hon. W. S. Fielding took a little four-year-old from the Maritimes to see Sir Wilfrid Laurier. To-day his little friend has repaid her friend and benefactor, upon her return from four years of study in Paris, by painting a portrait of the veteran statesman. She is Miss Margaret Frame, seen above, sitting before her easel. The manner in which she has caught the features of the former finance minister is shown in the inset picture reproduced from her portrait. The portrait was presented to Mr. Fielding Saturday upon the occasion of his 80th birthday.

580 ATTEND FOWL SUPPER

George Street Ladies' Aid Holds Annual Bazaar in School Auditorium.

MANY BOOTHS.

Five hundred and eighty people were patrons of the fowl supper served in the new hall of George Street United Church last evening, in connection with the annual bazaar carried on there yesterday and to-day, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. Mrs. C. E. Smith is president, and convenors of the bazaar are Mrs. H. F. Foote, Mrs. H. M. Yelland, and Miss Mary Elliott.

The ladies this year have a novel idea in presenting the dainty goods with which the various booths are filled. They have christened each booth with the name of a month in the year and have decorated them accordingly. The same unique and picturesque idea has been carried out in the naming of the tea room for July, with patriotic decorations symbolical of July 1st, in red, white and blue, and the christening of the supper tables for November, with Thanksgiving decorations of the tables and the pillars, wreathed with mauve and yellow streamers and arranged with full sheaves of wheat.

The big Sunday School auditorium, the ladies' parlor at the rear, and the auxiliary classrooms are used for the sale and the placing of long, white-clothed supper tables, arranged in accordance with the fall note, with runners of mauve and yellow paper, potted plants, and hollowed-out pumpkin baskets holding fruit. The convenor of the supper is Mrs. W. P. Hetherington.

A charming little afternoon tea room is arranged on the stage, with flags and red, white and blue paper basket shades on the electroliers. The same idea of the triple patriotic colors is carried out in the red and blue candles on white tables. At the serving table, where tea is poured by Mrs. W. J. Kelly, convenor of the tea room, there is a lovely lace cloth centred by a silver basket of deep red carnations and red candles in silver holders. Tea room assistants are Mrs. N. D. Buchanan and Mrs. J. F. H. Wallace.

Many Booths.

Around the walls of the auditorium are arranged the booths where lovely things are sold, while the centre of the hall is taken up with the supper tables, which also are placed in the ladies' parlor and the Sunday School classrooms.

Perhaps the most unique of these "Month" booths is the snow white January corner section where pillow-cases and towels are sold. This is striking and extraordinary with its large dome-topped pillars of pure white cotton batting sprinkled with silver tinsel. Over the booth is a double arch of the same pure white snow, while the electrolier in the centre is shaded with long silver tinsel ropes ending in colored balls. Mrs. Paul Hagerman and Mrs. George Robertson are in charge, aided, as is the case in every other section of the sale, by a group of energetic ladies.

A cheerful, bright note is struck in the February or Valentine booth, where dolls are sold. This is done with red and white streamers and a profusion of little red hearts, arrows and cupids. There are red and silver flowers on the latticework sides and gay Valentine paper on the front and top. Mrs. G. F. Schneider and Mrs. H. O. Fiske are in charge.

The March section, with a sale of novelties supervised by Mrs. G. Gray, is a St. Patrick booth, with green and white paper streamers, the front studded with large emerald shamrocks and the top fringed by little Irish flags and harps.

Much Care Taken.

The candy booth for April is a lovely section at the entrance to the hall. A great deal of care has been taken in the manufacture of the dainty little frilly flower boxes in orchid paper. The Easter note is accented here in the mauve and white decorations. A gilt lattice at either side is studded with large, feathery pompom 'mums in yellow and mauve. Mrs. Walter Belleghem and Miss Jean Kelly are in charge.

For May, there is a sale of home-made cooking in charge of Mrs. J. Stubbs at a booth prettily arranged with red, white and blue bunting and little flags.

A flower sale is appropriate for the June section, where lovely potted plants, ferns and cut flowers are sold, also some very pretty painted flowers that are beautiful examples of this sort of winter decoration, with their long spikes of silver and gold and colored blossoms. Mrs. G. C. Carruthers and Mrs. J. E. Todd have charge of this sale.

August is represented by Fall colors of green, yellow and mauve, carried out in streamer decorations, and flowers on latticework fronts. Lingerie is sold at this section, with Mrs. P.A. Morgan and Mrs. F. Sanderson as convenors.

Miss S. Miller has charge of the sale of aprons at the September booth, with its green top and yellow borders of paper, with a profusion of artificial autumn leaves as appropriate decoration.

Typical of October and Hallowe'en are the black and yellow fancy paper borders and fronts and the little pumpkin lanterns at the booth where Mrs. W. J. Copp and Mrs. H. McHoull have charge of the sale of flanellette and quilts.

For December there are two Christmas trees, decorated in traditional fashion with tops and lighted novelty balls. Mrs. B. Shortley has charge of the sale of articles from these pretty trees.

Yesterday afternoon and evening, a musical program was composed of pianoforte numbers played by the Misses Addie Batten, Musa Cox and Alda Bartlett.

The bazaar, which was opened yesterday afternoon by the Rev. J. E. Todd, continues until this evening.

FAIR RIDER COMES SECOND

Modern Woman Elevates The Serpent To New Spheres Of Usefulness

1—Mlle. Nadine Picard, lovely Parisian actress, arrayed in her alpina sports coat of water-snake and hat and shoes of delicately dyed lizard. 2—An outfit which Paris has just put forth for motoring or flying. The coat and hat are of heavy cloak fabric, soft but impervious to weather conditions, trimmed with dyed alpina snake-skin and lined with a soft leather. 3—Latest from Paris in motoring styles. The fair young French lady is outfitted in hat and shoes of lizard, done in brilliant hues and coat of alpina karung water-snake, radiant but noted for everlasting wear.

If the present vogue for alpina karung should last any length of time, and every indication is that it will, then the poor snake is doomed everywhere just as it was doomed by St. Patrick in Ireland, centuries ago.

Civilized man is adapting to his own uses the handsomely reticuled skin of the alpina karung, as the deadly snake is known in India. Today, for the first time, there is a concerted movement upon snakes. Dame Fashion, in her search for the beautiful and bizarre, has found a commercial use for the serpent that has been blamed for cajoling Eve into tasting the Forbidden Fruit in the Garden of Eden.

Importers are now taking about two million snake-hides out of India annually. The skins of the smaller "alpina karung" are used in the manufacture of fancy shoes, portfolios, bill folds, belts and cravets, while the larger alpina karung furnish the skins for the upholstery in expensive automobiles, furniture and milady's costumes.

Woman has elevated the serpent to a new sphere of usefulness and value, and now there is a commercial incentive to combat the crude superstitions which result in the death of over twenty thousand natives of India annually.

DEPUTY MINISTER OF HEALTH ADDRESSES BIG CONVENTION

Dr. Bell Urges Women To Secure Services of Public Health Nurse.

WELCOME NEWCOMER.

Mrs. Laura Stephens Describes Incidents in Her Thirty-four Years' Service.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—The Thursday morning session of the Women's Institute convention opened with Mrs. R. Wigle, Dryden, vice-chairman, presiding. A short time was devoted to assembly singing, after which a question drawer was held. A lengthy discussion was held on such questions as "How to raise money," Cost of layette for Institute"; Best method of arranging for a Christmas tree"; "How would you proceed to beautify the cemetery" and "How the Institute can entertain the young people."

Miss E. A. Applebe, of Georgetown, convenor on the Historical Research and Current Events committee, in her address said that in getting material for historical research, the cemetery and the schools make a good foundation for material. In the good work done on historical research the banner goes to Wellington county. Miss Thompson, Central Wellington County, told some of the plans they had taken. For convenor of this committee they chose a lady whose parents were pioneers. They sought assistants from newspapers and families who had kept diaries in the family. They gathered precious treasures or antiques and got the history.

History of Farms.

Mrs. Walker, of Eadie, told of the members of the Women's Institutes being asked to give the history of the farms they lived on for the roll call. Then they had a Grandmothers' Day when they were asked to tell a story. Children in school were asked to write a composition on pioneer days and the best were selected from these.

Mrs. W. R. Lang, of Toronto, in her address on Legislation and her study of the laws of Ontario, told of the many women she has helped throughout the district—women whose families had got beyond the parent control. Some of the points brought out are:

It is illegal to have a child under 14 to work in a factory. No child under 16 is allowed on the street after 9 o'clock, unless accompanied by parents. They can be warned and then put in the Children's Aid Society, or sent home under police control.

Children under 16 can be tried in a Juvenile Court.

The municipality has the right to stop the honking of horns to the disturbance of people at night.

No adoption of children can be made unless the wife is 21 years older than the child and the child must not be foreign. The child must be in the home for two years under satisfactory arrangements, before it becomes the legally adopted child of its new parents and will inherit with their children in their property.

To obtain a mother's aloiwance, the mother must be resident of the province for two years and must have two of her own children living with her.

Regarding the making of wills, the will dates from the day you die. It must be written by a person over 21, sound mind and not through fear. It must be signed by the person making the will and also by two witnesses. The power of attorney ceases after death and if there is no will, and if the estate is les sthan $1,000, then the widow gets all.

Nurse Great Asset.

Dr. W. J. Bell, Deputy Minister of Health, in his address said that the public health nurse is the great asset in public health and the combined interests of the Women's Institute and nurses' activities in the school held in the control of communicable diseases; correction of physical defects of children; school sanitation. Keep your community free from communicable diseases by keeping disease from spreading in your home. The good the public health nurse does gets to the home through the instruction she has given in the school. A sanitary school must have good lighting, good water and sanitary toilet accommodation. It is well to see that the school well has a sanitary top and cement curbing, which is very important.

Regarding the subject of tuberculosis, it was stated that we have a very well equipped sanitorium and the institution of early treatment is advocated.

In advocating the use of milk make sure it is safe milk. The stable must be clean, the cows must be clean and the milkers must be clean, as some of the worst diseases come direct from the milker to the milk.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session opened with Mrs. W. J. McLachlan, Burritt's Rapids, presiding. In her address on Immigration, she brought out the point of welcoming the newcomer and that a committee should be appointed for this work. The welcoming of foreign nationalities and a very practical idea is the giving of a dollar to the new baby in the community to start a bank account. Have an Immigration program in your Institute. Mrs. Smyth of the Provincial Council of Women, spoke of letters received from the North from women who were pleading for work for their husbands instead of charity. They wanted their roads gravelled, and thus this would provide work for their husbands, so they could provide for the family.

A few moments were devoted to answering questions. The question of selling tickets in the Women's Institutes is not advisable, and is almost prohibited. Supervision of the noon hour in the Public School was also a prominent subject for discussion.

In Work 34 Years.

In introducing Mrs. Laura Rose Stephen, the convention gave three cheers for the first lady speaker in Institute work. Mrs. Stephen told of her first experience in Institute work, 34 years ago. In her work she had worked under three superintendents: F. W. Hobson, Dr. George Creamine and George N. Putnam. In her address on "The Institute of Yesterday and To-day," she pointed out the development of the Women's Institute. It was Mrs. Stephen who penned the words: "For Home and Country," the Institute motto. Conditions are changing so rapidly that we have to keep pace with the evolutions of to-day. She could remember when the Institute ladies were very angry over the invention of the automobile. They couldn't get to meetings because their horses shied at the automobiles. The door of the government would not be opened to the rural women a few years ago, but now they have a place, for the Women's Institute is one of the greatest organizations in the world. She told of the development of the Women's Institute in the north. Twenty-two years ago she was setn out by Mr. Putnam to organize Institutes. She spoke of the hardships endured by these people of the north, saying that we should honor these pioneers. In conclusion she expressed her pleasure in meeting all the delegates and hoped that they would all go home with a full report for the benefit of the different branches.

Evening Session

Mrs. George Edwards of Komoka, presiding at the evening session which opened with the Institute ode. She spoke of Mayor McBride and his excellent remarks for the City of Toronto.

Mrs. J. W. Stone, Bond Head, president of the Provincial Federated Women's Institute of Ontario, in her opening remarks, thanked the members for the honor bestowed upon her during the last year. She said, "In our home, when we speak of home, we think of love. Love makes a happy home. In visiting the various conventions the spirit of unity is very prominent. When we think of the home in Northern Ontario—the small homes and large families, with agriculture not so good—we wonder how some of them ever live.

"In the inspection of rural milk, the herds should be inspected and the milk handled carefully. Inspection of schools and medical inspection might be a help in checking tuberculosis in childhood."

Albert Matthews addressed the convention on "League of Nations." Fourteen years ago the biggest war in the history of the world began. The lofty aim of the League of Nations is to end all war. The various activities of the League help to make peace. Canada is the only country in North America represented in the League of Nations. In conclusion he appealed to the Women's Institutes for assistance.

Mr Atkinson, Director of Music of Ontario, said in his address that in the music competitions at the Exhibition, forty-six out of six hundred in a class came from the rural parts, and these forty-six carried off a percentage of 54 of the prizes. Being a public and high school teacher for twenty-one years, he claimed that music was the greatest force of education. It has a tremendous moral value and is recreation that is pleasant and beneficial. He advocated the teaching of music in a class where financial difficulty does not permit individual teaching. He appealed to the Women's Institutes to have piano classes in the local schools.

Jack McDermid, gold medalist under 12 years ago age at the Canadian National Exhibition, favored the convention with a piano solo.

A violin solo by Miss Lilian with Carl Goldie as accompanist, also delighted the audience.

Intelligence tests given by psychologists have shown that Sing Sing prisoners as a group have a slightly higher rating than the "draft army" of the United States during the war.

A census of traffic, recently taken on all main roads of London, called for the services of 15,000 men working in relays.

VARSITY WINS OVERTIME VICTORY

SENIORS ELIMINATE ARGOS FROM S. P.A. MAJOR SERIES

Students Stage Rally in the Final Period To Even Three Goal Count—Score Winning Counter in Overtime For 4-3 Decision.

MUELER PLAYS STAR GAME IN THE NET FOR SCULLERS—VICTORS MEET COLBORNE

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—Scoring three goals in the last period and another in ten minutes of extra play gave Varsity the victory in the first senior hockey game of the season at the Arena Gardens last night, and eliminated Argonauts by a 4 to 3 count, from the S.P.A. major series. Condition decided the game, for after the first half the Scullers faded, and their early efforts to gain a three-goal lead was smothered by the Students' final rally. The Collegians backed the Oarsmen around their own cage most of the last period, and only the marvelous work of "Stuffy" Mueller in the Argo goal prevented them winning easily. Mueller was more of a "miracle man" than a goaler, the former net-minder of the Varsity Grads giving a super-display of puck-stopping.

All the game lacked was a crowd, for while there was not a great deal of high-class hockey, there was enough excitement and thrills for any match. The playing of Mueller between the posts was of course the outstanding feature, and the question was, "Could he survive the bombardment of shots?" But he was only human, and the tying goal trickled into his cage from a scramble in the mouth of the nets with just ten seconds of regulation time to play. Argos, who in reality were the Solloway Mills Financial League team, were the better in the first part of the game, and ran up a lead of three goals, getting two in the first period and another in the second, but their advantage on the score sheet faded with their condition.

Harley Scores Three

Mel Harley was the boy in blue who had Hueller's mark, for he was responsible for the first three Student scores in the third period of play, all on individual efforts after beating the Double Blue defence. Statham did the hero act, stepping from the substitute bench in the last minute of the overtime session, to bustle in the winning goal. Varsity's only trouble in the last two periods was to reduce the deficit against them, for the Argonauts seldom went on the offensive being content to fire from long range to keep the puck away from their own goal zone.

If Arognauts had the condition to keep up their early period pace there is no doubt that they would have won and qualified to play Port Colborne intermediate O.H.A. champions, in the next round, but they did not have a counting chance in the last half of the game, being backed behind their own blue line by the Students' stampede. The Oarsmen all seemed to suffer from the same complaint, lack of condition, while the Students had the stamina to stand the strain of an opening game.

Varsity did not look any too strong to start the game, as the Scullers swept around their cage to collect two goals, both on drives by Charles Delahey, one of them being a rather cheap count, coming from far out along the right rail. Argonauts added to their lead in the opening minute of the second period when Cameron crashed through the Student defence on the first play from the face-off and slammed the rubber behind Snyder, but from then on the Oarsmen began to tire.

DETROIT RETAINS LEAGUE POSITION

Olympics Defeat Bufaflo 3-1 in Tight Canpro Fixture.

FORT ERIE, Nov. 30.—Detroit Olympic tightened their grip on the upper rung in the Canpro circuit when they defeated Buffalo 3 to 1 here last night after it appeared that only a solitary score was to mark the game, that by Goodfellow from the blue line in the second period, but both teams broke forth with a scoring rush near the close and three more goals were tallied, Buffalo getting one and the Olympics the other pair.

Foyston carried the rubber to the side of the Bison net and took the rebound from the opposite side to tally the visitors' second goal. He had carried the puck by adept stickwork from the line. Buffalo then tossed defence to the winds and began an attacking flurry in front of Stuart. As the puck crashed off his skates, Bogaris pushed it home. A minute later, when only Taugher in the area back of the line, Brophy outmaneuvred the goalie to score for the Olympics.

Pete Bellefeuille, brilliant Olympic wing, was checked at every turn, and Brydge on the defence stood out as Detroit's best. The teams

Dutchmen Climb

KITCHENER, Ont., Nov. 30 — Windsor's hope of going into undisputed possession of second place in the Canpro League was shattered here last night when Hughie Lehmann's Flying Dutchmen handed them a 4 to 2 loss and thus climbed into fourth place themselves over the Toronto Millionaires.

The game was an excellent sample of first-class hockey, the best of the season to date here and the better team won on the night's play. It was a hard checking affair and there were many hard clean bumps handed out. The Bulldogs were bigger than the locals and it was expected that the homsters might wilt, but they took their bumps and handed them back and in the third period had more left than the visitors. The latter did their best in the initial stanza.

The players cut a fast pace necessitating many changes and the two managers tossed whole teams into action at the same time to maintain the clip, the result being that there was action all the way and the best crowd of the season saw the conflict.

Windsor Gets Lead

The Border Cities got the initial goal, but the count was knotted at the end of the first while the homsters were one up at the end of the second In the third, the visitors early tied it up, but Gross untied it two seconds later and in the dying moments the Flying Dutchmen wafted another one in the cage to make the game sure.

McFarlane played a fine game for the homesters with Miller turning in his best effort, while Gross and Palangio also turned in highly useful games. For the losers, Bellemer, Emms and Carson played [illegible]

PIRATES AGAIN BATTLE TO TIE

MILLER STARS.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30—(Canadian Press).—Benny Leonard's persistent and pesky Pirates paid their first visit of the season to Montreal last night and played a one-goal draw with Canadiens, the second tie game between the teams in eight days, they having reached a 0.0 decision at Pittsburgh last Thursday.

The Canucks had an edge in the offensive play during last night's game, but a tenacious and close-checking Pirate defensive system, backed by some good goaltending by Joe Miller, kept the Canadiens at bay. The Corsairs displayed nothing out of the ordinary on the attack, but bothered Hainsworth with their long shots, by which route they got their goal in he first period. Holway, a defence man, scored the Bucs lone counter on a shot from Canadiens' blue line.

The second period was only 25 seconds old when Canadiens tied the score on a neat individual play by Aurel Joliat, peppery little left winger. Joliat shot once, but Miller blocked. The latter, however, in attempting to clear, batted the puck right back into Joliat's stick, and this time the local player made no mistake.

VETERAN BOXER LOSES TWO BOUTS

Pilkington and Singer Bouts With Dundee Both Go By Boards.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—An ulcerated tooth and the State Athletic Commission collaborated to deprive Johnny Dundee of two matches that he estimates would have netted him $10,000.

Driven to a comeback by dire necessity, the former featherweight champion was forced to cancel a match with Jackie Pilkington at New Haven because of an aching molar. The bout was scheduled for December 3. Johnny had been guaranteed $2,500.

But this loss had its compensations, as the Madison Square Garden corporation wanted to sign the popular little warior for a bout with Al Singer, sensational East Sider, on December 14, and Matchmaker Tom McArdle, did not approve of the Pilkington bout.

Singer, Johnny's Size.

Pilkington is a lightweight, and far too heavy for Dundee. Singer is his own size, and the Singer match would draw a much bigger gate here than the Pilkington affair would in New Haven. Johnny was virtually assured of $7,500 for his end against Singer.

This rosy picture was turned to the wall by a ruling made at yesterday's meeting of the Boxing Commission. Dundee must go through with the Pilkington match before he is allowed to meet Singer here. This action was taken at the request of Tom Donohue, the Connecticut boxing commissioner, who complained that the New Haven promoter was being given the runaround.

Dundee has lost plenty of money through unavoidable postponements during his long career, but none that hurt as much as these According to those who claim to know, Johnny needs the money.

A performer who has served the boxing public so long, as loyally and as honestly as Johnny deserves all the consideration that Boxing Commissions can give him. His case is one instance where the boxer should take precedence over the promoter. No promoter in the world has done as much to popularize boxing as Johnny Dundee.

If he is trying to get out of the Pilkington match, why not? Why refuse Tommy Loughran to meet heavyweights and still insist that Dundee, a featherweight, meet Pilkington, a lightweight?

McBRIDE IS PLAYER IN TROTTIER DEAL

May Come To Maple Leafs Now Instead of End of Season.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—Speculation has been rife as to what player Montreal Maroons would turn over to Toronto Maple Leafs as part of the purchase price to be paid for Trottier.

Just before the Maroons left for Detroit Wednesday night it leaked out among the boys that Manager Eddie Gerard would likely stop off in Windsor and inform the manager of the Can-pro. teams there, that young McBride, who although owned by the Maroons, has never played with them yet, or for that matter with any National Hockey League club would have to pack up his kit bag and move on to Toronto. The Maroons' player was supposed to go at the end of the season but Toronto needs players now and maybe President Strachan has consented to allow the deal to be completed forthwith.

McBride is said to be a very promising young player. He came from the Thunder Bay district and worked out with the Maroons in the early season

HEAVY ENTRY LIST IN O.H.A. THIS YEAR

Largest Number of Teams Entered This Season Since 1923.

TORONTO, November 30. — O.H.A. entries closed on Wednesday night, and the executive at its meeting to-night will be asked to group 165 teams, of which five are in the senior series, eighty-two in the intermediate, and seventy-eight in the junior. This is the largest number since 1923, and equals the total for that year. Queen's University yesterday made formal entry to the senior series, while Preston is in with three teams, one in each class. The Kingston Hockey Club also wishes to play senior hockey. Hamilton will have the Falcons and Victorias in the junior ranks, while Stratford is back in the O.H.A. stronger than ever, with two junior teams and one intermediate. Grimsby also has entered the junior and intermediate series.

The Marlboro Athletic Club officials regret to have to remain out of the senior O.H.A. hockey this season, but will devote their time to the juniors. At the beginning of the season it was the intention of the Marlboros to have senior club, and when the Argonauts announced that they were placing a team in the senior O.H.A. the "Dukes" decided not to interfere and withdrew, releasing McPherson brothers, Mercer and Irvine, so that the Argos would have a strong team to represent Toronto.

The Preston club has entered senior, intermediate, and junior teams in the O.H.A. Frank Kreason has been appointed playing manager of the intermediate team, with "Tiny" McFayden of Galt and W. H. Heise also on the managing committee. The majority of the games, it is thought, will be played in Galt.

TROTTIER HELPS MAROONS TO TIE

Makes Pass To Equalize Counter in Game Against Cougars.

RANGERS WIN IN OVERTIME.

DETROIT, November 30. — The Detroit Cougars and the Montreal Maroons added a point each to their standings here last night when they battled to a 1 to 1 overtime tie game before a Thanksgiving crowd of 13,000 persons on Olympic Arena.

Dave Trottier, Olympic player, playing his first professional game, covered himself with glory for the Maroon team when he engineered the play that tied the score in the second period. The goal was made by Joe Lamb. Early in the second period Captain Reg. Noble, of the Cougars, shot a long easy one that fooled Benedict, Maroon goalie, and slipped through for the Cougar tally.

With the score tied at the beginning of the third period, both teams lashed out an attack that brought the crowd to its feet, but the goalies were too good for either offence. The overtime period, as a contrast, was slow, with both outfits playing cautious hockey. Harold Hicks, Maroon defenceman, received a major penalty for tripipng George Hay, Cougar forward.

MAINTAINS LEAD.

NEW YORK, November 30. — The New York Rangers maintained their lead in the American group of the National Hockey League last night when they nosed out the Chicago Black Hawks 2 to 1 in a sizzling overtime contest.

Dick Irvin, of the Hawks netted the first goal in the initial period and the Black Hawks maintained this advantage all through the second period and most of the third, Bun Cook finally taking a pass from Keeling to score the tying goal with only five minutes to go. Murdock scored the deciding goal after six minutes of overtime.

N.Y. Rangers—Goal, Roach; right defence, Lane; left defence, Johnson centre, Boucher; right wing, Bill Cook; left wing, Bun Cook; subs., Boyd, Murdock, Thompson Keeling, Abel, Bourgeault Lane.

Two stars make this picture interesting. Richard Dix is one of the most popular of the masculine actors of the screen and Ruth Elder, the daring girl who was the first of her sex to span the Atlantic by way of the air rotue, plays opposite him as the heroine of "Moran of the Marines." Miss Elder is, as the advance notices have proclaimed her, a clever film actress, but it is interesting to watch the little bits of amateurish acting that occur occasionally in her work.

The story revolves around the adventures of Michael Moran, a daredevil young man who gets into serious trouble over a fight and is sent to jail. His tired uncle refuses to get him out and he does his thirty days, enlisting later in the Marines alone with his chum, "Swatty." They both want to get to China but various complications ensue before that desirable result is attained, including a mix-up with the General's daughter, Vivian Marshall (Ruth Elder). Moran falls in love with her and goes to a dance where he is regarded as a millionaire railroad owner. Vivian is chagrined next day when she meets the rookie soldier on parade, and finds out he is her find of the evening before. Then he is detailed for orderly duty at the General's home and kisses Vivian. She rushes in fury to her father, and Moran is court-martialled and sentenced to three years at hard labor.

Here is a curious coincidence of the films that often crops up. Last week, we had a tempestuous love affair at the Capitol, entitled "Tempest," with John Barrymore and Camilla Horn in a romance of Imperial Russia. In that picture, the same situaton developed. The peasant soldier kisses the General's daughter, the Princess Tamara, and gets a court martial and five years at hard labor. Just why the same development should follow in a picture of differing type and background is hard to understand. It has happened before in films presented here.

At any rate, the story progresses to China and there bandits capture Vivian and she is rescued by Moran, single-handed. The finale is romantic and satisfactory.

One of the popular episodes in the "New Collegians" series accompanies the big picture, and the usual run of excellent short reels.

BUCK JONES IN "CHAIN LIGHTNING"—REALISTIC STORY AND CAST

Pictures, like garments, should fit the personalities of their principals, although so many of them fail. In the instance of "Chain Lightning," a Fox Films Western drama, which opened at the Regent Theatre last night, however, the leading characterization might have been especially prepared for Buck Jones, who plays it. The principal in this cast is a ranchman who wearies of the restless life of the range and seeks a period of rest and seclusion in San Francisco. Buck Jones, with his tanned face, his keen eyes and his humorous smile, might be such a man in real life. He certainly plays the part as though he understood its every phase.

But destiny has written on the wall that this particular rancher isn't to vegetate in San Francisco at all. He is scarcely comfortable in town when a message arrives, informing him that rustlers have made away with his favorite horse. They might have burned the ranch, rebranded the cattle, or even killed off his hands, but when the thieves chose that horse, they erred.

Accordingly, the Golden Gate city is deserted by the man from the open spaces, who buckles on his gun as he leaves. There commences then a series of most spectacular riding feats, shooting scrapes galore, and a climax that nearly brought the audience to its feet.

The rustlers are given from the range, or disposed of by other and speedier methods, the beautiful white horse, "Silver Buck," is returned to his master and as a grand climax, the westerner wins the love of a girl who has recognized his genius.

Dione Ellis, who played the ingenue roles in Fox Films adaptation of "Cradle Snatchers" and "Is Zat So?" makes her first appearance in a western opposite Buck Jones. Miss Ellis may have learned to act in the east, but it was out where the west is that she learned to ride.

Others in a well-balanced cast who are deserving of particular praise are Ted McNamara, William Welch, Jack Baston, Gene Cameron, Buck Moulton, Martin Faust and William Caress. Lambert Hillyer wrote the scenario from an original story by Charles Alden Seltzer and also directed the production.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Regina Rough Riders undertake the tremendous task of beating Hamilton Tigers for the Canadian Championship to-morrow.

Even though the team from the west were world beaters they would have slight chance of defeating the Bengal Cats after their long journey on the rails. No team can play good rugby stepping off the train after the long trip the Regina team made with only one day's rest. The Rough Riders arrive to-day and play to-morrow.

* * * * * * *

The St. John's Hockey Club sent the O.H.A. executive their two dollar fee to retain their entry in the Junior. So that the city has two junior teams entered.

* * * * * * *

Some of he most eager hockey players had a game of shinny on the Artificial Lake at Jackson's Park the other day. The lake had a thin sheet of ice and a number of zealous ones donned their skates, lead by the redoubtable, hockey hungry, "Stuffy" Mahood, who is usually the first to get on the ice in the fall and the last to leave it in the spring.

* * * * * * *

The announcement that two senior teams are likely to be entered from Kingston, one from Queen's University and the other from the city, indicates a cloudiness on the horizon. Formerly there was one team from Kingston composed of the best players from the university and the city, playing intermediate hockey. They always had a good team but it's many years since they had anything startling. Kingston might be able to turn out one senior outfit under the old plan, but it is apparent that they can never get two teams that will play the brand of hockey necessary in senior company.

* * * * * * *

This matter touches places outside of Kingston too, because Kitchener, where a senior team was being entered declared, that they can't make two trips to play each of the Kingston teams. Kitchener is short of funds and the expense of the two trips would come too high for them. If a western group is formed, they will stay in but if the senior teams are all in one group and Kingston has two teams, Kitchener will revert to the intermediate ranks.

* * * * * * *

Hockey players, who want to try out for Junior hockey, are asked to hand in their names to Lew LeBarr Jr. The season will soon be here and the executive desires to get some idea of the material on hand for the junior team.

* * * * * * *

A local old-timer suggests an all-star team composed wholly of former famous Peterborough rugby players. The team looks good on paper and here it is: Flying wing, Dick Sheehy (Ottawa College and University of Toronto); backfield, Ben. Simpson, (Queen's), Dr. A. W. McPherson (U. of T.), and "Dutch" Gonter St Michael's and U. of T.); quarterback, Peter Campbell (U. of T.); snapback, Ross Dobbin; inside wings, Ross Craig (Tigers) and Frank Burnham U. of T.); middle wings, Frank Heffernan (Ottawa College and T.R. and A.A.) and Harold Mathews (Royal Military College); outside wings, Ross Laign (McGill) and Gamey Stratton (U. of T.). The names of the late Harold Hill of Queen's University and of Ken. Overend, also a Queen's and Ottawa College player.

NO RESTRICTIONS

Dear Sir:—

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words with regard to the purchase of property in front of Confederation Square for service station. I wish to clearly point out that before anything was done I interviewed His Worship, the Mayor, City Clerk Armstrong and Mr. Parsons, City Engineer, explaining the situation to them and made sure that there were absolutely no restrictions on this property with the exception of the by-law which covers construction.

I have already been advised by one of the tenants on this property that the house is only fit for tearing down. I have also been advised on good authority that the owner of an adjacent property was the means of blocking a by-law when he was a member of the City Council endeavored to put building restrictions in this area.

If an up-to-date service station would not be more in keeping with the surroundings than a yard full of second hand furniture and drays and wagons strung along the street, while auction sales are being carried on, then I am no judge of what should be in the vicinity of Confederation Square.

I just wish to point out that this property was purchased in all good faith and that the Company I represent was very careful to have me go thoroughly into the matter with regard to restrictions before we closed this deal.

Trusting this will explain our attitude in this matter, I remain

Yours sincerely,

A. W. Blade.

RE-ELECTED MANAGER.

At a meeting of Queen's Senior Intercollegiate Rugby team, 'Ike' Sutton of Hamilton was chosen captain. He has been quarterback for three seasons, and is one of the best in the Dominion. Harry Batstone, Toronto, has been re-elected manager, and will likely play in 1929.

MAULER PLANS TO ENTER RING

Engagement of Four Sparring Partners Indicates Former Champion's Return to Ring.

POPULAR HERO OF RING.

NEW YORK, November 30. — Our dear old pal, Jack Dempsey, is going into training. Right after the first of the year he will pack his luggage and climb the mountains of California and pitch camp at Ojai. Dempsey has engaged four sparring partners, but their names are a dead secret.

How long the former champion will remain in that spot of solitude remains to be seen. Being of a nervous temperament it is possible he will remain there only a short time, then hustle back to Los Angeles, and then back to the quietude of the mountains.

Following precedent, this move of Dempsey indicates that he is seriously considering slipping on the padded mitts once again. When he was around this part of the country he was blowing hot and cold over a "comeback." After he looked over a few of the alleged contenders the old boy probably considered it was his duty to return and earn some soft dough.

Announces Retirement.

Close to a year ago he announced that he was through with the fighting game. His sight was bad, he had fallen arches, his strength was gone, and if you believed him he was figuring upon buying a wheel chair. Then to make matters more complex he hied away to Ojai, where he had the company of George Godfrey, the "Black Shadow," for a few weeks.

When he bade farewell to the mountain camp, he still insisted that he was out of the game. That was accepted by the public until Tex Rickard started making alluring overtures to Jack. They were so sweet and profitable that he donned the gloves with Jack Sharkey and later with his conqueror, Gene Tunney.

Not Taken Seriously.

It is remarkable that few take the chatter of Dempsey's retirement seriously. They dope it out that he could easily defeat any and all of the big boys shuffling around the many rings. Rickard is one of the most ardent boosters for Dempsey to stage a "come-back," for Tex knows the big fellow would pack them in no matter where he fought.

Despite his two defeats by Tunney the Manassa Mauler is still the most popular ring character of the day. No matter where he goes he is always the centre of attraction. He has a firm hold on the public, and a return would bring him a fortune, no matter how the battle ended.

STARVING A STAR

Recently rumors have been flying about that Hamilton Tigers will lose one of their biggest guns at the present season's close. Hawley (Huck) Welch, the subject of these reports, admits that he intends to get his university matric, next spring, wherefore his firm footsteps will probably be heard in college corridors when the autumn comes rolling round once more. Lucky will be the seat of learning which this brilliant young pigskin booter embraces, with the odds heavily favoring Queen's of Kingston. Should Welch don the tri-color he will be one of the richest prizes secured since the days of the famous Leadley-Batstone combination. Welch first figured as a paramount punter in the much-disputed Delta-Oakwood game, on the strength of which the Tigers grabbed him and hoisted him into fame in the Big Four circuit. Be assured that if he goes to Kingston, a warm welcome awaits him on the Queen's Campus.

ECHO GIVES HEIGHT

PARIS, Nov. 30.—A new instrument, capable of recording the altitude of airplanes to within one foot of the ground, has been installed on French aircraft. The instrument is for use in foggy weather. An arrangement under the plane makes a series of explosions. Electric sound detectors pick up the echo from the ground and the height of the plane is gauged therefrom.

VERY EXPLICIT

LONDON, Nov. 30.—A letter received in the postoffice here bore the following address: "To the Chemical Cleaners who are dying an overcoat for Arthur Lewis. Near the bridge same street as the Market is in, near top of St. James Road, Southport." The letter was delivered.

A comparison of the percentage of foreign born and native born prisoners at Sing Sing shows that foreigners are not, on the whole, more criminal than natives.

SAHARA DESERT IS UNSUITABLE

COVERED WITH STONES.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Captain Malcolm Campbell, British racing motorist, returned yesterday from the Sahara Desert a disappointed man. In his determination to recover for Britain the speed record held by the American, Ray Keech, he went by airplane to a desolate spot hundreds of miles from civilization to inspect what was described by an Irish traveller who had visited it, as the world's ideal racing track. Piloted by flight Lieutenant Don, Captain Campbell in a small Moth machine had an adventurous trip over the Pyrenees and Atlas Mountains and finally reached a spot some 80 miles north of Timbuctoo.

After motoring through rock and stony country he found that the so-called hard, perfect stretch of sand which he might be able to beat the world's record was unsuitable for the attempt. The patch was firm and straight, Captain Campbell said, but instead of sand the ground was covered with small, smooth stones which could only be removed at great expense.

"Even then I am afraid the tires of my machine wouldn't stand the strain," he added.

Captain Campbell and the pilot had a thrilling return journey in the Moth. Travelling about the northern coast of Africa a cylinder gave out and they had to make a forced landing on a strip of rocky beach. They were uninjured but the machine toppled into the sea. They were promptly "interviewed" by a mob of villainous-looking Riffians who took most of the money the two Englishmen had with them. They were finally rescued from the attention of the Riffians by the Spanish authorities and reached home in a Japanese steamship.

ATTENDING DOCTORS

cidedly optimistic view, though pointing out the seriousness of the malady in a man of the king's age.

Extra Physician Called.

LONDON, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—Sir Humphrey Rollestone, noted English physician, was called into consultation at Buckingham Palace this morning. It was stated on good authority, however, that King George was a little better all round to-day.

It was announced that the doctors were reviewing the whole position of His Majesty at this stage of his illness, therefore the official medical bulletin will not be issued until an hour later than usual.

Sir Humphrey, who has been physician extraordinary to the King for several years, is Professor of Physics at Cambridge University. It was understood that he would sign to-day's bulletin as well as Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Stanley Hewett, who have been attending His Majesty.

Some Improvement.

The King's physicians issued the following bulletin to-day: "Inflammation of lung and pleura shows some improvement. The temperature is slightly lower. The time of the exacerbation of the infection, it must be noted, has not yet passed, and in any case progress must be slow."

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, Nov. 30 (Canadian Press).—The Duke of Gloucester, whose exact whereabouts are unknown, is believed to be somewhere between the towns of Abercorn and Broken Hill. There is no telegraph at Abercorn, but there is good road for 500 miles to Broken Hill, where the famous white train in which the Prince of Wales toured South Africa in 1925, is waiting. It is expected that the Duke will take this train if Broken Hill is the first point of civilization he touches.

The Prince of Wales is still waiting for the cruiser Enterprise which is to take him to England. The Prince is at Dares-Salaam, Tanganyika. It is not known as yet whether the Prince will await his departure until the Duke returns from the wilds. The cruiser is due at Dares-Salaam on Sunday. The original plan was for the Duke to join his brother at Broken Hill on completion of their separate hunting cruises.

Travel Overland.

The Admiralty announced to-day that the Prince of Wales had practically decided to leave H.M.S. Enterprise at Suez and proceed by train to Alexandria. There he will embark on one of His Majesty's ships, probably the Frobisher, for either Brindisi, Naples or Marseilles.

A high authority at the palace this afternoon said the King was slightly but distinctly better to-day, although at this stage of the illness the possibility of a setback could not be ignored.

WINS FIRST PRIZE

The beautiful Angora rabbit "Flame of Rocklyn" won first prize and special for best rabbit against nearly 600 competitors at the Royal Winter Fair. The animal was bred and is owned by Mrs. T. A. Neely, Toronto.

Remembrance Fondly Kept

To some of Peterborough's pioneer families, there has recently been erected on the Colonel Haultain lot in Little Lake Cemetery a beautiful Celtic cross, which has been very much admired, and on the Budden lot a handsome Latin cross. Older residents of this city will remember Mr. Budden as the manager of the Bank of Montreal about fifty years ago. Both these crosses are made of very fine blue gray granite, hammered, finished and lettered by the sand blast process which leaves the inscriptions very legible. These monuments have been cut and finished at the Couglin Monumental Works. This firm invites inspection of their plant and facilities for turning out first-class work. 2d-28, 1st, 4378.

Pet Dogs Disappearing Individual Is Watched

The attention of The Examiner has been drawn to the fact that a number of pet dogs are being picked up and either held for reward or shipped out of town. It is said that a certain individual is being watched who has carried out this procedure with hounds, and the informant stated that the full force of the law would be used against any such person found with a stolen dog in his possession.

WEDDING BELLS

COVERLY—OSBORNE.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the United church parsonage, Havelock, on November 17th, at 10.30 a.m., when Phyllis, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barron, Cordova Mines, became the bride of Arthur Coverly, youngest son of Mrs. Gertie Coverly of North Marmora.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. R. Archer, Havelock.

The bride looked pretty in a gown of rosewood silk chiffon velvet and georgette, with hat and shoes to match. The young couple were unattended.

The groom's gift to the bride was a cabinet of silver.

After the ceremony the young couple returned to the home of the bride where a dainty wedding dinner was served, after which they left by motor amid showers of confetti for a short honeymoon trip.

On their return a shower was given at which many people gathered, and presented the young couple with many beautiful and useful gifts. They will live in North Marmora.

IN MEMORIAM.

BALL. — In loving memory of our dear son, James, who died November 30, 1918:
We do not forget him, we loved him too dearly,
For his memory to fade from our lives like a dream;
Lips need not speak when the heart mourns sincerely,
For grief often dwells where it seldom is seen.

Many a day his name is spoken
And many an hour he is in our thoughts,
A link in our family chain is broken,
He is gone from our home, but not from our hearts.

Board Orders Restricted Area By-Law

NICHOLLS HOSPITAL BOARD IS REFUSED SECOND APPEAL TO RATEPAYERS FOR $300,000

Finance Committee Turns Down Request For By-law at Last Night's Meeting.

ANOTHER MONEY VOTE.

Five Gasoline Pumps Will Probably Remain On Streets For a Year.

The petition of the Nicholls Hospital Board seeking a further voice of the Protestant ratepayers of the city in regards a new $300,000 addition at the coming civic election was refused last night at a meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council. The aldermen felt that the Board had been given its opportunity several weeks ago, and the ratepayers had turned the by-law down, and at the coming election the city ratepayers in all probability would be asked to vote on another money by-law.

Mayor Denne declared that there had to be more co-operation between the Hospital Board and the City Council, and that there should be some stated policy laid down.

Alderman Hamilton thought that it was rather rushing matters, and Alderman Lowe was of the opinion that the Board had its chance. So after no further discussion, it was moved by Alderman Cotton, seconded by Alderman Greene, that it would be in the interests of the Hospital Board, as well as for other reasons, that the vote should be put off until a later date.

The communication of the Orillia Board of Trade asking that the city Council endorse petitioning the directors of the Canadian National Exhibition to hold their fair one week later in the autumn so that the tourist trade would not be attracted away from the resorts so early, was received.

The Mayor, chairmen of the Finance Committee and Board of Works were appointed a committee to consider the group insurance scheme and to confer with the Peterborough Trust.

This year at the municipal elections a constable will be on duty at the polling booths to stop the crowding during the rush hours. Each deputy returning officer will be instructed to secure one, and he will be paid $3.00 for the day's work.

Gasoline Pumps Remain.

If the City Council at its meeting on Monday night upholds the action of the Board of Works last night, the five gasoline pumps, which were ordered off the streets and still remain, will probably be given another lease of life for twelve months from November 16 last. Andrew Brown appeared before the Board of Works with a petition signed by ten pumpholders, who were ordered to move their pumps, asking that they be given another twelve months, and undertaking that at the end of that time they would guarantee the removal of the same. Five of these pumps have already been removed, but Mr. Brown gave his word that these men had no intention of putting them back on the streets. Mr. Brown contended that it was a hardship for him, as he had been in business for a number of years, and the sale of gasoline and other motor equipment which usually goes along meant a great deal to him. He said in a year's time his lease would run out. Then he was going to seek other quarters. The men who had removed the pumps all gladly signed the petition knowing that they could not put theirs back on the street and that Mr. Brown and the few others would be the gainers if the Council passed the petition.

Alderman Greene said he was sympathetic to Mr. Brown, but he could hardly see how it would be fair to the other men who had carried out the instructions of the City Council.

Alderman Macdonald expressed opposition to granting the petition, but on the motion of Aldermen Phelan and Huffman the petition was granted.

Applies for Permits.

Yesterday the Imperial Oil Company applied for two permits from the City Engineer, one to tear down the two dwellings south of the public library and the other to allow a service station to be built on the property. Mr. Parsons withheld the permit yesterday, and asked the Board last night what it wished him to do in the matter.

Alderman Macdonald said that in 1926, when he was a member of the Parks Committee, a by-law authorizing a restricted area in the locality of the two parks was given its first reading in the Council, but was defeated when it came up for the second. He maintained that if this by-law had been passed there would have been a restricted area in front of Confederation Square, and no gasoline station would be permitted

FORMER MINISTER DIES.

HON. RODOLPHE MONTY

Solicitor-General in the re-organized Meighen Cabinet in 1921, who died at his home in St. Hyacinthe to-day.

SENATOR DIES AT BROCKVILLE

Hon. John Webster's Death Had Been Expected For Number of Days.

ILLNESS INCURABLE.

BROCKVILLE, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Hon. John Webster died at his home here this morning. All of the members of Senator Webster's family were present at the time of his death which had been expected for a number of days in view of the critical form which his illness had assumed. All hope of his recovery had been abandoned for several weeks, when it became apparent that his illness was incurable, and it became largely a question of how long his strength would withstand the strain made upon it. The funeral will be held at the family residence on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock with burial taking place in Oakland Cemetery here.

Four Vacancies

Death of Senator Webster creates fourth vacancy in Senate. There are now two vacancies in representation from Quebec, one in New Brunswick and one in Ontario. Senator Webster was a Conservative and when his place is filled the opposition majority in Upper Canada will be further narrowed down. When all vacancies are filled the Conservatives will have a majority of four in Senate.

The Hon. John Webster was perhaps better known as a produce merchant and keen lover of harness horses than as a public man. For the greater part of his life he had been connected with the produce business in Eastern Ontario and his regular presence at the different cheese boards meeting weekly in that territory made him particularly well known throughout the eastern counties. He was also a keen follower of harness races, owned a stable of his own and was never happier than when officiating at a meet or himself occupying a sulky.

Born In 1856

Senator Webster was born on a farm at Bellamy, Leeds County, Ont., August 3 ,1856, the son of William Webster and his wife, Eliza Baker. He was principally of Irish Descent and, after having attended the local schools, came to Brockville as a youth and there entered the employ of R. Gill, produce merchant, to which business he eventually succeeded and which he continued to conduct with marked success.

His political career began in 1908 when he was chosen as the Conservative candidate for Brockville riding in opposition to the sitting member, Right Hon. George P. Graham. At that general election he was defeated by a majority of 144, but at the contest of 1911, fought on the reciprocity and naval issues, he succeeded in defeating the then Minister of Railways and Canals by a majority of 111. He sat in the House of Commons until 1917 when the ridings of Brockville and Leeds having been combined under redistribution, he gave way as Conservative candidate to Sir Thomas White. On March 12, 1918, he was summoned to the Senate. He was an Anglican.

OFFICERS HEAR PLANS GERMANY MADE FOR WAR

Outline Laid Down By Great German Strategist Was Never Followed.

LOST IN FIRST MONTH.

Col. W. B. Beemer Addresses Officers of Local Mess, Describing Plan of Attack.

"Perhaps the failure of Germany to win the war was because they did not follow through in the first month the plan of advancement made years before by the great German strategist, Von Schlieffen," said Colonel W. B. Beeman in his lecture on the subject, "German Strategy," to the officers of the Peterborough Garrison last evening in their mess.

"It has been said that Germany lost the war in the first month because of the errors they made, and that may very possibly be so," said Colonel Beeman in commencing his lecture.

"Soon after the war of 1870 Germany began making plans for the next war. It was understood that Germany's enemies would be either France or Russia, with the possibilty of the two together, and the German plans were made to take in the event of war with the two at the same time. Three plans were made, and the final one in 1891 of Von Schlieffen was kept and made the basis of the German operations at the beginning of the Great War.

"Von Schlieffen was perhaps the greatest German strategist that ever lived. He was an amazing military thinker, and spent his whole lifetime on military matters. He was a boar for work, and his plan of 1891 was a jewel.

Encounter France.

"It was understood in his plan that Germany would be encountering France and Russia at the same time, because these two countries had entered into an offensive and defensive alliance. Thirteen infantry divisions and two cavalry divisions were to be held on the eastern front against Russia, and the policy to be followed there was one of slow retirement before the Russian advance. Asistance would be sent after the expected victory was gained over the French.

"On the western or French front Schlieffen divided his forces into seven armies—two armies on the left stretching from Metz and Thionville to the Swiss border, and four great armies on the right. In the five armies on the right wing he put nearly all his strength.

"The plan was that the five armies on the right were to align themselves on a line, Thionville to Metz. Then a great pivoting movement would take place on Thionville, until the line should reach Paris. Paris would be invested with fresh German troops saved for the purpose, and the French armies would have to fight when and when the German staff desired. The Germans were to keep control of the initiative and make the French movements conform to their own.

Made Changes.

"Von Moltke succeeded Von Schlieffen in 1906 and was Chief of the General Staff at the outbreak of the war. His plan, that was put into effect, was closely modelled on that of Von Schlieffen, but he made some changes that noticeably weakened it. He gave the eastern or Russian front practically the same forces, but he greatly reduced the forces to take part in the gigantic pivot which was to reach Paris. He sen tthe special force to envelop Paris to the eastern flank instead of the extreme right, fearing that the French would defeat him on the east." The first great mistake was in reducng the troops to take part in the pivoting movement. This weakening of the right flank was what caused the eventual failure of the plan."

Forces Spread.

"What happened was this. The forces on the left flank which were far stronger than needed, easily defeated the French army and on these successes being gained, Moltke changed his plan to attempt to force

MORROW AND BEATTY, LIMITED WILL COMPLETE IN DECEMBER BIG CONTRACT AT KAPUSKASING

Local Contractors Have Conquered Smoky Falls, Sixty Miles West of Cochrane and Built a Large Power Plant There.

ENGINEERS HAD TO DIVERT ENTIRE FLOW OF WATER CONSIDERED BY EXPERTS GREATEST WORK IN THE NORTH

Big Development Commenced in 1926 when Axemen Blazed a Trail to Build a Railroad—Firm Has Many Other Constructional Accomplishments in Canada.

(By T. H. T.)

On a sight-seeing tour of the massive mill of the Abitibi Pulp and Paper Company at Iroquois Falls Ontario, a few years ago, an Examiner reporter was told that Peterborough should be specially interested in that vast plant because it had been built by Peterborough contractors, Morrow and Beatty, Limited.

A conversation one winter day in Sherbrooke, Que., touching momentarily upon a reference to Peterborough, brought out the fact that Morrow and Beatty, Limited had constructed the dam and power house on the Magog River from which Sherbrooke obtains its supply of electricity. And meeting a traveller from Drummondville, Que., in Kitchener, the same reporter found a sudden return of interest in the St. Francis valley town, he had all but forgotten, upon mention of the names of Morrow and Beatty as the contractors who had erected the complete plant of the Southern Canada Power Company at Drummondville.

Here was a partnership whose fruits had made its member well and favorably known in far away communities; but to at least one Peterborough man its name was scarcely more familiar than those of other big Canadian contractors. The impression persisted that to the citizens Morrow & Beatty, Limited, was a vague, impersonal conception of men of good report who were doing big things here and there and elsewhere out on the broad stage of national development and progress. They had been so continuously and so long engaged away from home that most of the citizens never had a chance to make their aquaintance. And news of them, the legitimate news of constructive achievement which people like to hear, drifted back only occasionally and then in merest scraps.

Sharing Their Fame.

To be reminded that the immense, shapely pile of concrete and iron at Iroquois Falls was the work of Peterborough contractors, and to hear the implied tribute in the inflection of the remark which at the same time distinctly comprehended you as a fellow citizen, perhaps an acquaintance, possibly a friend, such a jogging started up within you a stilt, small sense of vicarious self-importance, and a pleasant, albeit a shrinking feeling of sharing the radiance of reflected glory.

Now, suppose you did not know Mr. Morrow or Mr. Beatty, had never seen them, but that you quite bravely evaded that veiled, indirect question with some such noncommittal evasive reply as this: "Oh! yes! Morrow and Beatty....Uh, huh!.... So this is what they have been doing....Well, well....of course, big people....Oh, certainly....By the way, what's that machine over there?"

If you have had such an experience you are inclined to stow away in your memory a tiny grievance against these contractors as you realize how they have come and gone from this big job and that with never a tootle on their own horn, after the universal manner of their age and pretentious generation. But stray away from Peterborough and in the most unexpected place you hear others, chance strangers, veritable aliens to the Otonabee homeland, blowing on the M. & B. horn melodious blasts that startle and dismay you because you are so unaccustomed to the tone of that horn. In fact you were unaware that there was such a horn.

Son of the Late R. A. Morrow.

At length when you examine your information about these contractors you recall that Harold A. Morrow is the son of the late R. A. Morrow, who lived on the north side of Sherbrooke street west and atop "Bertie Morrow's" hill, which was popularly named after him in the days of its quiet isolation. The finest hearthside site in Peterborough, it is, with its old fashioned, cheerful house built in 1834 by Stafford Kirkpatrick, its terraced lawns and its gabled windows catching the first ruddy peekling of the misty, morning sun and on the opposite slope seeming to peer down over the western sky line after the departing day as if dawn would never flush again.

Only the other day the writer heard for the first time that Mr. Morrow's partner, Mr. J. A. Beatty, formerly of Fergus, Ontario, is now a resident of Toronto. At least his home is there. He is a graduate in science of the University of Toron-

CARS COLLIDE ON ICY STREETS

Two Automobiles Were Badly Damaged On Water Street Last Night.

FAILED TO SEE CAR.

One of the most serious accidents reported as resulting from slippery highways and the snow and rain storm of Friday night, was that which occurred immediately north of the corner of Langton and Water Streets near the Isolation Hospital Hill at 10.30. The motor car of Andrew Evans, of Peterborough, which had just stopped, was struck from the rear by a car, the driver of which was Bernard Harvey, of Young's Point, and was driven into the fence at the east side by the force of the impact. No one was injured, but the cars, particularly that of the Peterborough man, were badly damaged.

Harvey stated that owing to the rain freezing on his windshield, he did not see the other car, though the lights were showing on both cars.

SLIGHT RISE IN TEMPERATURE

Knowledge That His Majesty's Fever Was Higher Gives Tinge of Uneasiness.

NOT UNEXPECTED.

LONDON, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—A slight rise in temperature was announced in the medical bulletin issued at Buckingham Palace this morning. The nation had been hoping that His Majesty would make steady though necessarily slow progress towards recovery. The knowledge that his fever was higher gave a tinge of uneasiness to the public feeling. The King was stated to have passed a fairly comfortable night and the doctors announced that there was no change in his general condition, in which some improvement was noted yesterday.

Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Stanley Hewett, the King's physicians, were at Buckingham Palace nearly two hours this morning. Owing to favorable reports yesterday there was a falling off in the number of visitors through the palace gates during the night, and a small gathering was present when the bulletin was hung on the railings this morning.

The United Kingdom is the principal market for exports of citrus fruit from the Union of South Africa.

In reply to the telegram sent by the Veterans of the Canadian Legion wishing the King a speedy recovery, the following message was received this morning:

Service League, Peterborough.

Engineer Welcomes President Of Company

LONDON, England, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—Walter Griffiths, an engine-driver on the Great Western Railway, the newly-elected Mayor of Newport, had the gratification at his inaugural banquet of welcoming Sir Felix Pole, general manager of the railway, as the chief guest of the municipality. Sir Fexil proposed the health of the new mayor. Mayor Griffiths has been granted twelve months' leave of absence by the Great Western Railway Company to carry out his civic duties.

KING'S ILLNESS IS NEARING ITS CRITICAL STAGE

Slight Weakness of His Majesty's Vital Forces is Reported.

SYMPTOM IS DANGEROUS.

Reserve Strength Will Be Tested Within Next Few Days, Says Report.

LONDON, December 1. — There is reason to believe that the stern fight going on in the mauve bedroom in Buckingham Palace where King George lies stricken with pleurisy, is now approaching a crisis.

Private hints have been conveyed to British newspapers to guide them in presenting news of the 63-year-old Monarch's illness that the King is likely to get worse before he gets better, and that in the best circumstances, he will be incapacitated from all public business for at least three months.

There is talk of setting up a temporary regency with the Prince of Wales as Regent, immediately upon the arrival here of the Prince if his father is then not out of danger. It seems likely that this will be done as state business requires attention to a mass of detail work by the King which cannot be delegated excepting to a regent in whom is vested the powers of the Crown.

Progress Must Be Slow.

The personal and consulting physicians accordingly pointed out to the public that "the inflammation of the lung and pleura shows some improvement. The temperature is slightly lower. The time of possible exacerbation of the affection, it must be noted, has not yet passed, and in any case progress must be slow."

Later in the evening a non-committal bulletin was issued confined to the statement: "The King's condition shows no change."

Optimistic interpretations placed upon bulletins and unofficial reports of improvement emanating from the palace are subject to discount. The King's chances are better to-day than six days ago when on Sunday night there was a sudden alarming rise in his temperature and the worst was feared.

Since then, as the bulletins have indicated, the infection has been checked, and up to Thursday the King's strength was maintained. Since then, there has been some slight weakening of His Majesty's vital forces. It now remains to be seen whether he has enough reserve strength to rout the disease or whether it will gain ground.

The answer to that question, on which depends the King's life, will probably come within the next two or three days at most.

Dangerous Symptom.

The dangerous symptom is that the King up to the present has shown no real progress and that such a malady in the case of a man aged 63 cannot hang on indefinitely without getting worse or better, as has been the case for the past few days.

Current optimism has been based on the fact that the King has not been losing ground rather than the fact that he has been gaining.

From bulletins and newspaper reports on Thursday the public got the impression that the King was definitely on the mend, but yesterday's vague warnings created renewed anxiety. The brevity of last night's bulletin did little to allay this, and this morning's first statement by the physicians is beng awaited anxiously.

The crowds outside the palace were large yesterday, ranging from several hundred persons in the forenoon to more than 1,000 at the hour the night bulletin was issued.

Commenting on the King's illness, the British Medical Journal, organ of the British Medical Association, said: "Our study of the bulletins, including the temperature records up to the time of going to press, leads us to infer that the force of the infection is gradually spending itself and with the maintenance of the patient's strength, we may look for a more favorable issue, though early and dramatic signs of improvement are unlikely."

Rumanian Employe Shot by Companion; Fired at a Partridge

Frank Reha, While On Hunting Expedition, Is Wounded in the Chest and Dies Eleven Hours Later in the Deloro Hospital.

INQUEST IS CALLED BY CORONER FOR TO-DAY JOHN WESLEY EMIGH IS BEING HELD IN CUSTODY

Companion Was Unable To Carry Home Wounded Man, Who Suffered Exposure and Loss of Blood While Waiting For Help.

MARMORA, Dec. 1 (Examiner Correspondence).—Frank Reha, Rumanian, aged about 26 years, an employe of the Deloro Refining Company, was shot by a fellow employee and companion, John Wesley Emigh, while on a hunting expedition about a mile north of Deloro, at 1.30 on Friday afternoon. At 12.10 this morning, Reha died in the Deloro Hospital, and Emigh has been taken into custody. The body has been ordered by the coroner, to be taken to the town hall in Deloro, where an inquest will be held this morning.

According to the story told by Emigh (who is a Canadian) the two men set out for an afternoon's shooting; Emigh carrying a shotgun. He had fired at a partridge, and Reha had come in the line of fire, receiving a major portion of the fine shot in his left hand, arm and breast.

After attempting to carry the wounded man, and being unable to do so, Emigh set out for help, and so it was that Reha spent considerable time exposed to the weather, bleeding profusely.

At the Deloro Hospital, Dr. H. Crawford of Marmora attended Reha's wounds and from word reaching Peterborough during the afternoon it was gathered that the shooting had been quite accidental and that the man was not seriously injured.

Emigh was placed in custody by Constable O'Neill of Deloro. He is a man of about twenty years of age. Reha leaves a wife and one child.

Inquest Delayed

Considerable time was taken this morning with preparations for the inquest which has now been set for Tuesday December 4, when witnesses likely to be called are Rodolph Pietz, Reha's widow, and George O'Neill, county constable.

Meanwhile, Coroner Dr. Harper, of Madoc empannelled a jury to-day and an autopsy is being conducted on the body. While no charge has been laid against Emigh, he is being held in custody.

The coroner's jury empanelled comprised the following: M. Kilpatrick, F. Leal, H. A. Hancke, M. J. Tamplin, Harry Loveless, Clifford Quinn, E. Shannon and R. Murray.

They viewed the body shortly after the noon hour and the autopsy immediately followed, so that the body might be released for burial.

MANY BASKETS OF FOWL SOLD

Upstairs Market Was Crowded With Buyers This Morning.

POTATOES $1.00.

The upstairs market was crowded with buyers this morning, while the outdoor section had very few patrons. The comfort of a stove which radiated heat for frosty fingers made the difference.

Fowl was very plentiful, selling anywhere from 23 to 28 cents a pound for chickens and hens, to 30 cents for ducks and 25 cents a pound for geese.

Butter was quoted from 43 to 45 cents a pound and eggs at 55 cents a dozen.

The sale upstairs included the usual miscellaneous articles, such as home-made cooking, painted flowers and everlastings, woollen mittens and Christmas cards. Reed and wicker baskets and novelties were also on sale and sweet grass pieces from the Indian reservation.

On the open section, pork sold at 16 and 18 cents a pound and lamb at 23 and 25 cents a pound, for front and hind sections.

Potatoes were $1 a bag, carrots 25 cents a peck, and white onions were 65 cents a peck. Little pickling pears sold at 40 cents a peck, and large pears were 75 cents a basket.

Tolman Sweet apples sold at $6.50 a barrel, and Spies were the same price. By the peck, the latter sold at 65 and 75 cents.

Little pigs were $7 a pair. Lake Ontario whitefish was priced at 15 cents a pound, fresh herrings at 11 cents, and salmon trout at 20 cents a pound.

Light honey was selling at 65 cents and $1.25 in five and ten-pound pails, and amber honey was 50 cents and $1. Sections were 15 and 30 cents for amber and light variety.

TWENTY-FIVE PERMITS ISSUED

Total Expenditure For Month Amounts To $29,360, Ahead of 1927.

SIX DWELLINGS.

The month of November, just concluded, witnessed considerable building activity in the city, some twenty-five permits being issued at the City Engineer's office. They represented an expenditure of $29,360.00, and made provision for the erection of eight garages, costing $5,820; 6 dwellings, totalling $20,000.00; and 11 miscellaneous, totalling $3,540.00.

Added to the net expenditure in the previous months, their total brought the total for the first eleven months of 1928 up to $608,812.00. The corresponding period of 1927 was in excess of this record, the total at the end of November in that year being $614,770.00.

While November of this year boasted only 25 permits as compared with 45 in the previous month, and while its total expenditure was only $29,360 as compared with $39,720 in the previous month, it was a better month for building than was November of 1927, when only 23 permits were issued for a total of $24,485.00, so that if December is similarly ahead of December, 1927, this year's total may stand fair comparison with that of last year.

Jurymen At Inquest Give Fees To Aid Family

LONDON, Ont., December 1.—A coroner's jury this afternoon, after inquiring into the fatal fire here last Friday that claimed the lives of two children, turned over their fees for the benefit of the bereaved family. In their verdict they stated Albert and Vincent Luciano had met death accidentally in the fire. In turning over their fees to the father, Joseph Luciano, of Manor Park, the jurors conveyed a sincere expression of sympathy. The jury recommended that Westminster Township Council lay water mains, and install alarm boxes on the principal streets in Manor Park. They also advocated the enforcement of some building restrictions.

PEOPLE OF WESTERN CANADA PROSPEROUS, SAYS PRESIDENT

E. W. Beatty Head of Canadian Pacific Railway Visits City.

MEETS INDUSTRIAL MEN.

Prairie Provinces Have Never Enjoyed Such Prosperity Since Confederation.

His visit to the city limited to one hour beyond 2:45 yesterday afternoon, E. W. Beatty, Chairman and President of the Canadian Pacific Railways drove to the city Council Chamber, addressed a gathering of leading manufacturers, city officials and private citizens, and after an extensive motor drive during which he was given an opportunity to inspect the local industrial plants, departed on his special train for Smith's Falls and thence to Montreal.

At the C.P.R. station, Mr. Beatty and party was welcomed by Alderman Macdonald, chairman of the reception committee, Mayor Denne and James Dutton, President of the Chamber of Commerce as well as by James W. Anderson and James Skinner, local railway officials. There was little of ceremony and a few minutes later, the distinguished visitor was speaking to the manufacturers, following a brief but courteous introduction by the chief magistrate. Other members of the visiting party were John J. Scully, General Manager of Eastern Lines; H. C. Grout, General superintendent, of Toronto; Marsh Brown, General Freight agent and H. Smith, Chief publicity agent.

President Beatty

"Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen: We had a different itinerary mapped out relative to our visit to Peterborough but your chief magistrate had his way" began Mr. Beatty, smiling. "As you are probably aware, this trip which has carried us through Ontario, is one of our ordinary inspections of our properties, but the important thing is that we meet the industrial men of each city and learn their opinions of their local conditions, with a view to finding out what we can do to help them.

"Throughout the trip, I have been agreeably surprised at the reports of good conditions which the manufacturers have given. I presume that similar satisfactory conditions pertain in this city and that your business is on an upward trend."

Progress in West

Mr. Beatty made the chief subject of his address, a recent visit to the prairie provinces, reviewing conditions there, both in the past and present. He declared that at no time since Confederation have the people of Western Canada enjoyed such prosperity with millions of dollars of new money coming into the country as the result of last year's splendid harvest. "All next Spring, the provinces of Ontario and Quebec will feel the interest of that enormous crop," said he, going on to point out that the possibilities of future crop failures were being eliminated by the use, each year, of 6 to 8 per cent of new farm land, and by a scientific principle which indicates that the Western provinces are now entering upon a cycle of moisture that will make the next quarter century a more successful one than the past quarter of a century.

Resources Being Discovered

How the harvesting of large wheat crops in the Peace River district has dispelled the old illusion that wheat could not be grown north of the C.P.R., and the discovery that the prairie provinces have, extending across their more northerly districts, vast mineral wealth, were called attention to by Mr. Beatty. He pointed to the gradual evolution from grain growing to mixed farming and to manufacturing, particularly in Manitoba, which would have its economic effect, though farming, Mining and Manufacturing would still maintain that order of importance.

In conclusion, Mr. Beatty declared that "I am here to find out about conditions for myself and we will endeavor to merit your support in and around the city of Peterborough."

Meets Citizens

Mayor Denne, in closing the meeting proper, voiced his regret that Mr. Beatty could not remain for a longer visit, but hoped that he might return, possibly next summer, and enjoy a trip through the lakes district. He then invited the manufactureres and citizens generally to meet the dstinguished visitor, and when this had been concluded, the party set out on the afore-mentioned trip about the city.

SCOTS HONOR PATRON SAINT

Scotland Cherishes the Memory of Saint Andrew—Paid Homage Yesterday.

BRIEF HISTORY.

Peterborough Scots last night joined with their fellow-countrymen all over the world in rendering homage to St. Andrew, like their native born fellow-citizens of Canada can claim for their patron saint the distinction of being one of the great figures mentioned in the Bible. Generations ago, the French of Lower Canada elevated St. John the Baptist to the position of patron saint of Canada. If Canada thus venerates the memory of the forerunner of our Saviour, Scotland, in cherishing the memory of Saint Andrew, regards him with pride as Christ's first inquirer, Christ's first convert and Christ's first missionary.

According to the ancient "Chronicle of the Picts and Scots," it was in 761 A.D. that "ye relikis of Sanct Andrew, ye Apostle cam in Scotland," and it was not long before he became the Patron Saint of the whole country, ousting in so doing, St. Rule or Regulus (Gaelic Rimhinn), a bold and devoted monk who had a prior right to the honor, as he was the first to journey from the Continent to convert the Picts and Scots three centuries before the arrival of the saintly relics.

The earliest accounts of the Saint's legends and cultus are contained in three manuscripts. The oldest of these is the Colbertine MSS. in Paris; next in point of time comes the Harleian MSS. in the British Museum, while the Breviary of Aberdeen comes third in the list. These vary considerably in detail, but in broad outlines they are substantially the same.

From Constantinople.

They all agree that the relics were carried under supernatural guidance from Constantinople to the old Pictish "Muckross" (Cape or Promontory) which became in course of time the modern St. Andrew's, famous as the site of the great University. An Irish monk, a contemporary of St. Columba, is credited with having preserved the relics for future generations. Be that as it may, the relics were evidently highly venerated from the time of their first appearance in Scotland. A very ancient and highly prized Scottish document, Wyntoun's Chronicle, tells us that:

"Syne Sanct Andrewys relics there
With honour great ressaved were."

Wyntoun, it must be noted, is to be regarded as speaking with considerable authority, as he was himself a canon of the Augustinia priory of St. Andrews.

Cross in the Heavens.

King Hungus, one of those early Celtic kings of Scotland whose names are almost lost in the thick cloud of legend and tradition that hangs over early British history, was the first to be convinced that St. Andrew had a special interest in the affairs of the land that had housed his relics. The legend which purports to explain the king's conviction is related in Leslie's History of Scotland. According to this author, the cross of St. Andrew appeared in the heaven on the night before a battle between the Scots and the Saxons. As the Scots got the better of their opponents, they not unnaturally gave the credit of the victory to the Saint, and to show their gratitude in practical fashion they went barefooted to the Church of Saint Andrews, heavily endowed it and vowed to adopt the emblem of St. Andrew as that of the nation. Hence the white diagonal stripes on the blue background which formed the Scottish standard for so many centuries and which were incorporated in the Union Jack as we know it to-day.

SOLOIST AT ST. PAUL'S.

As will be noticed on the church page of to-day's Examiner, St. Paul's Presbyterian Church congregation will to-morrow listen to Miss Pearl Brock, contralto soloist, of Toronto. Miss Brock is also a radio artist of repute, and friends will be glad to hear her in St. Paul's Church at both services.

SEE CANADA FIRST.

The twin coastal cities, Vancouver and Victoria, at this time of the year appeal with endless charm to the holidaymakers, wanderers, and tired business men and women, for the weather is ideal and the foliage in the gardens and parks of wondrous color. Not a day passes, too, but sees the twelve golf courses gay with happy and enthusiastic players while riding in the early mornings and afternoons is particularly favored. There are splendid motor highways on Vancouver Island, and innumerable ones running into Vancouver City from all directions. The winter season's attractions include theatres and concerts of the highest calibre, while the Hotel Vancouver at Vancouver and the world-renowned Empress at Victoria are the centres of the social and commercial activities of the two cities and districts. During the winter the Canadian Pacific Railway operates the only through train to Vancouver from Toronto. The "Vancouver Express" leaves the Union Station every night at 9.00 and reaches the coast four days later. Comfortable and convenient connections can be made with all western points by using this famous train.

NEGLECTED ANAEMIA.

Often Leads To a Decline—Enrich the Blood By Taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

In their early teens it is quite common for girls to outgrow their strength, and mothers should carefully watch the health of their daughters at this time, for it is when strength is sapped by rapid growth that anaemia develops. The first signs may be noticed by peevishness, languor and headaches. The face grows pale, breathlessness and palpitation follow, with low spirits.

At the first symptom of anaemia mothers should act at once. Neglected anaemia often leads to decline, but if you see that your daughter's blood is enriched there need be no cause for anxiety. The finest blood enricher ever discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The pure, red blood created by these pills will quickly banish all signs of anaemia. They will build up your girl's health and ensure her a robust, girlhood. Give your daughter a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now. Make her strong like thousands of girls who have been rescued from the clutches of anaemia by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Here is a bit of proof. Miss Mary Venditti, Catamount, N.B., says: "Three years ago while attending a convent, I studied very hard to graduate. The result was I became very nervous and got so thin and pale my teachers thought they would have to send me home. I took different kinds of medicine which my parents sent me, but my condition remained unchanged. At last one of my teachers gave me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I had hardly finished it when I could feel an improvement in my condition. I continued the use of the pills for some time longer, and I can hardy tell all the good they did me. I gained in strength and weight, and the color returned to my cheeks, and at the end of the term I graduate. I never fail to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to my friends and acquaintances when a tonic is needed."

You can get these pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GRAIN MEN PLAN LARGE EXHIBITION

$250,000 Will Be Given in Prizes at World's Grain Exposition in Regina.

50,000 EXPECTED.

Sixty-five Delegates Make Initial Plans With Agricultural Departments.

TORONTO, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—One of the greatest undertakings along any avenue of Canadian national life received its formal launching here yesterday and began a four-year journey that will lead to the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference at Regina, Saskatchewan, in 1932.

Fostered in the grain-producting provinces of Canada, approved and directed by the Dominion and Provincial departments of agriculture, the project not only embraces every branch of agriculture and commerce within the Dominion, but has become world-wide in scope.

The date for this world conference—the first event of its kind ever held—has been set by the committe on organization for August 1st to 13th, 1932.

Delegates to yesterday's meetings, under the chairmanship of the Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Canadian minister of agriculture, came upon invitation from that department of the government and from the provincial departments of agriculture throughout the country. Following the close of the Royal Winter Fair on Thursday, sixty-five delegates were in attendance at yesterday's gatherings and entered into an exhaustive discussion of the preliminary report of the organization committee. This report was adopted with few changes, and several recommendations, particularly in regard to prize awards, were placed before the committee.

$250,000 in Prizes

The committee announced a minimum of $250,000 to be distributed among prize winners, and it is expected that this total will be materially added to through further contributions. Allocation of the prize amounts among the various classes of exhibits brought forth considerable discussion. There was a general feeling that the first prize of $1,000 for specific classes of exhibits, notably hard red spring wheat, was insufficient. The committee was asked to raise this amount to a minimum of $2,500 and to cut down the proposed 104 other prize awards in this class to a smaller number. Should further contributions warrant, it was recommended that the first prize money in this class be further increased. The meeting further recommended that the committee make an effort to grade the full prize list accordingly. It is not anticipated that the number of prizes in each division will suffer any drastic reduction. It is the announced intention of the committee to encourage all grain growers throughout the world, the smallest non-professional as well as the world-renowned professional exhibitor.

It was announced by the committee that enquiries regarding the world conference have already been received from distant parts of the world, including China, India and New Zealand.

At yesterday morning's session the delegates took up the appointment of the numerous committees that will engage in the promotion and operation of the conference, while the afternoon meeting was given over wholly to a discussion of the classification of exhibits and prize awards.

Wide Range of Exhibits

A wide range of exhibits, in order that all parts of the world may compete, will be shown at Regina four years hence. Included on the list as announced by the committee are: wheat, oats, barley, corn, rye, buckwheat, rice, millet, field peas, field beans, soy beans, flax, alfalfa, clover, grasses, sunflower and field root seeds. In most instances the committee calls for an exhibit of 50 pounds. An expert staff of judges, with every qualification for an international show of this kind, was assured by the committee.

It is planned to arrange accommo-

Better Than Any Diet

AY less attention to what you eat; not one person in a thousand need diet; or ever really has indigestion. Acidity, flatulence and heartburn are caused by excess stomach acid and food fermentation.

Following a hasty lunch, or too hearty a dinner, a little "Pape's Diapepsin," instantly neutralizes excess acidity, stops that fermentation, and soothes and heals the acid-inflamed stomach lining as if by magic. Your recovery is quick, and complete. Make a special point of getting a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapepsin" from your druggist today, and so follow the example of millions all over the world who use "Pape's Diapepsin" to end indigestion and allied stomach troubles.

With "Pape's Diapepsin" handy you can eat and enjoy whatever you fancy without fear of pain or discomfort to follow. At any rate, it's worth the trial, for lots of folks have found a new freedom at the table.

"What a Satisfaction to be Free of Indigestion"

"I wonder why so many people suffer from indigestion when they could so easily avoid it. But then I did the same before I found out about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I suppose I should tell others about them."

"It is the old story of an overworked liver struggling to filter the poisons from the blood. Too much eating when not getting plenty of outdoor exercise. The bowels get sluggish and the whole process of digestion is held up."

"Instead of being digested, the food ferments and produces gas which crowds about the heart and produces most alarming symptoms. You feel as though you had not a friend in the world."

"But it is wonderful how quickly the clouds clear away when you use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. The liver and bowels are aroused to action, the burden is lifted from the kidneys and soon you are feeling fine. Then a pill once or twice a week will keep you that way."

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

FEW MEN HAVE ASCENDED SO HIGH in spiritual aspirations as Israel's Shepherd King. Think of the matchless Psalms which he has left as one of the richest possessions of the whole human race. If you want help in expressing your holiest emotions you will never fail to find it in some part or other of the Psalms. Should you, for any reason, be down in the depths wandering amid the chilling shadows of unbelief, you will discover in some of the Psalms that others have been there before you and that they, even as you may, have found a way of escape to the sunlight and the mountain peaks. Whatever the state of your soul you will find something eminently suited to its mood in this choice portion of the Word of God.

It has been the lot of few men, fortunately, to descend to such depths of sin as were met in the pit into which David fell and that entirely through his own folly. Let us draw the curtain of silence over such times, being, as most of us are, all too conscious of the weakness of our own make-up and how apt we, too, are to fall into folly and sin.

Let this be laid to the credit of David that no man has been more penitential. If you have any doubt regarding this fact just go quietly aside with your Bible and read the Fifty-first Psalm. It is only repeating what has been said times out of number when we say that nothing finer is to be found in any language. There it stands all ready for our own sad requirements. If you want help in expressing your deepest regret after you have yielded to some sinful impulse you will get it in this gem of penitential poetry.

INTENSELY HUMAN.

There was something intensely human about David. Perhaps it might help some of us to appreciate this fact more if we laid emphasis on the scriptural statement that he was "a man" after God's own heart. In his flights of feeling after God there is much of inspiration for all of us. And in his fall from grace he is a warning to the best of us! "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he also fall." Those who live in glass houses should be mighty slow about throwing stones in case they take unto themselves the characteristics of the boomerang.

The best of us have no room for conceit, for we have little or nothing to be conceited about. And the worst of us need not despair, for God does not deal with us as so many of our fellows would be all too ready to do. His mercy is tender-mercy, and His kindness is loving-kindness.

Don't demand any more from David than you feel able to render yourself. Sound the depths of your being and you may have good reason to shudder at the awful possibilities of your own passions. When you do this you will be more ready to sympathize with all who are said to have sinned. Let him that is without sin cast the first stone, states a principle which is as much in force today as it was when Jesus first uttered it.

ONE DAY IN A MAN'S LIFE.

David lived to a ripe old age in the course of which there were some red-letter days. But there was one day out of the many which might very easily be repeated in the experience of any of us. The history of that day was the history of a tragedy. In it he made three mistakes.

In the first place he began the day out of touch with God. To know this it is not necessary to read it in so many words. Some things don't need to be advertised. They advertise themselves.

To get my meaning you must read in the 13th chapter of 1 Chronicles. In the first fourteen verses you get the whole story. As you read it you should not fail to read between the lines. Doing this you will have no difficulty in seeing that he made the fatal mistake of setting out to meet the day's experiences without tarrying long enough to feel the touch of God upon his spirit.

ONE STEP FOLLOWS ANOTHER.

The man after God's own heart never could have made the two other mistakes which went to make up the tragedy of that day if he had commenced that day in conscious contact with the invisible Presence. It is the worst kind of folly to begin any day out of touch with God. It is bad because of what we miss in fellowship. And fellowship is the rare privilege of every soul trusting Christ as Lord and Saviour.

Let us at the beginning of each new day go forth to meet every demand in conscious contact with God. Doing this there will come to our hearts a peace that will play the part of a garrison holding that sacred place against all the attacks likely to be made upon it. And along with that peace there will come a purity which in turn will bring with it the vision of the Eternal. It will be a purity of motive and of mood such as we never can have too much of. There will also be given a power such as we are too often strangers to. A power to rise above all that is petty and mean; a power that keeps us out of the depths and the darkness to walk on the uplands amid the sunlight.

When we allow ourselves to begin the day out of touch with God we run the risk of failure and injury. We have no protection against the wiles of Satan.

IS GOD SECOND?

David's next mistake was made when he put God second. He said, "If it seem good to you, and if it be of the Lord." It would seem as if he had been more concerned for the approval of the people than for that of God. That couldn't have happened if he hadn't started the day out of touch with God.

I am inclined to think from a fairly wide experience that this is a very common mistake in church life. It mostly is, "If it seem good to you." With multitudes of church members God is just a name, a part of the creed! If He gets any place in our plane it usually is second place. We don't seem to be very much concerned about getting His mind. At best that only comes after the popular approval has been sought. And even then it is more of a gesture than anything else.

OVER-STEPPING GOD'S WORD.

The third mistake that David made that day was that he over-stepped God's Word. In all his preparations he had overlooked one point, and that an all-essential one. God had laid down a certain method of carrying the Ark of the Covenant. In Deut. 10:8, we are told, "At that time the Lord separated the tribe of Levi to bear the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord." The Ark was to be carried on the shoulders of men separated to that work, and not placed in a conveyance of any kind. Perhaps old-fashioned people shook their heads at this new cart, and ventured a protest. But they would speedily be silenced by the voice of the majority. It would be urged that the old way was all very well for days gone by, but it was necessary to move with the times, and adopt a more modern and expeditious method of transporting the Ark.

When the Divine command was disregarded there was lost that sense of sanctity which ought to pertain to the service of God. When we are, or seem to be, wise beyond what is written we lose infinitely more than we seem to gain.

WHAT MATTERS AFTER ALL.

The possibility of the Word of God having something to say never seems to be considered by hosts of those who profess that He is Lord. You have only got to listen to the way in which so many church people will reason to see this all too plainly illustrated. The fact that God has spoken does not seem to matter. It is one of the worst mistakes we can Less Noise, Please!

ALL the greatest work of this world goes on noiselessly. God, both in nature and in grace works silently. So the best work any of us do is what we do without noise. The best part of any good man's life is his influence—that strange, impalpable something which goes out for evermore from his character like fragrance from a flower, like light ways in silence, without words.

THE Master's benediction is upon those that hunger and thirst after righteousness. It is the longing soul that grows. It is the soul's reaching Godward.

A Matter Of Common Sense

WE was no preacher of some old school of theology appealing to the emotions of men and calling them to a penitent-form to make confession of their sins and stupidities. No, he was that much talked of individual, a hard-headed business man. For that reason there are those who will accept his words without question, although ready to quibble over anything coming out of the sacred Scriptures. To such, as well as to others, the following words are addressed:

We are all, more or less, the creatures of habit. That much admitted, it ought to be interesting to know that at the top of a list of life-shortening habits, an actuary of a great insurance company puts heavy drinking of alcoholic beverages and over-indulgence in foods.

This authority says that the heavy diner or drinker is sure of a short life, but seldom a merry one, because the conditions under which he lives preclude the full enjoyment of either physical or mental well-being. The abstainer has a fifteen to twenty per cent. better chance than the moderate drinker, and a forty to eighty per cent. better chance than the heavy drinker.

Of course, it would be foolish to argue from this that being an abstainer is a guarantee of a long life, for many other factors enter into the problem, but it does mean that, other things being equal, that is the advantage the abstainer has. As for smoking, it is only excessive indulgence in tobacco that insurance companies regard as serious.

Some will find it easy to pass on with a shrug of the shoulders and some such statement as "the man is simply preaching," but, before doing so, this, it should be observed, is not the statement of a man who set out to prove either one thing or the other, but, rather, of a careful student of statistics—one with whom the study is not a fad, but a matter of business.

Quit digging your grave with your teeth while burning the incense of your favorite weed and vainly trying to quench your thirst with ever-increasing draughts of strong drink. This is not so much a matter of temperance as it is a matter of common sense. —A. F.

A Pen Picture

FOUR men are engaged in some solemn rite. One of them who takes the principal part and whom one might expect to have seen in the attire of a priest is not so attired, yet he is performing strictly priestly functions. They all take part in this, and much depends upon it—possibly even their lives—for see how they scan the face and actions of their leader! When he begins to pray they are silent; perhaps from their hearts earnest supplications for pardon rise to a merciful God, yet even these prayers are not their hope. No, all is centred on the prayer now being offered by this one man. And he? —what are his feelings? Sorrowful but not terrified, he presents his request, and God hears and sends a double answer—pardon to them, peace to them. While praying for others the sorrow gradually loses its hold and his face shows that a new and blessed peace is taking possession of his heart.

Look at this same man a little later on. He is now the centre of an admiring crowd; the guests fill the banqueting chamber. It is not exactly an occasion of festivity, for an outside show of affected sympathy is to be noticed in their expressions and attitudes. This is not very deep, however, and their appetites are not in the least impaired by feelings of compassion. Now they take their leave and some substantial offerings remain, touching mementos of affectionate and disinterested neighbours. Yet these are not the cause of that settled peaceful look upon his face. NO! he remembers that it all began when, forgetful of self, he prayed for others.

The key to the previous Pen Picture of Bible History is to be found in Jer. 19. I wonder if, as the result of their own reading, some of the readers discovered it?

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

I WONDER whether any of you young folks have ever heard the story of a gentleman who advertised for a coachman? Well, this gentleman wanted a coachman; and when applicants presented themselves his first question was, "How close to the edge of the precipice can you drive a machine without going over?" One coarhman said, "A yard." Another said, "A foot." A third answered, "I always try to keep as far away as possible." "You're the man for me," exclaimed the gentleman; and he engaged him forthwith.

You cannot live a day and not touch some other life. Wherever you go your shadow falls on others, and they are either better or worse for your presence. Our influence depends upon what we are more than upon what we do.

* * *

We need to take care that no shadow of ourselves, of our pride, our ambition, our self-seeking fall upon our work for Christ.

He Has Moved

WHAT kind of compassion is it which does not move a man? What kind of a mainspring would it be in a watch which did not move the hands? What kind of steam would it be in a boiler which did not move the piston-rods? All the great emotions of the soul are "motor powers." But in some souls these emotions are about like a little trickle of sap running out of a maple-tree trying to turn the waterwheel of a great big mill. You say you don't feel compassion? Well, doesn't it drive your feet and hands? Feet, hands, heart, head,—everything, ought to commence to jump and whir (just as things do when the motorman turns on the current), if the compassion is genuine. Compassion is a motor power or nothing. Don't ever say you are a kind man unless your kindness moves you.'

Microscopic Holiness

NOTHING but microscopic holiness will satisfy the inspection of our life by "those that are without." Microscopic holiness is both a higher and harder attainment in grace than many imagine. Higher, because it is fidelity in the little things which alone makes the perfect Christian character; harder, because it requires far more trust, watchfulness, and prayer to live so that the life will bear the minutest scrutiny, than to present to the world an average specimen of Christianity It takes more grace to make a Daniel, in whom his enemies could find "none occasion nor fault," than to make a martyr.

—John Plain.

What God Asks

GOD asks not great things; He asks only simple faithfulness, the quiet doing of what He allots.

"'Tis not thy work the Master needs, but thee—
The obedient spirit, the believing heart,
The child obedient, trustful, glad to be Where'er He will, to stay or to depart." —John Plain.

Wandering Minds

ONE way to recollect the mind easily in the time of prayer, and preserve it more in tranquility is not to let it wander too far at other times. You should keep it strictly in the presence of God; and being accustomed to think of Him often you will find it easy to keep your mind calm in the time of prayer, or at least to recall it from its wanderings. —John Plain.

Without Regret or Fretting

THE true way to live is to bring each duty that comes to our hand, our wisest thought and our best skill, doing what appears to us at the time to be the right thing to do, and then leaving it, never regretting nor fretting about results.

—John Plain.

Do we know God? Not His acts, or His working, but Himself? His mind? His will? His voice? His heart?

* * *

If you would be blessed, get many seasons of prayer into your busy, harrassed, tempted, struggling life. It is in these quiet moments that you really grow.

Perfect Forgetfulness

TO give heart and mind to God, so that they are ours no longer —to do good without being conscious of it—to pray ceaselessly and without effort, as we breathe—to love without stopping to reflect upon our feelings—to go ever forward without pausing to measure our progress—such is the perfect forgetfulness of self, which casts us upon God.

To live the Christ-glorifying life in the station in which God has placed us, we individually need to be filled with the Spirit.

Characteristics of Modernism.

MODERNISM is pre-eminently distinguished by two outstanding qualities, antiquity and failure. It contains not one single NEW element. Masquerading as a product of recent intellectual effort and as a result of new discovery, it is in reality moss-covered and dust-covered with age. Every objection now offered was presented during the infancy of the Church of God. Anti-supernaturalism as related to Jesus Christ was at the forefront in Ebionism, Arianism, Sabellianism, when the church was still weak in numbers, though strong in faith. The deity of Jesus Christ was attacked with all the parade of learning and vehemence of opposition and with every argument that is offered to-day.—"Jesus Christ at the Crossroads." —A. Z. Conrad.

AN AMUSING MIX-UP.

The fact that an English publication printed a statement written by Premier Ferguson of Ontario and credited it to Premier Mackenzie King, has led to a most amusing mix-up.

The article criticized some of the restrictions affecting British immigration and because it was thought that Premier King was the author the Mail and Empire immediately assailed the Dominion Premier.

On the other hand other papers more friendly to Mr. King hastened to praise the statement and the suggestion contained therein.

And neutral journals having no particular axes to grind joined in the chorus, one way or the other.

Now it transpires that the Prime Minister of Canada had nothing to do with the article and some of the newspaper who based their treatment of the question in the belief that he was the author feel that this is a cruel world.

Mr. Ferguson, of course, is enjoying the mistake.

"It was good sound doctrine" is his only comment on the situation.

PLACING THE GUNS.

The appointment of a committee of ex-service men to co-perate with the City Council in placing the war trophies in the best possible location in Confederation Square should be satisfactory all round.

There are many suggestions to as how the guns should be placed. Rev. Father Costello, for example, suggesting at Thursday night's meeting that one gun be stationed at each side of the war memorial and the third in front, and his proposal met with much approval.

Another plan that has been suggested to The Examiner and is passed on for the consideration of the committees is that the three guns might be grouped round the flag pole recently erected at the rear of the memorial, where they would be prominently displayed and give a military background to the memorial while at the same time the scheme of beautifying the park would not in the least be interfered with.

Public opinion has shown itself almost solidly in favor of retaining the guns in Confederation Square and it should not be difficult to arrive at an agreement as to the exact location of the trophies.

THE VETERANS' PROTEST.

The returned soldiers of Peterborough at their mass meeting in the Legion Hall on Thursday night unanimously passed a resolution protesting against the granting of permission for the erection of a service station on George street opposite Confederation Square.

As citizens of Peterborough and as ex-service men, particularly interested in the beautification of Confederation Square where the war memorial is and the famous captured guns will be, the veterans are justified in their protest, and it would seem to be in the general interest.

There are surely sites enough in Peterborough for service stations without breaking in on this block, and there seems little doubt that the returned soldiers in passing such a resolution without a dissenting voice have expressed public opinion very accurately.

The Examiner has no quarrel with service stations; they exist to supply a public need, and, therefore, are a convenience, but it would be a mistake to allow such a building to go up on this site, where it would contribute neither to the appearance or the traffic safety of the neighborhood.

NICE TREATMENT FOR A GOOD CUSTOMER.

The last official pronouncement of Herbert Hoover as a servant of the United States Government before his inauguration as President is the annual report of the Commerce Department, stressing the fact that Canada has succeeded Great Britain as the best customer of the United States.

That report, read in conjunction with Mr. Hoover's last campaign speech, in which he promised a higher tariff wall against Canadian agricultural products, should cause some thought.

It is not the usual practice of business enterprises to offer such treatment to the best customers, and Mr. Hoover rather prides himself upon being a keen resident of business methods as applied to the science of government.

Yet his promise was definite and already his supporters are clamoring for it to be put into effect.

Thus we find Senator Capper, Republican, of Kansas, issuing a statement this week in which he demands the immediate enactment of an emergency tariff act devoted solely to the upward revision of the rates applying to agricultural products.

"There should be a higher tariff on meat products and dairy products, on live stock, on wool, cotton, grain and grain products, and oil seeds," declares the Kansas Senator.

Not the best way in the world to treat a good customer, surely, and it may eventually develop that Canadians, barred from selling in the American market, may grow tired of buying in that market.

A higher tariff against Canadian products would undoubtedly be, as the Globe puts it, "a challenge to good nature."

THE BRITISH EMPIRE AND MR. HOOVER.

Notwithstanding the curt and hectoring tone of President Coolidge's Armistice Day speech, a speech which entirely ignored everything that Britain has done or tried to do since 1918 to promote world peace, certain British statesmen, notably Lord Robert Cecil, are still talking about a naval agreement with the United States. More than that, certain British newspapers have suddenly discovered that Mr. Hoover will be altogether different from Mr. Coolidge, and they picture him almost as just waiting to get into the White House to throw the arms of the U.S.A. around the neck of the British Empire.

When, we wonder, will British statesmen and British publicists (with a few notable exceptions) learn wisdom about the United States!

[illegible] did they get the idea that the United States under Hoover will be any different, so far as its world policy is concerned, than it was under Coolidge, or Harding, or Roosevelt, or Wilson? Mr. Hoover sat in the Cabinet with Mr. Harding; he was the close associate and counsellor of Mr. Coolidge. Are these London statesmen and editors such innocents abroad as to think that what Mr. Coolidge said on Armistice Day was not known beforehand by Mr. Hoover? Do they think that the head of an expiring Administration would lay down a policy for an incoming Administration without the head of the new Administration knowing something about it? If they think that, then it isn't any wonder they have such a propensity for talking nonsense about American opinion.

As a matter of fact, what Mr Coolidge said in his Armistice Day speech was little more than an echo of some of the speeches delivered by Mr. Hoover during his election campaign. Take this as an illustration from his speech of acceptance:

"We have been and we are particularly desirous of furthering the limitation of armaments. But in the meantime we know that in an armed world there is only one certain guarantee of freedom—and that is preparedness for defense. It is solely to defend ourselves, for the protection of our citizens, that we maintain armament. No clearer evidence of this can exist than the unique fact that we have fewer men in army uniform to-day than we have in police uniforms, and that we maintain a standing invitation to the world that we are always ready to limit our naval armament in proportion as the other naval nations will do likewise. We earnestly wish that the burdens and dangers of armament upon every home in the world might be lessened. But we must and shall maintain our naval defense and our merchant marine in the strength and efficiency which will yield to us at all times the primary assurance of liberty, that is, of national safety."

But that wasn't all that Mr. Hoover said during the recent election. Let Lord Robert Cecil and the British press study what he said at Boston. Let them read what he said there about the United States effort in the war, about reparations and war debts, about an American navy and merchant marine. And let them note the tone of severity with which he said it.

The stark truth is that Mr. Hoover is no more pro-British than he is pro-Italian. He is simply pro-American. He was pro-American when, a few years ago, he took action in respect of the world's rubber supply which Britain ought to remember. He is pro-American when he talks of barring Canadian products from the United States for the benefit of the United States farmer. He is pro-American when, despite his advocacy of the League of Nations eight years ago, he now heads the party of isolation. He is, in a word, first, last and all the time for America.

No one can blame him for that. No one can criticize him if, as an American, he wants the United States to be strong enough to protect the liberty and the security of her people. No one can blame him if, as an American, he promotes policies in respect of war debts, shipping, tariffs and other things which look chiefly to the prosperity of Americans. The first duty of a Government is to look after the interests of its own citizens.

What is absurd, and wrong, what is really harmful to Anglo-American relations, is this constant and utterly unwarranted assumption by certain British statesmen—and they have their counterpart here in Canada—that, all their history and talk notwithstanding, the Government and people of the United States are anxious in some way to help the British Empire; that they want to treat as a people apart from the rest of the world. Not even the "last ounce of flesh" terms which Washington imposed upon England, contrasted with the much easier bargains made with France and Italy, have helped remove that obsession.

There is not a shred of evidence to show that Mr. Hoover will be more friendly to the British Empire than Mr. Coolidge was. More than that, there is not a shred of evidence to show that the American people will want him to be. If anybody doubts that, all he has to do to get over his misapprehension is to read the reaction of the American press to the Coolidge Armistice Day pronouncement.

So far as Mr. Hoover is concerned, his whole record in office, so far as it has been revealed by his speeches and writings and official acts, indicates that he is an economic Imperialist, a thorough-going believer in United States industrial supremacy; and we venture to suggest that it is in that role that the British Empire will have to meet him.

So far as Canada is concerned, the whole history of her relations with the United States ought to have taught her long ago that the one way to deal with the American people is to meet them with the firm conviction that they are a shrewd, able business people primarily out for themselves. In meeting them in that way, we are convinced, the British Empire will be doing far more for permanent mutual respect and friendship than by absurd choruses of sugary nonsense about "hands across the sea."—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Two Toronto men have won the horseshoe match at the Royal Winter Fair. Who said this barnyard golf was a rural sport?

It cannot truthfully be said that the municipal ring is full of hats.

The woollen research work to be carried out in Ontario should be of great value to Peterborough firms in this field of industry. The development is hailed as the dawn of a new era for the woollen trades.

Wm. Newman, M.P.P., says that New Ontario is a "paradise for dairying." He and Hon. Wm. Finlayson seem to be twins in their admiration of that part of the Province.

Some idea of the growth of the newsprint industry in Canada can be obtained from the fact that the fifteen companies represented at the conferences in Montreal and Quebec have a combined capitalization of $600,000,000.

That beer in the river will probably make Pa Musky think that Christmas has come early this year.

And now it transpires that it was Premier Ferguson, and not Premier King, who suggested cutting off some of the restrictions affecting British immigration. It's a good idea, nevertheless.

A Harvard professor declares that he has found the centre of the universe in the milky way. He gives out this information as the cream of much observation.—Brantford Expositor.

A Thought

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

A father may turn his back on his child, brothers, and sisters may become inveterate enemies, husbands may desert their wives, wives their husbands, but a mother's love endures through all; in good repute, in bad repute, in the face of the world's condemnation, a mother still loves on, and still hopes that her child may turn from his evil ways and repent. Still she remembers the infant smiles that once filled her bosom with rapture, the merry laugh, the joyful shout of his childhood, the opening promise of his youth; and she can never be brought to think him all unworthy.—Washington Irving.

GOD'S MINUTE.

I am the Lord thy God, which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee.—Isa. 48: 17.

O God and Father of all the families of the earth, Thou art worthy of our daily love and constant gratitude. Thou knowest we can never be other than children crying to Thee for good, raiment and shelter for our sustenance and protection. We stretch our hands toward Thee to be led through paths we cannot know, beside which temptations lurk and snares are set. Deliver us, we beseech Thee, from the evil one.

Help us to appreciate our earthly family relations, established and wondrously blessed by Thee. Grant that our home may be kept in peace and goodwill among all of its members by that love for one another which casts out suspicion and fear. We consecrate it with all its interests to Thy care and service, that the yearning of our hearts for Thy approval and indwelling may bring to us godliness with contentment.

To-day, in our family worship, we confess our sins that He Who is faithful may forgive and cleanse us from all unrighteousness. As we go forth to our individual tasks, give us courage, strength, patience and that wisdom which cometh down from above, which is first gentle, peaceable, easily to be entreated, full of good works. All of these blessings we ask in the name of Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen.

The Question Box

L.A.M. Q.—Is there any outstanding Canadian War Memorial?

A.—A Canadian Memorial was recently unveiled at Mons in Belgium as a tablet of remembrance by the Canadian Battlefields Memorial Commission in the porch of the Hotel de Ville commemorating the entry of the Canadian corps on November 11, 1918. 48 Canadian soldiers took part in the ceremony as they marched through the city with an escort of Belgium troops. It is a symbol of the common sufferings and glories which united Canada and Belgium in their hours of trial and triumph.

BROKEN

A Story of Revenged Love, by Ruby M. Ayres

CHAPTER XLVI

THE STORY THUS FAR:

GILES CHITTENHAM returns to London from the United States—where he has contracted a secret and unhappy marriage with SADIE BARROW—to help wind up the affairs of his younger half brother, RODNEY ARDRON, who has recently killed himself for love of JULIE FARROW. In Switzerland, through his friend, LOMBARD, Giles meets Julie and determines to make her love him and then spurn her to avenge his brother. But later, after they have found out that they really love each other, he finds out that she is a cousin of the other Julie Farrow whom his brother loved. As he cannot marry her, she plunges into a wild, reckless life, and finally decides to marry a rich, older man named SCHOFIELD. Lombard tells Chittenham that unless he gives him money he will tell Schofield that Chittenham and Julie spent a night together in Switzerland. Chittenham decides to get a divorce from Sadie and marry Julie and Julie tells Schofield she cannot marry him. But then Sadie goes blind, and Chittenham feels that he cannot leave her.

Chittenham walked back to his hotel.

It was long after midnight now and there were many motorcars and taxicabs speeding along the streets, carrying people homewards from dances and cabarets.

Giles wondered what Julie was doing. Lying awake perhaps, hating and despising him—the thought was like a knife being turned in his heart. And he was tied hand and foot by the claims of a helpless woman who would walk in darkness all the rest of her life.

Tired out as he was, Chittenham did not close his eyes all night, but towards early morning, just as the gray daylight was showing between the curtains, he fell into a restless doze, to be awakened almost immediately, it seemed, by the insistent ringing of the telephone by his elbow.

He started up giddily, and glanced at his watch. It was ten o'clock and it seemed only a few moments ago that the hands had pointed to five, and he wondered hopelessly if the hours would ever pass.

He took up the receiver.

"Hallo—yes! Hallo! Who is it?"

"Is that you, Mr. Chittenham? Bim Lennox speaking."

"Yes—oh, yes, Miss Lennox!"

Giles was fully awake now, and yet the power of thought seemed to have deserted him, although in his subconscious mind he knew quite well what this peremptory call meant.

Something had happened to Julie. Something had happened to Julie. Something had happened to Julie.

Like a mechanical hammer the conviction beat into him, bruising him with its hopeless certainty.

Something had happened to Julie—something terrible—something tragic and unalterable which would never permit him to see her again.

Something—

"Hallo, hallo!" It was Bim's voice at the 'phone again.

"Oh, is that you, Mr. Chittenham?"

"Yes—yes—I'm speaking. What is it, Miss Lennox? Is anything—is—?"

His lips refused to frame the question hammering against them for utterance.

"Julie's gone." Bim's voice was very clear and quiet, and yet its underlying agitation was unmistakable.

"I came back to town early this morning. I hadn't heard from her for some days, and I was worried. I came up on the early train. I was in the flat by half-past nine, but she had gone. There was a note left for me—a note to be posted. She does not say where she is going—she just says she is not coming back any more."

"Oh, Mr. Chittenham, what does it mean? What can have happened to her?"

"I'll come round at once."

It seemed to Chittenham that he had never taken so long to dress—his hands shook so that he bungled everything. Each moment seemed an eternity, and yet in less than three-quarters of an hour he was at the flat. Bim still wore her hat and coat, and her calm face and steady eyes looked strained and afraid.

She attempted no greeting; she just handed him the letter which Julie had left.

"Dear Bim,

"I am going away. I'm so sick of my life. I have tried—you know I have—and I've failed all round. So I'm just going away and not coming back any more. Don't worry about me — I'll find happiness somehow.

"Julie."

Giles read the few words and laid the letter down on the table. His face was gray, and though he tried to speak, he could find no words.

Bim was watching him steadily with those clear understanding eyes that seemed to see so much.

"Why has she gone, Mr. Chittenham?" she asked at last painfully.

For a moment he could not answer, then he broke out passionately:

"It's my fault—all my fault! Oh, my God, what a brute I've been to her!"

Bim's lips smiled waveringly.

"You men all says that when it's too late," she said with a touch of scorn. "You all say it when it's too late to be of any use. Well, what are we to do? She slept here last night—and she made herself some tea before she went away this morning. She's taken more money with her, too, which makes me less afraid. People who are going to—to do away with themselves don't generally bother about money."

Her voice quavered and broke.

"Oh, for God's sake say something!" she cried with sudden fierceness. "Suggest something—tell me what to do? She can't have got very far away."

Suddenly she began to sob. "Oh, poor little Julie, poor little Julie! You men are all the same. Why can't you leave us alone if you only mean to bring us unhappiness?"

Chittenham made no reply. He was thinking of that night at the top of the St. Bernard and of the radiant happiness in Julie's face when she first came to his arms. Then he had been offered a joy too great ever to be recaptured, and fool-like he had let the moments pass without tasting their full realization. And now, perhaps, he would never see her again—perhaps already she had escaped from him into darkness and silence which he could neither penetrate nor break.

His last words to her had been a confident "I shall see you tomorrow." But alas for a to-morrow that never comes!

After his interview with Chittenham Schofield reeled out into the street from Mrs. Ardron's house like a drunken man. For the moment he was mad with passionate rage and the bitterness of disillusionment.

He had made an idol of Julie and cruel hands had dragged it down from the pedestal whereon he had set it, and broken it to pieces.

He was in no fit state to listen to reason or to be sanely just. As is so often the way with single-hearted people the first poisoned arrow had taken deadly aim.

The depth of his love was also the measurement of his despair and jealousy. He believed the worst of Julie, he implicitly believed the twisted story, told to him by Lombard, of that night she had spent with Giles Chittenham on the St. Bernard.

For weeks he had known that her reckless gaiety was but a blind to cover a great unhappiness, and now he felt like a man who for long has groped in a dark room and has had a blind suddenly jerked up in his face to let in a dazzling light.

Bitter words which Julie had inadvertently let drop, little incidents which he himself had subconsciously observed, seemed suddenly to fit like pieces of a puzzle into one unobtrusive whole. And mingled with his jealousy was a fierce rage against fate which had once again closed the gates of happiness in his face. Was he never to have anything that was worth while—he who had so much to give—such a wealth of love and tenderness?

He was almost sobbing as he made his way down the street, blind and deaf to everything save his own emotions. He cursed Chittenham with all his heart—he cursed Julie.

She had tried to make a catspaw of him—deserted by her lover she had thought it an easy matter to whistle him back to his allegiance. It gave him a savage joy to remember how he had torn her note across and returned it to her.

"I didn't mean it, Lawrence dear."

Those were the words with which she had tried to humbug him afresh. He hated her—with all his soul he hated her!

At the end of the road he turned blindly to cross over; he had no set idea in his mind—he did not care where he went or what became of him. It was only when a warning shout and the sharp grinding of brakes penetrated his misery that he realized how nearly he had been run over. A wing of the big car that had almost killed him had struck his shoulder and that had sent him down on to his knees in the greasy road.

When he dragged himself up again the driver was beside him, at once anxious, angry and apologetic.

"My God, that was a near shave! What the hell do you mean by wandering about Piccadilly like that? I hope you're not hurt. No? Sure you're not? Well, come along with me and have a drink. I've got a flat not five minutes away."

Before he could answer or resist, Schofield found himself in a cosy room off St. James's Street with a servant taking his coat away to be brushed and his host mixing a stiff whisky and soda.

He was dazed and sore, and yet in a way the shock had brought him to his senses.

He felt vaguely as if he had been shaken out of a bad dream—and he was conscious of shame at the strength of his own emotions, and of the passion that had driven him to Chittenham.

He realized that he had made a fool of himself, and the realization was not pleasant. He gulped down the whisky and soda and made no objection when his glass was refilled.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

CHANGES

How swiftly comes the change
From joy to pain,
And we must re-arrange
Our lives again,
Must tie the broken thread
And sew the seam,
And out of some dream dead
Build some new dream.

God did not promise you
Life without care,
Gave faith because he knew
That grief was there.
This life is not a day,
A week, a year:
For things that pass away
New things appear.

How swiftly changes come
That morning brings,
Yet life is but the sum
Of many things.
Look up, look out, look on,
And work, and pray,
And make from some new dawn
Some bright new day.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Benefic aspects dominate today after the early morning hours which are unfavorable.

Under this direction of the stars the churches should benefit. Many moot points that have brought out discussion in various denominations should be settled before the new year has advanced very far.

Prejudice and bigotry will be less apparent among church supporters than they might be under other aspects. The trend will be toward better understanding of differing creeds, the seers prophesy.

This should be an auspicious day for the clergy who will find congregations responsive and helpful.

There is a sign read as warning that caution in eating should be exercised while this configuration prevails.

Many colds and maladies attributable to damp, cold weather are prognosticated for the winter.

Florida, Cuba and the far west will benefit from unusual winter travel, it is prophesied.

The seers declare that the taking of medicine under this sway is not likely to be beneficial. Exercise and diet are recommended.

Labor should profit from conditions that will develop within the next few weeks, if the stars are rightly interpreted.

Neptune is in a place supposed to encourage rise of wages and improvement in industrial conditions.

While America prospers many parts of Europe and China will suffer from perils of war and gloomy commercial aspects, it is foretold.

Again astrologers foretell a great calamity of some sort which will cause loss of life on the continent.

Persons whose birthdate it is should have a fairly lucky year in which small losses will be offset by appreciable gains.

Children born on this day probably will be stable and conservative by nature. These subjects of Sagittarius are generally very active and they put their energy to good uses. Women usually are unusually good housekeepers.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1928

Conflicting planetary aspects are strong today, according to astrology. This is a time when the early bird should be especially lucky.

The forenoon is especially favorable to the pushing of educational matters and should benefit students as well as teachers.

Writers continue to prosper under this government of the stars which presages success for editors and publishers as well as authors.

Under this sway newspapers are likely to strengthen their power through the extension of their holdings and through broader co-operation.

All constructive or progressive matters should benefit today which seems to promise marvelous advancement for the United States.

The stars encourage building of great structures that will set a new standard of architecture and these benefic aspects also affect interior decorations.

Houses and stores will take on a new gorgeousness and sumptuousness, it is prophesied. Public places of all sorts will reveal the sort of beauty and luxury once monopolized by palaces, the seers prophesy.

Astrologers point out that the United States gradually will reveal the sort of splendor that once distinguished the old world, only it will be distinctive, belonging to the era of supreme achievements.

Women will reflect in their dress the extreme richness of attire that corresponds to the spirit of the times.

While fashions will be reactionary they will be also artistic according to the modern standards, it is forecast.

Feminine charm is to be cultivated assiduously in 1929 when girls will gain new distinction and when beauty will be desired even more generally than in the past.

Washington, D.C., now comes under aspects presaging a winter of storms, indoors and out. Congress will go through dramatic scenes and at least one blizzard will cause hardship.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will be too much concerned with domestic or love affairs for their best financial interests. Mystery and secrecy will attend certain events.

Children born on this day probably will be nature-lovers and fond of outdoor sports. Boys probably will become aggressive business men and girls successful in practical pursuits.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE ABLE TO WAKE UP ANY HOUR WE WISH

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Perhaps you have wondered at the uncanny ability to wake up at any hour you choose. It is a common experience to set the alarm clock, say, for six a.m. and wake up just a moment before the alarm goes off. Almost anyone can be his own alarm clock if he wants to.

There are several theories purporting to explain this peculiar phenomenon. The most recent and fantastic explanation is based on the so-called subconscious mind. The advocates of this theory say that the subconscious is independent of time. It never tires and never sleeps. The subconscious acts like a watchman and just as you leave word with the hotel clerk to call you at six or seven or whatever time you want to get up, you may similarly leave the order with your subconscious, which is always on the job. Any serious wish or fear is carried in the subconscious and relayed to the conscious. Some go so far as to assert that the true self is expressed in and through the subconscious mind.

There is no scientific evidence for this theory. Nothing is gained by trying to explain one mystery in terms of another and one that is less understood.

Some state that the idea of waking at a certain hour interferes with your sleep so that you wake up many times in the night and go to sleep again until the required time. This is sometimes true, but does not account for the times when you do not wake up at all except at the appointed hour.

No one has a wholly satisfactory explanation for this strange phenomenon. The orthodox psychological view of the affair comes about as close as any. This point of view is based on the assertion that sleep is not very different from the waking state, except that the mental processes in sleep are less strong and more haphazard. Hence the problem of waking at any hour you choose is not different in essentials from the problem of keeping your appointments in the waking state.

Suppose I make up my mind to lock the door at ten o'clock tonight. I thus associate the ideas of tonight, ten o'clock and door. I send a nervous impulse through the three combinations of cells, marking out an easy pathway between them. When at ten o'clock a nervous impulse goes through the ten o'clock center, it easily flows over into the lock door center and the action flows. The process is identical in sleep. There must be a signal to start an impulse in one brain center which flows over into a previously associated center.

In other words you wake at an hour you desire by setting into action a group of associated nerve impulses which remain active until the act is accomplished. This is in line with conduct prompted by an instinct which is a persistent tendency to action and continues in force until the act is done. In the meanwhile there is a state of readiness, uneasiness, tenseness all of which prepare and release the mechanisms for the given act.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

FINANCIAL NEWS

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

SISCOE.

It is reported from the north that the mill on Siscoe Gold in Cadillac Fourier-Malartic district will be completed and turning over by the middle of December, as the machinery has all been tested and all units are working smoothly, and will be in charge of a number of experienced mill operators from Kirkland Lake and Porcupine. The company is completely financed, all mill equipment, stores, and other necessary accessories have been paid for, and the company is reported to have considerable capital available with which to operate.

GOLD HILL

Boston Creek advices are to the effect that good progress is being made by Gold Hill in drifting on the 1,100 foot level. The vein was intersected about 25 feet north of the shaft and has now been drifted on for approximately 60 feet both east and west. The report states that the eastern drift showed a consistent rate of $10 over 4 feet. While values have been obtained in the west drift they have not been sufficiently sustained to make ore. It is thought some stoping operations may be started to provide ore with which to start the mill again, so that further finances may be made available for the deepening of the shaft.

TECH-HUGHES.

While the attention of traders during the past several months has been turned to base metal issues such as Noranda and International Nickel we would like to point out that the shares of Teck-Hughes are going into exceptionally strong hands and a sharp upturn in the price of these shares is anticipated within the course of the next two months.

BATHURST.

While only very meagre reports have been available from this Cariboo Lake property of the Patricia district, since the close of navigation a few weeks ago, when their high grade vein was encountered on the 200 foot level, we are reliably informed that a recent radio report stated that already the high grade vein had been drifted on for 150 to 175 feet and the high values were still being maintained. We believe this stock to have splendid speculative possibilities.

KEELEY.

A report from Cobalt yesterday morning states that the recent surface discovery made by this company, is highly important. The vein is four inches wide and runs 5000 ounces to the ton.

MINING CORPORATION.

Development of hitherto unmineable ore, together with what new ore has been discovered on the old McKinley, has added at least a year and a half to the life of Mining Corporation.

MURPHY.

We are informed from Kirkland Lake that high values in gold are being obtained at depth in the No. 4 vein on Murphy.

MINING BRIEFS.

Word comes from Rouyn that Aldermac are working in a 15-foot width of 6 per cent copper ore on the 500-foot horizon. Noranda holds approximately 65 per cent and Towagmac 27 per cent of the capital stock of Aldermac. The remaining 8 per cent is in the hands of the capital and are traded in actively on the unlisted market.

Following a preliminary examination of Coxheart Mine, Nova Scotia, which they acquired this summer, the directors of the Arno Mines, Limited, have authorized immediate expenditure on the property of approximately $100,000, a sum which is thought to be sufficient to gauge the property's potentialities. Two diamond drills and a crew of forty men have been placed on the property already. Work is being continued on Arno's holdings in the Abana sector of Quebec.

Incorporation of the Sullivan Gold Mines, Limited, with capital of $3,000,000 in dollar shares is announced. Some 1,700,000 shares remain in the treasury with all stock outstanding being pooled for twelve months. Montreal men are behind the venture. The property comprises some 212 acres in the Cadillac field and is said to be on the line of strike of the Siscoe and the Greene-Stabell. Several veins have been located during the surface prospecting.

• • •

A report from Amos states that the Pandora Syndicate have ceased operations on their Cadillac property. This is unconfirmed as yet. When last heard of they were crosscutting at the 100-foot level towards a vein which gave good values on the surface. Surface work was being carried out on the northeast corner of their property also in the hope of picking up an extension of a vein found on the neighboring Tonawanda Sydicate's ground.

• • •

It is rumored that the Windfall-Rouyn have taken an option on the Kenejovis Syndicate's property in Rouyn Township. There is a gold showing on this property on which a shaft was sunk a couple of years ago.

Laval-Quebec Mines, Limited, are reported to have undertaken to work the properties owned by the Rex Copper Mines which comprise 600 acres in Desmeloizes near Le Reine station and about 600 acres in Duparquet township. For the time being operations are being centered on the Cadillac property where mineralization is traceable on surface and is indicative of values. A program of diamond drilling, trenching, test pitting, stripping, etc., has been laid out and will commence immediately. The property is well equipped and all accommodations and buildings have been erected.

Duparquet Rouyn Mines will be refinanced so as to permit of resumption of operations next year, according to reliable advice. The property is located in the northern part of Duparquet Township and while only a limited amount of surface work has been carried out the showings are said to be favorable. Consolidated Smelters has been operating on a property adjoining Duparquet for over a year, indicative of the importance attributed to the field by the larger companies.

• • •

The plant of the Lucky Jim has been running to full capacity of 200 tons per day during the season and the total costs of operation both in mine and mill have been reduced to a minimum.

Industrial Number of Financial Times Appears

The Industrial Number of the Financial Times appeared yesterday as a supplement of the regular edition. Seldom in the history of the Dominion has this financial journal been able to portray such favorable commercial developments as have occurred throughout the country during the past twelve months. The study made by The Times is exhaustive. Almost every department of business is packed with data covering the results of operations of hundreds of companies, and the current financial conditions of these is also revealed.

There are one or two exceptions to the general trend towards increasing prosperity in Canada, as shown in the review, notably in the textile and newsprint industries. Excessive imports from abroad have affected the former industry, while temporary conditions of over-production have been an unfavorable influence in newsprint. That prosperity is general is demonstrated by the high rate of employment and the growth in business in steel, automobile, agricultural, flour milling, packing, foodstuffs industries, general merchandising and in the development of natural resources such as mining. The clearly defined progress made is brought out in an article under the heading "Industrial Earnings Reveal Wide Growth for the Past Year."

Few Delieveries Reported For December Contracts

CHICAGO, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—Wheat values tightened up early to-day owing in some degree to a relative scantiness of deliveries on December contracts. Secretary Jardine's annual report advocating surplus control legislation was apparently also a bullish factor. Opening unchanged to ¼ higher, wheat afterward showed some advance all around Corn and oats likewise developed strength, with corn starting at ¼ decline to ¼ to ⅝ gain, and subsequently scoring a general upturn.

Few Favorites Make Slight Gains On Market

TORONTO, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—The market was steady at the close of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Prices in some favorites had registered slight gains. Goodyear Tire advanced 7½ points at 230 and Super Petroleum 8½ at 40 on the curb market. Oils were stronger, and realized small gains.

F. N. Burt gained 3½ at 88½, and Kelvinator 2 at 12. McKinnon Industries at 64 and Massey Harris at 93 each gained a point, while Steel of Canada went up 1⅛ at 216½. Shredded Wheat was up 1 at 64, while Maple Leaf dropped 1½ at 110½. Brazilian was up ¾ at 75¼, Hayes Wheels gained 1 at 47, while International Nickel was down 2 at 216 with only 10 shares.

Noranda and Hudson Bay Drop On Standard Mart

TORONTO, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press).—The market remained firm on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. Noranda was down 40 cents at 65.35 and Hudson Bay down twenty-five at 20.25. McIntyre dropped 1.20 at 21.00. Amulet was down four at 3.01, Hollinger Consolidated five at 8.10, Sudbury Basin five at 8.60, while Bathurst was up two at 40, Kirkland Lake five at 1.40, Murphy two at 78 and Teck-Hughes five at 8.50. Siscoe was up three and a half at 7, while Wright-Hargreaves lost one at 1.99. Big Missoury gained two at 66, Central Manitoba two at 77 while Abana was down one at 3.92 and Pend-Oreille was up twenty-five cents at 12.00.

Canadian Marconi Continues To Decline

NEW YORK, December 1 (Canadian Press). — Speculation quieted down considerably in to-day's brief session of the market, with the price movement irregular. The wide open break in Canadian Marconi on the New York curb market yesterday followed by a further sharp decline in that stock to-day, coupled with a big increase in brokers' loans and a ten-point drop in New York Federal Reserve Bank ratio, apparently had sobering influence on the speculative sentiment. Increased margin requirements put into effect to-day by some of the large commission houses and the increasing number of cautionary advices, also tended to keep speculation in check. While yesterday's ten per cent money rate is believed to be temporary, bankers hold out little hope for easy money rates until after the turn of the year, due to the expanding holiday demand for funds.

BANK OF MONTREAL IN STRONG POSITION

The annual statement of the Bank of Montreal—going forward to shareholders— will be viewed as a particularly satisfactory one. Of perhaps greatest import to Canada is the ability of the leading bank to take on over $50,000,000 of additional business throughout the country and at the same time maintain its usual strong liquid position.

The statement which is for the fiscal year to October 31st, reveals marked strength and steady expansion in all departments, with special attention evidently having been given to the financing of the larger trade and industry of the Dominion.

AIR BANDITS LOOT MAILS

Postal Driver Held Up While Delivering Pouches To Flying Field

$1,000,000 LOOT.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., December 1 (Canadian Press). — Loot consisting of about $1,000,000 in bank cheques, intended for collection in Chicago and New York, was obtained by two air mail bandits who yesterday held up a postal driver and his wife on the way to deliver five pouches to the Lambert St. Louis Field.

TORONTO, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—Resignations of fourteen women executives and secretaries of Toronto Young Women's Christian Association will take effect next month, according to a lengthy statement issued last night confirming recent rumors. The action is the result of circumstances connected with the resignation of Miss Jane M. Pierce, general secretary.

The statement said that Miss Pierce resigned following an interview with the executive of the board of directors and that it is evident that her resignation was desired, as she herself neither desired nor intended to resign.

BYRD IS READY TO START TRIP

Commander Issues Farewell Message To People of New Zealand.

TOW ONE VESSEL.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Dec. 1 (Canadian Press). — Commander Richard E. Byrd was making final preparations this morning to get away late to-day on his exploring expedition in the South Polar regions.

Prior to the starting on his Antarctic venture, the commander issued a farewell message in which he expressed deep appreciation of the courtesy and hospitality which he had received in New Zealand.

Both ships of the expedition will get under way to-day, the City of New York being towed to the edge of the Antarctic ice pack by the Eleanor Bolling in order to conserve the supply of fuel. Commander Byrd expects to reach the ice about 1,000 miles south of New Zealand, and at that point the whaler Larsen will take over the duty of towing the City of New York. The Eleanor Bolling in the meantime will return to Dunedin and embark the remainder of the equipment and proceed south again at Christmas.

Wheat and oats show increases of 7,007,603 and 1,924,804 bushels respectively, while decreases are noted in barley of 185,603; flax, 92,903 and rye, 32,308 bushels.

Stocks of grain at western country elevators show a net increase of 1,597,856 bushels. Increases are noted in wheat of 944,211; oats, 466,134; barley, 306,017 and rye, 16,437, while flax shows a decrease of 134,943 bushels.

Total assets are reported at $873,782,523, up from $831,548,967, a gain of ever $42,000,000. Of this amount liquid assets at $473,898,282 are equal to 59.55% of liabilities to the public. Included in these are cash holdings of $118,787,065, or 14.95% of public liabilities. The cash holdings comprise gold and subsidiary coin $33,595,262, as compared with $38,400,252; Dominion Notes $60,391,802, up from $50,552,958, and deposit in Central Gold Reserves of $25,000,000, compared with $19,000,000.

Large Increase In Loans.

As a result of the important developments that are occurring in many sections of the country, the tendency has been to report substantial increases in call, as well as current, loans. Call and short loans in Canada now stand at $39,147,086, up from $29,719,404, while call loans in Great Britain and the United States are down to $138,965,168 from $151,381,604.

Indicative of the much larger general business being handled, current loans in Canada have risen to $308,752,388, from $255,155,693, making an increase of $53,596,695 over the previous year. At the same time, loans to cities, towns and municipalities and school districts have gained to $22,416,665, from $16,651,162, while current loans and discounts elsewhere than in Canada are reported at $35,496,446, down from $45,628,383.

Reflecting the growth in the wealth of the Canadian people, deposits continue to find new high levels. Total deposits at the end of the year stand at $721,465,012, compared with $700,227,281, a gain of over $20,000,000.

The profit and loss statement indicates that with the larger volume of business offering profits have also shown a tendency to increase. Profits of the year, after deducting charges of management and making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts, were $5,847,327, equal to 9½% on the combined capital, reserve and undivided profits; this compared with $5,299,887 at the end of the previous year. The profits added to the amount carried forward, brought the total available for distribution up to $6,002,126. This was distributed as follows: Dividends and bonus $4,188,338; provision for taxes Dominion Government $400,000; reservation for bank premises $700,000; a total of $5,288,338, and leaving a balance to the credit of profit and loss of $713,788, as compared with $154,799.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

PONTYPOOL, December 1. — The second annual banquet held under the auspices of Sir Sam Hughes R. B. P., 1063, held in the Orange Hall on Wednesday, was a great success.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—The reluctant attitude of buyers to take cattle that lack finish led to a draggy market, as the runs this week showed a majority of poor quality butchers' cattle. The few choice quality steers and heifers were picked up first every day. Heavy fat steers were draggy at $9 to $9.50 for the best. Choice handy weight steers and heifers brought $9 to $9.50; good $8.75 to $9; common, very slow at $7.50 to $8.25. Cows started off steady, but closing market showed a full 50 cents cwt. decline from last week. Choice sold at $7.25 to $7.75. Medium to good $6 to $7. Canners and cutters moved the most free of any stock at $4 to $5.50.

Bulls maintained steady values, the adverse feeling of market not effecting them. Choice heavy bulls $7 to $7.50. Bolognas $6 to $6.50.

One odd fancy baby beef brought $13.25, but most of choice sales ranged between $12 to $12.50. Choice forward springers sold between $100 to $130. Strictly fresh milkers brought $75 to $100. Little demand for common and medium of either class.

There was a fairly good demand for stocker and feeder cattle, although prospective purchasers were endeavoring to acquire them at lower prices. Ontario short-keep steers sold for $9. Western steers up to $8.50.

Easier trading marked sales of calves. Few brought over $15.50, the bulk of the best going for $14.50 to $15. Grassers $6 to $7. Lambs finished at $11 to $11.25 for choice, a drop of $1 per cwt. from last week. Bucks $8 to $8.25. eYarling sheep $8 to $8.50. Heavy $5 to $5.50.

Closing price of hogs were $9 f.o.b. selects, with bids out at $8.75 for week-end loading.

Receipts for the week: Cattle 8,191; calves, 1,004; hogs, 2,892; sheep, 9,676.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press)—The Foreign demand for Canadian grain here to-day continued quiet and little business was transacted by local exporters.

The domestic trade in cash grain was also inactive but the tone of the market was steady for all lines except wheat which was one cent per bushel lower. Manitoba No. 6 sold at 94c, and feed wheat at 90c per bushel.

The local flour situation was without any new feature to note, prices for spring and winter wheat grades being about steady with a fair amount of business passing.

An active trade was done in all lines of millfeed and values were unchanged. A good trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats and values were firm.

The inquiry for all grades of fresh and storage eggs was fair and prices were well maintained. Receipts were 208 cases.

A moderate amount of business was done in potatoes and values were steady. New Brunswick Green Mountains sold at 80c per 90 lbs, in bags.

The bean market was unchanged with Canadian grades selling at $5.20 per bushel.

The demand for butter was confined to small lots to meet immediate requirements and values were unchanged. Receipts were 151 packages.

The trade in cheese was extremely dull and values were marked down 1-8c per pound. Receipts were 779 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press).— All around lower prices here for grain yesterday came about largely through sharp dounturns in Liverpool wheat quotations tending to curtail United States exports.

Liverpool dispatches meanwhile were putting stress on much cheaper offerings of wheat from Argentina. Besides, speculative holders of Chicago contracts calling for December delivery of grain were in numerous cases apparently unwilling to accept chances of literal fulfillment and were letting go of ownership or were shifting contracts that specified delivery in May.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, ⅛ to ⅝ to ⅞c net lower. Corn finished ⅛ to ⅞ to 1c down, with oats unchanged to ⅛c off, and provisions varying from 17c set back to a rise of five cents.

For the most part, both foreign and domestic news concerning wheat was adverse yesterday to friends of higher prices. This was especially the case concerning dispatches from Argentina, where additional rain was reported in districts to the south that have been suffering from dry weather and excessive heat, but some fears were expressed that unwelcome moisture might cause wheat harvesting in North America to be delayed. However, wheat shipments from Argentina to Europe showed a material increase, Australian wheat shipments were also enlarged, and India sent word of good rains ample to make wheat seeding for the season a success.

Adding to the downward trend of the wheat market here was the fact that highly beneficial crop results wer eexpected to ensue from widespread heavy snow in domestic winter wheat there. Blackness of export trade in wheat from North America counted also as a bearish factor, only 250,000 bushels being announced yesterday as having been taken for shipment to Europe, with total exports for the week, 1,000,000 bushels less than for the corresponding week last year.

Winnipeg wired that there would be a big decrease in Fort William stocks of wheat, but that the grain would show up east later on.

Predictions of clear skies ahead did a good deal to hasten downward turns in corn values. Immediate weather conditions affecting the movement of the corn crop, though, were unfavorable, and country offerings of corn to arrive were small. Oats were unsettled, but the market sympathized with corn weakness, especially after March oats yesterday had scored a new high price record for the season.

Provisions averaged lower on account of scattered selling of nearby future deliveries.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, December 1. — There has been nothing outstanding in the local butter market this week. The movement to distributive trade has been steadily conducted from day to day at price levels which have not shown any great desire to establish new seasonal peaks. Finest creamery solids have changed hands at from 40¾c to 41c per pound in a wholesale and jobbing way under a fair volume of business. At these levels the market is steady with a week ago. When Toronto butter storage holdings are made known to-day by the Toronto branch of the Canadian Produce Association, a steady decrease in stocks will be noted.

New Zealand Shipments.

An interesting item of outside news during the current session contained the information that New Zealand butter shipments will arrive late this year. It is expected in local market circles that the supply of finest creamery allotted to the Toronto market will not be available for distribution to users here until late in December or early in 1929. Some weeks ago an earlier date of arrival was set for butter imports. Latest advices name December 7 as the arrival date at New York for New Zealand shipments. Some days must necessarily elapse before butter is finally cleared for onward transportation to Canadian market centres. In the meantime local creameries will have plenty of opportunity to clean up any supplies that they may have on hand. Expansion in trading is looked for in December, which may result in higher prices. Stocks of butter on hand in local coolers, while not heavy, are generally considered sufficient for retail requirements from now until the arrival on the port market of the New Zealand product.

Undergrades are being well cleared at prices approximately 1c per pound less than for finest. There has been a little better demand for second-grade butter this week than last. The butter market yesterday was reported as steady, with No. 1 pasteurized creamery solids quotable at from 40¾c to 41c per pound, No. 2 pasteurized and No. 1 unpasteurized at 39½c to 40 per pound.

Fresh Eggs Strong.

Local egg markets continue strong on fresh gathered, with receipts extremely light. A step-up in production is anticipated, but weather conditions will have to be considered in this forecast for more fresh eggs. Dealers are quoting special top prices for future supplies from the country, with very little coming.

The general market range for strictly fresh is firmly maintained at, extras 60c to 63c per dozen, fresh firsts 50c to 54c, seconds 32c to 33c, pullet extras 43c to 45c. Quotations to the retail trade show very little change from last week, at: Extras loose, 66c to 68c per dozen; firsts 62c to 64c, seconds 37c to 38c. In a spotty market prices are working higher. British Columbia eggs have lately been arriving in large quantities, with no trouble to clear them on receipts. Offerings from the Coast, however, are slackening.

The Outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet History

—a Six in the price range of the four!

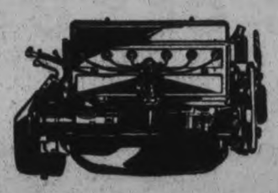
Although the whole country was looking forward to its presentation with eager expectation—

—although it had been freely predicted that the new Chevrolet would represent the most spectacular of all Chevrolet achievements—

—the announcement of The Outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet History—a Six in the price range of the four—has proved to be the greatest sensation of the world's most progressive industry!

Everyone was familiar with Chevrolet's brilliant record of success. Everyone knew that Chevrolet had become the world's largest builder of automobiles by establishing, year after year, new standards of performance, beauty and quality in the low-priced field. But no one ever dreamed that it would be possible to provide in the price range of the four, a Six of such startling performance, such impressive appearance, such luxurious comfort and such remarkable engineering advancement!

When you learn the full details of this sensational new automobile, you will realize that Chevrolet has provided those qualities of six-cylinder smoothness, reserve power, and flashing acceleration which heretofore could only be enjoyed in cars costing several hundred dollars more!



Chevrolet's new six-cylinder, fully-enclosed, valve-in-head engine has a high compression, non-detonating head. Its piston displacement is 194 cu. in. and it develops 46 H.P. at low engine speed.

The Outstanding Chevrolet is powered by a new six-cylinder valve-in-head engine of advanced design. Over one hundred different engines were created, built, tested and improved during the past four years before the present design was adopted. Millions of miles of testing at the General Motors Proving Ground and in various parts of the country have definitely established its stamina, dependability and economy under every possible condition of usage.

It develops 32% more power than the previous Chevrolet motor and affords sensationally greater speed and faster acceleration. And despite this vastly improved performance, an economy averaging better than twenty miles to the gallon of gasoline!

Marvelous new bodies by Fisher are an outstanding feature of the Outstanding Chevrolet.

Numerous engineering advancements make possible these amazing performance results. A new non-detonating cylinder head provides high compression performance without special fuels. The new hot-spot manifold assures complete fuel vaporization. The new and larger carburetor incorporates an automatic acceleration pump, and an improved venturi choke for quicker winter starting; while a new AC gasoline pump, with filter assures adequate fuel supply no matter how long or steep the hill.

A new heavier crankshaft statically and dynamically balanced makes torsional vibration imperceptible at all speeds—due partly to its exceptional size and partly to the relative shortness of its crank-throws. The entire rocker arm mechanism is automatically lubricated; and this, combined with the new camshaft, new large valve tappets, new fabric camshaft gear and the new muffling system results in delightful silence of operation. Long engine life is provided for by a new type AC air cleaner and by a new method of continuous self-purification of the crankcase oil—while an improved system of crankcase ventilation minimizes oil dilution, particularly during winter use.

Impressive as it is, however, this superb power plant is only one phase of the advanced engineering revealed in the Outstanding Chevrolet. Big, powerful, easily adjustable four-wheel brakes give positive, safe control—with silent operation assured under all conditions by semi-molded linings and a new brake band design. The steering mechanism is fully equipped with ball bearings and the new steering wheel is of the flat slender rimmed type—an important contribution to ease of control.

The new and quieter transmission contains heavier gears of vanadium steel while the driving gear and pinion are made of 3½% nickel steel—the finest gear material known to metallurgical science. And, also, there are provided such costly car features as two-beam headlamps with toe button control for "dimming," semi-automatic spark control, theft-proof Electrolock, waterproof spark-coil construction, larger shielded safety gasoline tank in rear, improved differential lubrication and many other features of comparable importance.

If the Outstanding Chevrolet offered only this impressive array of mechanical advancements, it would still be hailed as a sensational achievement in modern automotive design. But, in addition, it offers an order of beauty, distinction and style never before attained in any low-priced automobile! The high flattened hood and the gleaming chromium plated radiator shell furnish the key note of rugged smartness and grace. The rakish unbroken lines, emphasized by distinctively grouped hood louvres, are suggestive of speed and alertness. The divided body moulding and concave front pillars reflect the vogue so widely favored by leading custom builders; while the larger, longer, lower bodies are themselves masterful examples of the craftsmanship for which Fisher is internationally renowned.

The new, slender rimmed, flat steering wheel and improved dash assure the utmost driving convenience. On the indirectly lighted instrument panel are grouped all controls, including the motor heat indicator and theft-proof Electrolock.

The driver's seat in all closed models is easily adjustable forward or back by means of a handle regulator. This brings the clutch and brake pedals within proper reach for all drivers.

The seats are wider and more restful. The driver's seat in all closed models is easily adjustable, forward or back—a feature recently introduced on a few of the high-priced cars. The redesigned dash carries an attractive grouping of all control instruments indirectly lighted including the new motor temperature indicator.

Climaxing years of continuous progress . . revealing new performance, new beauty, new quality and dependability . . priced so amazingly low as to be within the reach of everybody everywhere—

—this sensational new Chevrolet represents the greatest dollar-for-dollar value ever offered in any automobile!

We cordially invite you to visit our showroom and secure complete and detailed information regarding this great new car which will be ready for delivery beginning January 1st.

JERRY FINDS A LUCKY STONE

On my way to school on Monday I met the two red-headed brothers whom we boys had helped out of trouble once upon a time not so long ago and they seemed very glad to see me.

"We just want to warn you, Hawkins," said Edwin, the younger one; "you are in for some trouble."

"I guess I know who from," I said, with a grin, "that fellow Scraggs—"

"You guessed right—you see, we all thought he was a red-head—"

"Until I pulled off his red wig and showed he was fooling you," I broke in.

"Yes. You see the red-headed boys made up their minds to stick together, so they could lick any kids who called them red head and laughed at their red hair—"

"Which is a funny thing to do," I said, "because I think red-headed boys are nice looking, and most of 'em I know are pretty fine fellows, too."

"I know they are," said Edwin, nodding; "and we all thought Scraggs was a fine one, because his hair was reddest of all—"

"That's just what made me think he was fooling you," I broke in; "soon as I saw how red his hair was I said to myself it wasn't real. He made me mad when he slapped one of our fellows in the face—that's why I made a grab at his hair, and the wig came off in my hands."

"It made us all mad at him," said he, "but he got what was coming to him. He is a pretty good runner, but he wasn't fast enough for our fellows. They gave him a pretty good beating for fooling them with his red wig. And now Scraggs is after you for showing him up. It was the last thing he said—he was going to make you pay up for butting into his business."

"Well," I said, with a grin, "let him come, then. I'm not afraid of him."

"But he's tricky, Hawkins," said Edwin. "You want to watch your step with Scraggs—"

"I know him," I said; "I knew him long before you fellows did. And I know what to expect. Believe me, rest easy, he won't get the best of me. So long, and thanks for telling me."

Right after school I hurried home and threw my books in a corner and told mother I was going down to the clubhouse. She always wants me to come home first, so that she knows school is out and I didn't have to stay for missing any lessons. By the time I reached the clubhouse on the river bank, all the boys were there, holding a meeting. As soon as they saw me they all jumped up and started talking at once, but I waved my hand and said: "Wait a minute, one at a time, please."

So Shadow Loomis got up and told me that he had been the first to arrive, and had seen Scraggs hanging around our river landing. Shadow lives up in Watertown, and comes down every day in his launch.

"The moment I got out of my boat I saw him," said Shadow; "he had seen me, too, for he started walking away into the woods, but I called him."

"What did he say?"

"He wouldn't say anything. And when I finally asked him what he wanted down here, he told me to mind my own business, and walked up to the main road."

"But he didn't stay up there very long," said Jerry Moore, "because I saw him over toward the cliffs near my daddy's farm a while later. He got funny with me—he told me all of us boys who stuck to Seckatary Hawkins was goin' to be sorry for it—"

"And what did you say, Jerry?"

"Gee! I got so mad I couldn't say anything—I couldn't talk—I just started for him with my fist, but he can run too fast for me. So I just picked up a stone and sailed it at him—"

"How many times have I told you not to throw stones?" broke in our captain, Dick Ferris; "you know all the boys in our club are forbidden to throw stones. It'll get you in trouble, some of these days, Jerry. Did you hit him?"

"No," said Jerry, in disgust; "I was in too big a hurry—I picked up the first stone I saw and it was a bum one—couldn't sail it straight—it went into the river. But the next time I see that bird—oh, boy! ask me, have I got the right kind of a stone!"

He held up a good-sized round, brown stone, weighing it in his hand as he grinned at us.

"Look at this!" he continued; "you never saw one as pretty—seems like a shame to throw it away—might lose it. This stone is worth keeping Hawkins. Look at it."

I looked at it. "Yeah," I said, "that is a fine piece of stone, Jerry. Let me have it, will you, for a paper weight on my desk?"

"I should saynot!" exclaimed Jerry, putting the stone in his pocket. "Somehow or other I got an idea this is a lucky stone for me—I bet I won't miss, whenever I throw it."

BAM! Something hit against the front of the clubhouse and made the windows rattle. We all jumped up and rushed outside. A boy was just disappearing down the river path.

"Scraggs!" yelled Jerry, and was after him like a shot. I tried to stop him, but the other boys were all excited, too, and they rushed past me, following Jerry. It gets them mad whenever anybody plays a trick like that on us. They had their minds made up to stop this annoyance from Scraggs. But they all came back in a little while, and admitted that the swift-footed Scraggs had given them the slip.

"Just what I was telling you," said Jerry, "you can't get near enough to him to give him a lickin' when once he starts runnin', and he always runs."

This stone will get him, though, by and by."

He took the brown stone out of his pocket and patted it.

"Jerry," I said, "you wouldn't want to hit anybody with that stone—"

"Wouldn't I, though!" exclaimed Jerry. "Listen, when a fellow won't stand and fight me fair fist, he's got to take it at long distance, and this stone will travel faster than he can run."

But I talked to Jerry, and Dick talked to him, until we were almost sure we had convinced him that he must not throw stones at anybody. However, Jerry said he wanted to protect me—he was not going to let Scraggs lay for me and play some treacherous trick that might put a hole in my head. Of course, I had to thank Jerry for the way he felt. It was only natural.

When we adjourned the meeting, Jerry Moore and Perry Stokes insisted on going home with me. We went down to the little landing and saw Shadow Loomis off in his little motor boat, and then we started up to the main road. Just as we stepped out of the line of bushes on the river path I heard a whizzing sound, and ducked just in time to miss a stone that banged against a high-board fence on the right of us. It startled all three of us with its suddenness, and we all started to run.

"What was it?" I asked. "Who threw that stone? Did you see anybody, Perry?"

"No, sir," he answered; "but we had better keep moving before another comes, sir."

"Hold on a minute," said Jerry, and he ran around the fence and back to where the stone had struck. We peeped around the corner of the fence and watched him. He walked slowly around the spot as if looking for something, and finally stooped and picked up a big piece of white rock.

"Here it is," he called out to us, holding up the rock. "Look at the size of it! Lucky we didn't get that on our beans."

And he threw down the stone and came on. I was just about to turn away when I saw a figure come running out of the bushes beside the spot where Jerry had been standing. It was Scraggs. Before I could tell Jerry, Scraggs had picked up the white rock and returned to the bushes. Now I knew without any doubt where the stone had come from. Scraggs had thrown it at us as we passed—Scraggs, hiding in the bushes, waiting, thinking perhaps I would come up alone, but on seeing the three of us tried to reach me with a rock. He must have thought as much of that white rock as Jerry did of his brown stone. Perry saw him take it, too, the same as I, but before Jerry came up to us I made a sign to Perry not to mention it—and Perry understands my signals.

Now, the worst part of it comes. Evidently Scraggs and Jerry had been seeing one another several times since that particular happening, and had exchanged shots with their stones. Of course, Jerry had not been as good a shot as he thought he was, because he had not boasted about any damage done to Scraggs, nor had he reported any bumps on his own head. But it must have been plain to every boy in our club, from what happened later, that Scraggs and Jerry had started bombarding each other every time they came within sight or throwing distance.

It was the day before Thanksgiving that I was walking down Main Street with Jerry, he having called after school as usual to protect me on my way down to the clubhouse. There is a big store on Main Street that always begins to put Christmas toys in its window around Thanksgiving time. There was a man inside the window, fixing it up and putting the toys on display. Two kids were standing close to the window watching him. Their backs were turned to us, but Jerry spotted one of them in an instant.

"Scraggs!" he yelled to me. But at the sound of his voice the two boys at the window turned. One was Scraggs, the other I had never seen before. Scraggs eyed Jerry for a moment and then reached in his pocket—most likely for his piece of rock. Jerry was quicker—or it seemed that Scraggs was slower—but now I am sure that Scraggs never intended to throw at Jerry at all. Trust Scraggs to think faster than Jerry. He just made a motion as if he would throw—but he gave Jerry plenty of time to throw, and Jerry threw. Before I could catch hold of his arm—he threw—and the brown stone went hurtling—

CRASH!

The big plate glass window was smashed to pieces. We heard its broken slivers tinkling to the sidewalk as we all stood, thunderstruck—even Scraggs seemed too stunned to run. But he turned his ugly face and grinned at us—

"See what you done?" he called out, nodding and pointing toward the window. A crowd of people began to gather, and Jerry was about to run, but I held him.

"Face the music!" I said. "We've got to straighten this out now. Come on."

They took us into the store, and Scraggs, too. Into the office of the manager we went, and a man was just hanging up the telephone as we entered.

"I've phoned for the Sheriff," he said; "now, which one of you boys threw that stone?"

"That guy threw it," said Scraggs, pointing at Jerry. "He's always throwing stones—"

"That'll do!" snapped the manager. "Here comes the Sheriff."

The Sheriff's office was only two doors down the street. He looked surprised when he saw me there.

"What's this, Hawkins?" he says. "In trouble again?"

"Looks like it," I said, with a grin. "I'm goin' to stick to my friends. If Jerry is in trouble, count me in, too. I'll take half the blame. Maybe we got enough money in our treasury down at the clubhouse to pay for that window—"

"Nothing doing!" broke in the Sheriff. "You kids don't get off that easy. You'll have to appear before Judge Granbery tomorrow—"

"Tomorrow is Thanksgiving," I said. "We don't want any trouble on the day of Thanksgiving—"

"You got it the day before Thanksgiving," said the Sheriff, with a grin, and you're lucky if you don't have it the day after Thanksgiving and maybe some more—old Judge Granbery will hit the ceiling when he hears about this—he always says you kids are getting in trouble—hold on, there, you!"

His last words were yelled at Scraggs, who had started to sneak toward the door, evidently thinking he could get away, and not show up to explain before Judge Granbery. But the Sheriff had his eye on him, and grabbed him just as he reached the door.

"I didn't do nothin'," said Scraggs, in a loud voice; "that's the guy who broke the winder—"

He pointed his finger at Jerry, and Jerry made a swipe at him that would have broken Scraggs' arm if he had hit—but Jerry missed.

"You had something to do with it," said the Sheriff. "And since you were trying to sneak away, I can't trust you to come back—I'll have to keep you up in my house till tomorrow. But Hawkins, you and Jerry Moore show up tomorrow morning at Judge Granbery's office at 9 o'clock sharp."

The manager of the store stepped up. "I want it understood, sir," he said to the Sheriff, "that I'll not be satisfied by merely having my plate-glass window paid for. 'I want these boys punished—it's getting unsafe for everybody, the way they have fights around here."

"Who? Me?" asked Jerry Moore. "Say, this is the first time I ever got in trouble up here."

"And I'm going to see that it's the last time," snapped the store manager. The man who had been in the window, fixing the toys, stepped up and tried to say something to the manager, but he waved him back and told him to wait until he was spoken to. That ended it. The Sheriff took Scraggs and his partner away. We were left to go home, which we did, feeling pretty blue about it. What a fine Thanksgiving we were going to have! Oh, boy!

Promptly at 9 o'clock we were in Judge Granbery's office, and it looked like a little court room. The Judge looked awfully sore at everybody, even the store manager and his window dresser who sat beside him.

"Well, Hawkins," he snapped at me, as I stood before his desk. "This is a fine thing for me to have to do on Thanksgiving day, isn't it? How many times have I told you to keep out of trouble. Now, now—don't tell me you couldn't help it—"

"I couldn't," I cut in. By Jinks! I was going to get a word in sideways if I got licked for it. "I couldn't help it, but now that it's done, I don't want Jerry to suffer for it all by himself. I was with him. It was on my account he got in a fight with Scraggs, there. So I said I would stick to him, and take half the punishment."

The Judge sat silent for a few moments, staring at me, as though he wanted to say something hard, but just couldn't.

"Who threw the stone?" he finally demanded.

Jerry stepped up. "I threw it, all right," he said, "but I don't see how it hit the window because I aimed it low enough to hit Scraggs on the legs. But I guess I aimed wrong—I don't know, Judge, but the window was broken, all right, and we're ready to pay for it out of our tin box in the clubhouse, where we keep all the dimes we collect for dues—"

"Do you know how much a big window glass like that will cost?" demanded the Judge.

Doc Waters spoke up. He had been the friend of our little club for many years. We had not seen him as we came in. But now he made himself heard, and we all turned to see him sitting back in a dark corner, watching everything—

"Judge," he says, "something else could have broken the window, couldn't it? The man who was fixing the toys—couldn't he have slipped and bumped his knee against the glass—"

"Yes," said the window-fixer, standing up suddenly, and facing Doc, "that could have happened. But it didn't. I know, because I was the one in the window. It was a stone that broke the glass, and I have the stone right here to show."

He held up—a stone—

"Hey!" I shouted, jumping to my feet. "That isn't the stone Jerry threw! That's a big white rock—the stone that Jerry threw was a round, brown one—"

"What's this?" broke in the Judge. "You, Mr. Window Man, are you sure that is the stone that broke the glass?"

"Quite positive," answered the window-fixer, nodding. "This is the stone—I picked it up inside the window, right among the splinters of glass—"

"That stone, Judge," I said, "belonged to Scraggs there—I have two others to prove that we saw it before—he threw it once at us—Perry Stokes and I saw him pick it up again and take it away with him—"

"That'll do out of you," said the Judge. He turned to Scraggs, who stood with head hanging on his breast. "Young man, is this true?"

Scraggs would not talk. But his partner jumped up. "Yer honor," he piped, "please let him go, won't you, if we tell the truth? Scraggs broke the window—just as soon as he saw Jerry Moore throw, he shoved the big white rock through the glass, to make it look like Jerry did it—"

"You may go, Hawkins," snapped the Judge suddenly. "I didn't like to think you boys were guilty of this. I still look upon you as my junior police. But remember this, the junior police do not throw stones. Now, get out of here, and let us take care of the rest of this."

We were glad to go. As soon as we got outside we headed for the clubhouse on the river bank.

"By George!" exclaimed Shadow Loomis, grabbing me by the hand, "I knew we'd come out on top—"

"Don't take the credit," said Jerry Moore; "good old Doc Waters did it—we'll have to thank him for it—"

"Yeah, this is Thanksgiving day," I said, "let's go up and wait for Doc and give thanks where we owe it."

Which we did.

A Letter From The 'Seckatary'

Dear Club Members:

Our membership is growing by leaps and bounds. This week beat all records, and I am glad to see so many boys and girls taking such lively interest in reading and writing. When you think back to the time when very few people would read, and there were only a few who could write, it is not hard to understand why this old world has progressed so rapidly. And the boys and girls in this country today are the best readers and writers in the world.

It does my heart good to see the way you welcome our new contest each week. The more you practice anything, the more expert you become. And your teacher will tell you, too, that reading and writing will help you in every way, and surely in exercising your mind, which needs exercise just the same as the body to keep fit and ready for the day's work.

The competition I am announcing this week is "A Letter to Santa." I want every boy and girl member to write a letter to Santa and let me have it to print before I send it on. I promise you it will get there all right.

Don't forget that Christmas is a time of goodwill and kindness, and when you write your letter tell Santa about any little boys or girls you know who may need his special care.

Our Weekly Meeting

The meeting this week will take quite a while, because there are so many letters to come before the members. And they are splendid, too.

The best story is by Arthur Beauclerc, 563 Sherbrooke street, and Arthur's prize has been sent to him. I'm afraid, Arthur, that even Santa's reindeers would have a hard job bringing books to all the members of the Club—we have more than 3,000 boys and girls in this branch alone.

But wouldn't it be great if he could bring each of us a big adventure book.

Here are the letters:

Dear Seck:

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

Christmas stockings are great things. At least I thought so when I woke up this morning and saw mine hanging by the fireplace full of candies, nuts, toys, and books. When I went to bed last night I dreamt about many things, this is one of them. Santa Claus was at his home in the north pole feeding his reindeer and packing the toys and books in his sleigh. When the reindeer had eaten everything and were ready he jumped in his sleigh and away he went. As he was coming to town he was thinking of the toys he would give the different children and about all the different childrens' clubs and about all the different children! As he sat there thinking he suddenly thought of the Seckatary Hawkins Club. That's just a new club but its got a lot of members. I must see what I can do for the boys and girls who belong to it, he thought.

Just then I woke up and after a minute or two I heard a scraping sound. I crept to the top of the stairs and saw a little fat man creeping through the fireplace. My next glance was at the place where my Christmas stockings hung. It was just crammed with toys, candies and books. One big book I noticed would hardly go into the stocking. I crept up to see it then I had a great surprise for what do you think it was a book of the Adventures of Seckatary Hawkins and his club. So this was the surprise Santa was going to put in the stockings of the members of the Seckatary Hawkins Club.

Yours fair and square,
Arthur Beauclerc.

563 Sherbrooke Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Seck:

This is my letter about Christmas Stockings, I hope I will win a prize.

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

One Christmas we were visiting my aunt and uncle in Kingston, and I will tell you about our Christmas stockings. On Christmas Eve my cousins and I hung up one of our stockings by the fireplace. My uncle said he would hang up his stocking because it was the biggest, and Santa would be sure to put the most in his. As usual Santa came in the night. In the morning we were up early and ran to see what was in our stockings. They all looked well filled and especially my uncle's. We started to open ours. There were candies, nuts, crackers, oranges, and twenty-five cents in ours. We made our uncle open his and this is what he found in his, a piece of coal, onions, potatoes, and a carrot, and one cent. He said he was mad at the old chap, but was glad he had made sure he was going to have his dinner. When it comes to Christmas stockings I'm sure Santa likes children to hang their stockings up best, don't you?

Yours fair and square,
Dorothy MacDonald.

534 Sherbrooke Street,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Seck:

I have a little brother of six years of age, called Francis, and every day now, he is looking forward to Christmas approaching. He hangs up his stocking every night on his cot, before he goes to sleep. He says he doesn't want Santa Claus to forget him. His bedroom window is open, as he does not want to give Father Christmas any trouble descending by the old chimney. There is also attached to his stocking, a small piece of paper, and on it he has written the following words: "Dear Santa Claus please don't forget wee Francis in his big cot, and leave for me a Fairy-cycle, or a tricycle, a big gun, a train and a track for it to run up and down on, a bat and a ball. Also a horn like little Boy Blue's, a teddy bear, as big as myself, a box of paints, and a nice pair of shoes to fit my tiny wee feet."

This is all he wants in his Christmas Stocking this Christmas. Last Christmas he got a game of Lotto, a top, a ball, a wrist watch and a lovely big celluloid cow, as large as a baby lamb. He also got two little china dogs and indeed I guess they are fierce looking articles to be sitting on a dressing table in a nursery room.

Now be sure and let Santa Claus fill to the top of every stocking this Christmas for the little boys and girls that belong to the "Seckatary Hawkins Club" of nice and good and useful toys and play things and candies.

Wishing all the members of the Seckatary Hawkins Club a very Happy Christmas.

Yours fair and square,
R. W. Forbes.

Dear Seck:

I think your club is wonderful and so do all my friends who belong. I still want another of your delightful books so here is my story.

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

"Hurrah! Whoopee! Here's my electric train, and just look at that old stocking bulge."

"Oh! There's my doll."

Jimmy Clarke pounded upon the plug and placed it in the socket. The cars went speeding around the track while he and Dorothy (with her doll in her arms) danced around it.

"Are you not going to look in your stocking at all?" asked Daddy, from the doorway.

At this suggestion Jimmy, leaving his train running, grabbed his and dumped all the contents on the rug. Out tumbled a ball, candies, nuts, fruit, picture books, games, pencils, a drum, and a set of harness, for his dog. (It was his mother's stocking).

After viewing all these treasures Dorothy took hers and while Jimmy watched a bit scornfully she pulled out a book of paper cutout dolls, a sewing-box, a trunk, full of clothes, for the new doll, candy, nuts, fruit, picture-books, and a toy piano.

"Shut off your train and come to breakfast," called mother.

The twins were soon in their places at the table.

"I think Santa Claus was pretty good to us," declared Jimmy, "I must go and see what he brought Tom."

"I am going over to show Jean my doll," added Dorothy. "I hope he brought her one the same."

Which he did.

Yours fair and square,
Margaret Lancaster.

Dear Seck:

I am writing a story for your test, "Christmas Stockings," here it is:

"Oh, my, it is the twenty-fourth of December," said Bob as he looked at the calendar.

"Yes, sir, and to-morrow is Christmas," said Gladys in glee. Gladys and Bob were twins and both were five years of age. "I saw Santa Claus and he said he would bring a Colt's carriage," said Gladys.

"And me a drum," finished Bob.

"Clang, clang, clang, clang, clang, clang, clang, clang," announced old man clock.

"Time for bed, children" called mother from and both were five years of age. "I saw Santa

"Time for bed, children" called mother from the front room.

"Gee, mom, let us stay up long enough to hang up our Christmas stockings."

The next morning there came cries, here's my drum, and here's my doll's carriage, then "hurrah" for dear old Santa he has filled up our Christmas stockings.

Yours fair and square,
Arthur Abernethy.

Campbellford, Ont.

Dear Seck:

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

Old Santa comes on Christmas Eve,
Good boys and girls he would like to see,
And fills their stockings as full as can be,
And he said to himself they will be happy,
When they see what I have put on the Christmas tree.

Old Santa went to the Christmas tree,
And filled it as full as it could be.
So up the chimney fast he went
And got in his sled and away he went.

Yours fair and square,
Dorothy Keat.

Dear Seck:

I have been reading your page weekly and I am going to join your club.

Here is my poem:

Of all the days throughout the year,
Christmas Eve's the best;
With Christmas stockings ready,
To receive a welcome guest.

Yours fair and square,
Norbert Perdue.

Dear Seck:

Three years ago on Christmas Eve I hung up a small stocking of mine on the foot of my bed. When I awoke in the morning I was surprised to find a large one filled full. On it Santa pinned a nrte and this is what the note said. Seeing you are not a greedy little girl I have filled a big stocking for you.

Yours fair and square,
Myrtle Boreham.

Dear Seck:

I would like to get a prize. I tried at Hallowe'en but I did not get any. Here is a little piece:

Oh, Christmas time is coming,
The goose is getting fat,
We will hang up our Christmas stockings,
For Santa Claus to stack.

I hope I win a prize for I have tried hard.

Yours fair and square,
Pearl Armstrong.

Dear Seck:

It is coming on Christmas and I am glad. Because it is then that Santa Claus comes around, and gives me all the candies and toys. Oh, what fun it will be when I get up on Christmas morning and find all my things that Christmas stocking.

I hope to find in my stocking some candy, some toys, and a few other things, and some presents on my Christmas tree.

Wishing all the members a happy Christmas.

Yours fair and square,
Helen English.

Dear Seck:

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

Every year on December 24th,
We our biggest stockings do bring forth,
And hang them up for Santa dear,
Who comes to us to bring good cheer.

Our mother says we do not know,
How hard he works to make the toys,
He brings with him in his big sack,
And into all the stockings pack.

So now as Christmas comes near again,
We get to work with might and main,
And help our parents all we can,
And then we'll please the dear old man.

For Christmas should be a joyous time,
For every one in every clime,
For our dear Lord was born that day,
And in a lowly stable lay.

Yours fair and square,
Helen Routly.

Dear Seck:

CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

There were two little girls named Susie and Lacey. They did not believe in Christmas stockings, but on Christmas Eve they thought they had better hang their stockings up. They heard a story how a little boy was punished severely for not hanging his stocking up. Well, at last before they went to bed they hung their stockings up. They slept very sound that night and on Christmas morning they woke up and found their stockings full right up to the top. They were so glad they said they were going to put their Christmas stockings up every year.

Yours fair and square,
Aileen Maude Baskin.

Dear Seck:

I am writing a letter to thank you for the book which I received last Saturday morning. I like it very much. Here is a story about my Christmas Stockings.

MY CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

Last year I got two Christmas stockings besides the one I hung up. In the first one there were two books, a small car, a small barrel with candy in it, also a box of dominoes. In the second was a candy cane, one book about the giant killer, and a whistle. In the one I hung up myself there was an apple, an orange, some candies, and other things.

Yours fair and square,
Willie Tinney.

Password

LOOK FOR THIS PASSWORD IN YOUR BIBLE STORIES

Of course it was an easy matter to figure out last week's password—"Fairytales"—which all of us like to read.

And now you are all shouting for harder ones, eh? Well, let's see what can be done. If you think this one is easy, take a good look at the long line of letters in this week's password. Here it is:

DANZANEBURCHEZ

Here's a jawbreaker that might take you some time to figure out, if ever you get it. The letters are all mixed up as usual, but if you have read the stories of the Bible, you will recognize this word, after you have put the letters in their right places to be the name of a king of Babylon who destroyed Jerusalem and carried the people into captivity. Now, then, what is his name?

Suffered From Indigestion Was Afraid To Eat

Mrs. E. Proulx, 10648-96th St., Edmonton, Alta., writes:—"I suffered from indigestion and was afraid to eat I suffered so after. A friend told me how she used to suffer with the same thing and how had relieved her. I took two bottles and I will never regret the day I did so I am happy to say I can now eat anything and not be bothered with indigestion after."

Her Sore Back was Quickly Relieved

Dodd's Kidney Pills were Recommended by Friend

"I have used Dodd's Kidney Pills for Sore Back and Kidney Trouble. I was not at all well," writes Mrs. M. Nesbest, 272 Bell St., Ottawa, Ont. "A friend told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and I must say I do feel well since I have been taking them. There is nothing better for Sciatica. My husband was very bad with it, and all he took was Dodd's Kidney Pills and he is fine now." Backache is generally Kidney Ache. This pain usually indicates some disorder of the Kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills relieve Backache by toning up the Kidneys to do their work of straining all the impurities, all the poisons, out of the blood.

dation for 60,000 visitors at Regina, and the committee will take up further the question of transportation of visitors and exhibitors throughout various sections of the country on the journey to Regina.

Speaking before the afternoon gathering, Hon. Mr. Motherwell forecast the possibility of a continuation of the movement in other countries in years to come. He emphasized, however, that Canada was taking the lead in the launching of the World Grain Exhibition and Congress. "This is the first such conference," said the minister of agriculture; "there have been what I may term 'partial' ones, such as was held in Rome, but this is the first great world movement of its kind."

Speaking in behalf of the organization committee, J. A. Mooney, chairman of the agricultural department, Provincial Exhibition, Regina, declared that the conference, in addition to its empirt and world scope, would be the means of arousing every farming interest in Canada and that it would be of immense education advantage to every agricultural organization in the country.

All Kinds Included

"All kinds of grains are provided for in our plans," said Mr. Mooney, "in order that we may make this truly a world show. We have included grasses and clover; buckwheat, rice and corn. I emphasize corn in particular, because we want to interest our American friends in this exhibition. We are getting from that country some of our best settlers. We want our neighbors to the south to come here and see just what we are doing, and through this world conference we feel we will continue to get the class of settlers we want."

"The committee will make this show big enough," he said further, "to included the whole world. It is not just for Canada. We want world competition against our own products."

Mr. Mooney pointed out that 50-pound exhibits are asked in order that complete tests might be made. In addition, ground plots are to be laid out and growing tests conducted. Exhibits must be in Regina not later than April 1 of the year of the conference in order that completion of tests on samples, including the sowing of plots to determine the purity of variety, may be made.

OBITUARY

ADDISON MacDONALD

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 1.—(Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Following an illness stretching over a period of years, Addison MacDonald died yesterday morning at his home, Balaclava Street. The late Mr. MacDonald was in his eighty-third year and for the past sixty years had been resident in this town. He was born in Cramahe Township and received his education in the public school of that locality. When a boy in his teens, he went to Colborne where he learned the tinsmithing trade which he followed throughout his active lifetime. In his early twenties he came to Campbellford and entered the employ of the late M. A. Hawley who at that time operated a large tinsmithing business here. Later he was employed by the Turner hardware and by C. S. Gillespie. After leaving the last named business, he did not work steadily due to his ill-health but was occasionally employed to do special work. For the last eleven years, his health has forced his retirement from active life.

Although a member of the Methodist church from birth, Mr. MacDonald attended the Presbyterian church almost from the time he arrived in Campbellford. He was a member of L.O.L. 36 and several years ago was made an honorary member. He was also a charter member of L.O.L. 36 and several years ago was made an honorary member. He was also a charter member of the Royal Black Preceptory 381. He was also a member of the I.O.O.F. and the Foresters Order.

Mr. MacDonall is survived by three sons, George and Alex at home and Robert of Front Street, two daughters, Mrs. Charles Ackerman, Grand Road and Miss Grace MacDonald of Toronto. His wife predeceased him July 28, 1927. There also survives one sister, Mrs. Charles Male, Rochester, N.Y.

The funeral service will be held at two o'clock Sunday afternoon from his late residence, interment in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. With the passing of Addison MacDonald, Campbellford loses one of its oldest and most highly respected citizens.

GEORGE GREENLEY.

(Examiner Correspondence).

Besides his wife there are left to mourn his loss, one daughter, Rosie; two sons, Thomas and Eldon, all of Toronto; two sisters, Mrs. George Russell of town and Mrs. Fred Scott of Trent River; two brothers, Charles of Castleton and Matthew, Trent River Road.

The funeral was held in Toronto on Wednesday, the following relatives from Havelock and district attending: Mr. and Mrs. George Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Scott, Mr. Victor Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Greenley, Mr. Douglas Greenley, Mrs. Rae Williams, Mrs. A. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. George Brooks, and Mr. Philip Greenley.

to be erected in that block.

Alderman Greene thought a great mistake would be made if the permit was granted as the city had spent a large sum of money in beautifying the park.

Alderman Macdonald suggested that a by-law be prepared making the streets surrounding the parks a restricted area, and when he put it into a motion it was seconded by Alderman Greene, and carried.

Alderman Phelan suggested that the Imperial Oil Company be written to saying that public opinion was very much against the building of a service station in front of the park.

Alderman Cotton put Alderman Phelan's suggestion into a motion, which was carried. In the meantime City Engineer Parsons was instructed to withhold the permits.

The Mayor, Alderman Stocker, and Alderman McIntyre were authorized to sell the city's property on the north-west corner of Romaine and George Streets. $2,000 was suggested as the amount, and it is understood that an oil company is seeking the property for a service station.

The two drinking fountains will be removed. The one in front of the City Building on Water Street is to be place dno the Market, and the one at the corner of George and McDonnel Streets taken away entirely.

Many small matters relating to the fixing of holes in the streets and the building of short storm drains were brought to the chairman's attention and will be acted upon immediately.

A new portable boiler will be purchased by the Board of Works to thaw out the storm drains in the winter and early spring. The two power maintainers will be put in shelter on the city's property on Townsend Street. The engineer was instructed to have one of the sheds fixed so that th emotors might be kept warm and ready for plowing the snow from the streets in the winter.

Five men put in tenders for the removal of the garbage for 1929, and on motion of Aldermen Greene and Stocker the contract will be given to H. J. Withers, the present holder for $10,000. Mr. Withers was not the lowest tenderer, but he is $60.00 less than last year, and has given the city, the aldermen believe, excellent service. Next year a larger area has been taken in, and more work will necessarily follow. The other tenders received were from E. K. Graham for $9,850; William Faiers $10,025; P. Angleson, $10,060; and D McMillan, $10,000.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright.
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind.
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind

MILLBROOK

The suggestion has been made that local branches of the Women's Institute follow the example of the Society at Ethel, Ontario, and give a prize to the baby who attended the most meetings in the year—a fine plan to persuade the young mothers to be out for the regular gatherings.

This year, especially, Institutes are being urged to study outstanding Canadian authors at the monthly meetings—giving some part of each program to this subject which will be found both instructive and interesting. The 'teen age girls, who may have taken up some of our home writers in High School work, can be used for this service, occasionally, and will become interested in the Institute activities as a result.

Mr. Putnam has recently sent out this message to Institutes in the province: "An Institute, like a school, should see that every person in the community is given an opportunity to take advantage of the literature available, and the privileges afforded. In connection with 'home economics' see that home made labor-saving devices and conveniences, and the remodelling of homes for convenience, comfort, and healthfulness, are presented at each meeting of your Society. Then, too, look out that the government literature (which may be had for the asking) concerning the growing and using of vegetables is likewise distributed. The health of the people may be materially improved by a judicious production and utilization of Canadian-grown vegetables, instead of such an extended purchase of the imported goods."

"Unostentatious efficiency" is an apt term applied to the excellent community service being done by the Institutes of the province, and there has recently come a call for this organization to interest itself in collecting and preserving local history. Keen interest may be developed in this subject, and where valuable papers, or heir-looms are gathered, or donated, some centre, possibly the local public library, might be utilized for their preservation. Placed where they may be seen, and their history read, the public will be more likely to know what is being done, become actively interested, and so give a more ready assistance with the good work.

CAVAN

The programmes which the East Durham Women's Institute have printed for use from September 1928 to September 1930, contain splendid suggestions and topics for use in the monthly meetings, appropriate to the season.

The topics suggested for the December meeting are "Report of Convention and Discussion," "Keeping the Christmas Spirit Alive Throughout the Year," "Home Discipline—Means and Methods," "Success from Various Standpoints"—Roll call to be answered by practical suggestions for Christmas.

The custom followed in Cavan Institute is to choose half of the topics for use this year, leaving the rest to be used in that month in the next year.

If these topics are assigned to different members, either to be given as a paper or talk, followed by discussion, it makes an interesting helpful meeting.

The more members who can be induced to take part, the better, because no two persons are likely to take the same view-point on any subject. A meeting is apt to be monotonous if month after month the same persons take the topics. Every person can contribute some ideas or thoughts.

Besides, these topics arranged by the District Executive, the Department has printed a fine and varied list of subjects suitable to be used for papers:

1. Training oneself to see the humorous side of things.
2. The art of resting.
3. Effect of Laughter on a System.
4. Break the Monotony or Break the Homemaker.
5. Wholesome Reading for the Home.
6. Warp of Making Different Colors in Olden Days.

15. Parenthood among Birds with examples of Good Fathers.
16. The Birds of our Neighborhood, Their Haunts and Habits (each member deals with one). The Life Story of the Moths and Butterflies of our Orchards and Gardens.
18. Helping in the Weed Campaign.
19. Making Use of Free Trees from the Forestry Department.
20. The Household Share of the Income.
21. How Should a Wife's Future be Provided For?
22. Teaching Girls and Boys to Earn, Spend, Give, save systematically.
23. Preparing things attractively for Market.
24. The Relation between Intelligent Citizenship and Taxes.
25. The Prevention of War and its Waste.
26. What we Can Do to Lower the Maternal Death Rate.

32. Sweet Sixteen—Its Dangers and Delights.
33. The Choice of a Career for a Girl.
34. The Choice of a Career for a Boy.
35. Helping the Boys through the Perilous 'Teen Age Successfully.
36. Teaching Boys and Girls to hold the Right Attitude to Each Other.

With such a wide range of subjects to choose from, and the talent found in any Women's Institute, there is no excuse for an uninteresting meeting.

WARSAW

The Department of Agriculture does not broadcast literature, but there is a large service available to Institutes, or Institute members, if asked for, it may be obtained by writing to the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto. The information asked must be along a definite line. Literature on Fruit Growing, Vegetable Growing, Poultry Raising, Egg Production, Bee Keeping, all classes of Live Stock, Farm Crops, Butter Making, Farm Water Supply, Sewage Disposal are dealt with and published.

Lists of available agricultural and other government publications of special interest to women are supplied to Institutes frequently. Sample copies are supplied the Institute officers upon request. The members may examine these, and send for what they want. Quite recently Warsaw Branch has gotten literature on Why and How to use Milk, Cheese, Buttermilk, Skim Milk, Cottage Cheese; Vegetables, Their Food Value and Preparation.

The Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, also furnishes, upon request, lists of agricultural literature published by the Dominion Govtrnment.

If an Institute wishes to secure a lecturer or demonstrator along agricultural lines, they may do so by applying to the agricultural representative for the county (Mr. J. B. Nelson, George Street, for Peterborough County, or write direct to the Institutes branch.

At Warsaw we are greatly indebted to the agricultural representatives; they have generally given us one lecture during the year, and have ever been ready with advice and aid.

Naturally, a properly heated and lighted hall must be supplied, and entertainment for the lecturer, though often the representative brings him, and they do notwait for even a cup of tea.

Lecturers may be had on Beekeeping, Vegetable Growing, Small Fruits, Dairying. Institutes are urged to make use of their opportunities. These lectures and demonstrations are for the general public, and must be well advertised. In Warsaw District within the year there have been demonstrations on poultry culling, also lectures and demonstrations on sheep and lambs. All quite well attended.

THE CONVENTION.

(By The Examiner's Warsaw Representative at Toronto.)

There are now five other convention areas, at all of which the programs are equally good, and yet the number at Toronto was about as large as ever, partly because new branches have been organized, partly because interest is being shown that simply for the good of the branches, more delegates are being sent. It is much regretted by many that Mrs. Cooper of Warsaw, member of the confederation board, whose name was on the program, and who was wanted at the head table at the banquet, was not present.

The first session began promptly at 2 o'clock p.m., with the singing of our Institute Ode, and repeating the Lord's prayer.

Mrs. Meek, chairman, asked us to answer the questions: Are we any better? Are our homes, our communities, our country any better because we have lived his past year? In introducing Mayor McBride she spoke of his pride in Toronto, after a trip to the coast, and of Premier King's pride in Canada, after his visit to Europe.

Mayor McBride welcomed the Institute to a city which he smilingly said he considered the best governed city in the country; it is a clean, healthy, wealthy city in which 84 per cent. of the homes are owned by those living in them. The car lines pay for themselves, no taxes are levied for them. He advised the ladies to visit the Royal Fair. It was copied from Chicago, but it is now the largest of its kind and Chicago follows it. He spoke of the 12 miles of front door improvement along the lake. For the first time in 20 years a boat load of grain arrived recently in Toronto. He complimented the Institute on its activities, and considered that the women's organizations did infinitely more good than all the men's organizations. The women considered the morale and are more sincere than men.

Mrs. Abbott of Erin, replied, thanking the Mayor for the hospitality of the city which was an ideal one for conventions. The interest of Institutes has surpassed expectations. There are many problems, more complex now, than even 25 years ago. The great problem is the child. The child who is being educated in a Canadian home has not the simple life he had twenty-five years ago. We are getting the better of our tasks; we meet to compare, and learn, and return with greater enthusiasm.

Mrs. Meeks spoke of the great loss Mrs. Banks' death was, and there were a few minutes of silent prayer.

Some of the activities and relief work reported by the committee were community halls, rest rooms, parks, help for invalids, for needs, for emergencies, libraries, classes, field days, banquets, helping in homes where death had come, Hallowe'en frolics, Christmas cheer, donations of money, supplies for hospitals, aiding temperance, welcoming and assisting newcomers.

There are so many possibilities that no one branch can begin to take up all.

Mrs. McDougal, president of Nova Scotia Institute, brought greetings from their seven year old organization, and reminded us that human nature is ever the same. If in our communities our homes and ourselves we want to do most we must have the best We are all made alike, head, hands, feet, and so on, yet no two are alike in appearance, in character or nature, and it is necessary for us to consider that, while we all work for the same ideals.

Mrs. Lang read the resolutions. Some were, seeing truant officers acted, study League of Nations, protest against nude advertisements, wanting married men in prison paid, and the money go towards the support of their families.

Mrs. Macoun gave a full report of the financial standing of the organization.

Dr. Bates gave a short talk on Social Hygiene.

In the sixteenth century average length of life was 26 years; it increased at about 4 years a century until 1800—1875 it increased 9 years. Now the average life is 58 years. There is still much preventable disease, which carries immense waste of human, energy and money. Then there is venereal disease. Every child deserves the opportunity of being good; broken homes induce immorality. People need education along all forms of health. The time must surely soon come when a health officer will give his whole time to a community to keep it well.

Robert Simpson banquetted the ladies and four gentlemen. Unfortunately flu and last minute calls made it impossible for Mr. D. H. Gibson, Hon. G. H. Ferguson, Hon. Mr. Martin and Hon. Wm. Finlayson to attend. The speeches were three minute ones praising the Institute.

At 8 o'clock busses conveyed the party to the Royal Fair.

RESOLVED that we have compulsory school supervision at the noon hour.

THAT the Ontario Government should support the Old Age Pensions Bill.

SOUTH ESSEX—WHEREAS we have a federal statutory right to call ourselves Canadians; therefore, we petition the Provincial Government, asking that in the matter of vital statistics, registration of birth, issuing of death certificates, etc., the word "Canadian" shall be designated to those born in this country or those who become citizens of this country.

SIMCOE COUNTY CONVENTION—RESOLVED that as Canada is taking her place as a self-governing nation in the British Empire, we be recognized as Canadians and not by the name of the country from which our fathers came.

SPARROW LAKE — WHEREAS under present laws, children born in Canada of other than British parents, cannot be registered as Canadians, but must take the name of the country from whence their forefathers came; and

WHEREAS this said law does not foster the spirit of patriotism, but rather detracts therefrom,

RESOLVED that we, the members of East Simcoe Women's Institutes, assembled in Convention, do petition the Federal Government to pass legislation allowing Canadian-born children whose parents were also born in Canada, to be registered as Canadians.

Carried unanimously at Convention of E. Simcoe, April 29th, 1928.

WHEREAS it is most desirable that music be taught in the rural sections of the Province, and

WHEREAS the Women's Institutes have, under great handicaps, assisted in providing instruction in music in a number of rural schools

BE IT RESOLVED that the appreciation of the Women's Institutes be extended to the Department of Education for additional assistance that has been provided recently for this service.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that consideration be given to provide a limited amount of musical instruction for all rural schools.

OMAGH—District Annual of Halton County, Acton, June 6th, 1928.

INASMUCH as music has been taught in the schools in some rural districts and the educational benefit to the child is a recognized fact; we would like to place the matter before the Department—That a grant of equal value be given to the School Boards or the Societies financing the musical education of a school; as is given for Domestic Science or Agriculture."

WALKERTON—RESOLVED that we, the delegates to the Women's Institute Convention held in Walkerton, put ourselves on record as endorsing the stand which the Department of Agriculture is taking for sound education and honest methods among the pupils in the school Fair Competitions, and would urge the co-operation of the parents in seeing that the work is done by the pupils.

Carried unanimously by standing vote.

Moved by Mrs. W. B. Moore, Lion's Head; seconded by Mrs. G. Cruikshank, Wingham,

THAT we request the Government, through the Department of Education to take steps to see the dangers of drinking alcoholic drinks are taught to all children in our public and high schools, and that all school inspectors be instructed to see that the teachers in their inspectorate are teaching those chapters in the Government Health Book which deal with tobacco, alcohol and other narcotic drugs.

THAT we ask the Federal Board to send a small committee to interview Hydro Electric Commission to hear their points of view on the question of Hydro rates, and to discuss how the difficulties and objections of the rural consumers and would-be consumers can be met.

THAT a cablegram of sympathy and loyalty be sent to King George in his serious illness, from this Convention, and

THAT we pray for his speedy recovery, and

THAT the expense of the cablegram be defrayed by taking up a collection.

RESOLVED that a note of deep sympathy be passed with Mr. Sidney Banks in his recent tragic loss of his wife. The Women's Institutes recognize the big debt of gratitude which they owe to the untiring energy and fearless thought of Mrs. Banks and realize that on them devolves the responsibility to carry to fruition causes, like that of temperance Education for the young and medical attendance for the sick, to which Mrs. Banks gave her life.

Sympathy with Mrs. Coghill, Convener of Historical Research for Western Division, stricken with stroke resulting in partial paralysis and partial blindness.

THAT we assembled hereby express our sympathy to Miss Stuart, President of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada, in her affliction and trust that she may experience an early and complete recovery and thus be able to continue her capable, kindly leadership.

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION:

I have felt the "urge" a great many times, to write to you and tell you how much I enjoy your page. So many writers have found words with which to tell of its wonders that there seems to be nothing new to say of it. But it certainly has a place all its own in my heart—a place never held before by a woman's page in any paper. As in so many things, expectation is much to be preferred to realization, we find this saying reversed in regards to your page, or may I be bold and say 'ours'?

I am sending in the coupon for the helps. This is the first time I have written and I feel rather mean to think that I am begging so soon. I am sure you will think I am very greedy askin; for so much and if so please exclude some.

Well, I feel that I have taken enough of your valuable time and so will close, wishing you and the page the best of luck, I am,

Sincerely yours,
Ariadne."

Warkworth.

Yours is one of the nicest tributes to our page we have received, "Ariadne," because my hope is to have our page so personal to every woman reader of The Examiner that it will indeed have a place in her heart. I certainly appreciate your letter.

You are very welcome to all the helps I have, and need feel under no obligation whatever. I take a great joy in helping in this way, when the neighbors do so much in contributing recipes and hints.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

Please send me this week's help, I received the other help sheets, and they were fine. Thanks a lot.

Here is a little help that may help some neighbor to keep the blackening from burning off your kitchen stove. Mix your black lead with water in which blue vitrol has been dissolved, also add a little sugar. A handy way to do this, as the blue vitrol takes sometime to dissolve, is to put some pieces in a bottle and fill bottle with hot water, label and put away, then it is all ready to mix your black lead whenever you wish to clean your stove. No exact amount is necessary, I just use what I think enough.

Yours sincerely,
Dot."

Roseneath.

Thanks a lot, "Dot," for the hint. We had an SOS some time ago to which this is an answer.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

I am so sorry that I have neglected writing, but my brother has been very sick and my time has been limited, but am going to try and do better in the future. I read the Women's Page regularly and I certainly enjoy it. I find so many useful helps along with recipes.

Hoping that I haven't made my little note too long, and wishing the page loads of success—also yourself.

I am enclosing a Christmas cake recipe which we have used for a good many years and find it good and keeps nice and moist.

Yours for luck,
Sincerely,
Betty."

Harold.

I'm glad to hear from you, "Betty," and to know you like our page. Thanks for the Christmas cake recipe, which seems very appetizing. My! I do wish I could cook and try all the good things for which you neighbors send instructions!

* * *

"Dear Marion:

Received your helps some time ago and have been slow to thank you, but not feeling very well, put it off. I made the flowers and they look very nice. I am making a scrap book out of the helps given and have tried several, all turning out good.

Many thanks,
Mac."

Bracebridge.

I'm pleased to know you had success with the flowers, "Mac," and hope the other helps turn out equally well. Don't you find a scrap book a great joy? It's certainly a grand and glorious feeling when one wants some recipe or idea in a hurry—and knows one has it safely put away.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

Your help is quite wonderful. What a busy time you must have! I am sending the coupon for the crush collar and some previous "helps." I hope I am not asking too much.

Like most of the neighbors, I am a busy mother. Have four small children. I believe in keeping my children very close to me as long as possible and therefore would not consider sending them to school till they are eight years old. It is much harder to manage the work and teach them their lessons, including the oversight of their music, but I feel confident that it will more than repay me in the future. My children have a time-table to follow each day. They get marks for carefully carrying out all their health rules and doing their lessons. I fancy it would be interesting to compare "lists" with other neighbors.

I've often wondered if it would be wise to have a law which compelled parents to have enough school training to fit them to teach their children to read and write well, and to do easily and correctly any addition, subtraction, multiplication and division questions, before sending them to school. Surely if parents could not qualify in that simple matter they would be incompetent in other branches of home-management. What do you think about it?

We have just been taking the paper for about two months and would not like to give it up. My scrap-book is filling more rapidly with clippings from The Examiner, especially from your own page.

I must write up some helpful ideas for the neighbors next time to show that I appreciate the many suggestions received through your department.

Willo."

I don't find any difficulty in keeping busy, "Willo," like most women, I fancy. Yours is a unique idea in the bringing up of your children, and I would like to know more about how it works out. What class do they enter when they do go to school? It would be embarrassing for a child to be put in a grade with younger children.

The time-table idea is splendid, and is certainly building well for the future. I am very methodical, myself, but so many people always appear to be in a fuss and a muss. If my desk piles up with work I simply become frantic—so I see that it is clear most of the time.

I remember when I was living in an apartment I used to hear the Woman next door tearing around, banging doors, rattling dishes on the stove, moving furniture and generally sounding pretty busy. Probably I was so quiet she thought I neve did any housework, but I don't think for all her fuss she had her apartment any better looking than mine.

It's a mighty good idea to bring up children to be methodical.

Please write and tell us more about your systems.

"Dear Marion:

I am sending ten cents for which please send me the helps checked on enclosed coupon. I enjoy your page very much and always look for it.

Thanking you in advance, I am,

Yours truly,
Mrs. W. B."

P.S.—I hope you can use these helps.

For iodine stains, dissolve laundry starch in cold water. Soak garment in this, when stain will disappear. The same remedy is an antidote if iodine is swallowed.—Mrs. W. B."

Thanks for your hints, "Mrs. W. B." which will find their way into many scrap books.

I returned the 10 cents, as all I require is a 2-cent stamp for postage.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

Enclosed find coupon slip for which I will be truly grateful. I enjoy your page very much.

It is a delight to try the new recipes and it's fun to guess who sends them from our own town. There are so many M.E.M.'s of which I am one.

Thank you,
M. E. M."

Lakefield.

I'm very glad that you enjoy our page, "M. E. M." Write again.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

I received your helps some time ago, but have neglected in writing. I also wish to thank the neighbors for their kind help when I was in trouble.

I am sending in a recipe hoping someone can use it. Wishing yourself and the neighbors every success, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
Blue Eyes."

Welcome back, "Blue Eyes." We've missed you and hope you will write oftener in future. Thank you for the recipe.

"Dear Marion:

I have found your women's page very interesting as well as helpful. I have tried some of the recipes and find them good.

I enjoyed very much the many letters written by the neighbors. I think the Armistice Number was wonderful which goes to show what our fair sex can do if put to the test. I would have liked to have helped but I am such a poor writer, but feel that we women should rally around this page with Marion if only to help someone in some small way. After all it is the little things that count in life. I will enclose two recipes which I find very good. I would like household helps which I will check, thanking you for the same, and wishing you every success.

Bessie."

Your letter is inspiring, "Bessie," and, indeed, the neighbors are rallying around to help make the page a success. I'm glad you liked the Armistice number. I'll be looking forward to receiving a letter from you soon again.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

I am sending you in a Christmas story; do not know if you will be able to use it or not, but thought I would try one anyway.

I received the "helps" and thank you so much; have started my Christmas gifts all ready.

I was out in the woods yesterday and found some wonderful orange berries, growing in clusters like grapes. I have been told they are the bittersweet berries. They make a wonderful decoration when in a dark green vase. I also saw some pussy-willows out.

Well, I must close. Thanking you in advance for the time you are going to use in reading the enclosed story.

I am, "Lest you forget,"
Ariadne."

Warkworth.

I'm very glad to have your story, "Ariadna," but can't say even a whisper about it until after the results of the contest are announced. There are so many stories I don't know where I'll ever get room for them, or when I'll get them judged. I think next Wednesday's paper will be ALL Women's Pages!— Did you notice that this past week we have had two every day?

What you write about the berries is an interesting hint for Christmas decoration.

Let's hear from you soon again.

"Dear Marion:

I am enclosing the coupon for this week's help. I do hope I am not too late, as I have a wee baby nine months old, and I want to take him out every day and I thought if I made him a baby bunting bag, I could keep him warm. At that age they are very busy wee things and hard to keep covered.

We have moved to Port Hope for the winter but mother always saves The Examiner for us when we come home. We both enjoyed the Armistice Number very much, but the Whatnot is the best page of all.

Thanks very much for past favors and hoping I am not too late for this week's help. I remain,

Yours sincerely,

The help has been sent to you, "Mrs. C. J." and I hope baby has a real cosy winter in his bunting bag. It IS hard to keep little hands under cover, isn't it? Write and tell the neighbors how your effort succeeds.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

Please accept my poor Christmas story. I know it will find the waste paper basket, so will not need my name. Will sign myself,

Alley."

Lakefield.

You guessed wrongly, "Alley." Your story will be in the special paper, if there's room—if not I'll have to print some on the following day.

"Dear Marion:

Now that there is so much discussion about the guns in Central Park, I would like to say a few words regarding same.

To me the "crowning insult" was when the guns were painted! Now, I ask you confidentially, Marion dear, who ever heard of painting an antique or relic?

The most interesting thing about those guns was the marks and scars of battle! However, there are always some dumbells who insist upon gilding the lily.

I'm rather thankful there are no old forts or other historical buildings in Peterborough, as if there were, they would probably be papered and fitted out with hardwood floors!

You may say, and correctly, too, that this was done to preserve them. Well, personally, I prefer them as they were when they were captured from the enemy.

ANNE HOWE."

I'm no advocate of spoiling old trophies with a coat of paint, "Anne Howe." As a practical suggestion, now too late, some woman like myself might have hinted at shellac or some similar transparent material which would have protected the guns without spoiling their appearance. I don't know at that, that it is yet too late. The guns might be painted in their glorious camouflage and then covered periodically with shellac. Another thing—there should be logs rammed into the barrels so tight that no dampness could enter there to rust the guns from the inside. This is done in the Old Country—the wood coming to within four inches of the muzzle.

The trouble is none of us ever had the opportunity to suggest any of these things—but now we can tell our ideas through this column.

I certainly admired the spirit of that meeting on Thursday evening, didn't you?

Marion

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion,

I wonder if you cando a good turn for the men in our house? They wear rough boots while doing the chores, and find that in winter the boots harden up. They have tried "dubbin," but it doesn't seem to last. I wonder if there is anything else you can suggest, or perhaps the neighbors will know.

C. L."

Marmora.

The only treatment I know of, "C. L.", is rubbing with castor oil. The boots should be washed well in warm water, and the castor oil rubbed in. This softens the leather and makes the boots quite "supple."

Have the neighbors any other hints on this subject?

"Farmer's Wife," writing from Apsley, suggests that burnt saucepans can be easily cleaned by boiling in them a solution of salt and water. The solution should be allowed to stand in the saucepan all night, and then brought to the boil.

S-O-S

If you have a problem, or want advice, or a recipe, the neighbors will be glad to help out. Write to Marion, who will present your request.

Someone sent in a recipe for "Nugget Candy," and requested the household help, but neglected to sign her name on either the recipe or coupon. Will you kindly send in your name and address, when the helps will be ofrwarded to you.

Girl Had 999 Buttons; What a Hope This Age!

HAMILTON, Ont., Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—No doubt the up-to-date little girl of to-day will smile amusedly at this quotation from The Spectator files of sixty years ago:

"A little girl of this city took an extra prize for two strings of buttons, 999 varieties, all of which she collected in a few months." Think of such diligence and perseverance—two traits which seem to be as old-fashioned as the collecting of buttons. "And yet, one cannot help wondering where, in this age of brief and slipover garments, the modern little girl would find so many buttons to collect, be she ever so diligent and perseverant! It may be a case of "The child is willing, but the times forbid!"

Know Her?

You ought to know this lovely New York City girl because her blonde beauty has been displayed on so many magazine covers. She's Marion Dahl, 35 Clarkson St., Brooklyn. Artists say she's a "type!" They fairly rave over her delicate flesh tints and the golden glory of her hair!

Miss Dahl says: "Everyone I know, tells me how wonderful my hair looks, nowadays. I don't feel like it's a personal compliment, however; I take it more as a compliment to the method I'm using to care for it. It's the rage among girls here in New York. All you do is put a little Danderine on your brush each time you use it. My hair was wiry and hard to keep in place, but Danderine makes it soft and easy to dress and holds it like I arrange it, for hours! My scalp fairly tingles with vigor after I use it, and it keeps my head so clean I don't need to shampoo half so often. It brings out the color of my hair marvelously, making it fairly glisten!"

Every application of Danderine tones and refreshes your scalp. It removes the oily film from each strand and makes dull, stringy hair gleamy, soft and easily manageable. It dissolves dandruff and keeps it out of your hair. It isn't sticky or oily. It doesn't show. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles.

LITTLE SONGS OF LOVE

HAD I BUT KNOWN
By A. Kipps-Rushton.

I might have seen, had I but eyes to see,
Each crimson blush, each smile was meant for me;
I little knew the love that shone sincere
Within your eyes, within each falling tear.

I might have told, had I the tongue to tell,
The tender longing that I knew so well;
The blissful hope which your sweet presence brought,
I might have told, if only I had thought.

I might have known, had I but heart to know,
Your life was mine, before I let you go.
No other love my soul shall ever own;
Had I but known, dear heart! had I but known!

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE
By Mary Marshall.

A graceful version of the new necktie is found in this frock of brown transparent velvet with cream lace collar and a brown silk tie.

There is something about a necktie tied in a neat bow somewhere under a woman's chin, that is usually most attractive. It would be as hard to explain what it is about a necktie that so usually adds to the youthful appearance of a woman who wears it as it would to explain what it is about earrings that makes them add a subtle something to the aspect of the one who wears them.

If you add to the bow tie a collar of lace or lawn the effect is even more pleasing.

The fad for wearing long neck scarfs tied under the chin in a bow is said to have started in Paris, although I have seen several followers of the new fashion on this side of the Atlantic. The scarf chosen is some ten or twelve inches wide, of soft satin, and long enough to pass once around the neck and then tie in a large bow with ends to the waist in front. This arrangement is sometimes used with the tailored cloth jacket and sometimes under a fur coat.

And now that autumn is practically over and the ideas launched by the French dressmakers at the midseason displays a month ago have been fairly well assimilated on both sides of the Atlantic, certain facts concerning this season's mode are pretty well assured. No radical change in skirt lengths at present, thank fortune. Waistlines are just a trifle higher in most cases.

Fullness and drapery on skirts are placed low—there is the same tendency for everything to dip somewhat downward at the back, hemlines are as irregular as ever and drapery is still spoken of as being animated. Bodices are just a little more closely draped, just a trifle further from the straight, shapeless sacks they were a few years ago.

YOUR HOME AND YOU
By BETSY CALLISTER

It might seem like rank heresy to the vacuum cleaner salesman to say that there ever was a time when the old-fashioned method of beating or sweeping carpets outdoors was in any way to be preferred to up-to-date vacuum cleaning inside. But the very thorough fresh-air bath that a carpet receives by being swept or beaten outdoors does make it fresher and generally more desirable.

To be sure once you are accustomed to a vacuum cleaner it would be very difficult to get along without one, but just for now and then the outdoor treatment is worth while too. That is, if you still live in a neighborhood where carpet sweeping is permitted outdoors. There are sometimes rules against beating rugs from windows and on roofs of apartment houses, but when you live in the suburbs or a not too crowded neighborhood you can probably do a little old-fashioned rug airing without troubling your neighbors in the least.

If you are fortunate enough to have a vacuum cleaner and also have a fairly broad porch and can manage to connect your vacuum cleaner so you can use it there, an excellent airing may be given by doing the cleaning on the porch. In this way you get fresh outdoor air drawn through the rug or carpet as the cleaning process progresses.

Lacking the electrical device, the best thing is to spread the rug or carpet on the grass face side down. It should then be beaten on the wrong side and then turned over and swept on the right side.

If perchance there happens to be snow—nice dry snow and a crisp cool day—a snow cleaning will do wonders to restore the color of your rugs. Just sprinkle some of the dry snow on the rug and sweep it briskly off again. Lacking this you may use a handful of salt to advantage. Sprinkle this over the surface of the carpet and sweep it vigorously off again.

A little lemon juice squeezed into the water in which they are cooked will make potatoes white and impart a delicate flavor.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

WHILE we were sipping coffee in the home of a friend on Bolivar street after playing bridge last week, the radio was tuned in and my hostess remarked that she always bought a certain kind of tooth paste and a certain brand of coffee because these firms put on radio concerts.

• • •

"They are good enough to supply us with entertainment," she said, "and so I think it only right that we should buy their goods."

• • •

Now, I wish to make clear right here that I'm not kicking about the coffee—it was delicious—and I suppose, although I didn't sample IT, that the tooth paste is just as good as any other on the market.

• • •

But is my hostess right in her idea of buying things for the house because the people who sell them provide her with entertainment?

It doesn't seem so to me. Quality and value are two essentials to consider when making purchases, and the plan followed by my hostess of last week ignores both.

• • •

It just happens that the coffee is widely advertised in newspapers and magazines, and is recognized as being among the leaders. But what if it were a "dark-horse," unknown to fame?

• • •

Would it be wise to purchase it on the strength of the singing ability of artists hired by the makers of the coffee?

• • •

It's not sensible, my dear. Goods should be bought for their intrinsic worth. That's why so many "Buy at Home" campaigns fall down—the merchants fail to measure up to the standards set elsewhere and people simply cannot afford to pay for patriotism.

• • •

All things being equal, the average housewife would rather buy things she can see, from a merchant whom she knows, in a store to which she can return if there is any discrepancy.

• • •

And she would be acting foolishly, in my opinion, if she were led by anything else than her own good judgment, based upon what responsible persons tell her about the goods.

• • •

I think we may rely upon the integrity of Peterborough merchants. If they tell us a piece of goods is all wool, they don't mean maybe. If they tell us coffee is fresh, they don't mean it was a week ago.

• • •

If we run across any other kind of merchant we speedily find him out and if we are sensible we take our trade elsewhere.

• • •

I like the way they have in Peterborough stores now of pointing out "seconds" to one. Often and often one might be easily deceived, but the salesman will go to great pains to find some infinitesimal fault that makes the article a "second"—and show it to the customer.

• • •

I had one experience like this in a George street store where I bought a linen tablecloth. It appeared perfectly good to me, but the clerk sought and found a fault so small that I actually laughed—not one in a thousand would ever notice it.

• • •

That is honesty, and that one instance gave me a confidence in that particular salesman that will take me back to the store whenever I need anything more in that line.

• • •

Suppose, on the other hand, he had not mentioned the pulled thread, and I had found it when I spread the cloth on a table? Wouldn't I have been mad?

• • •

And, next time, wouldn't I have sought another store?

• • •

So, judging by this experience and others, we may rely upon the merchants to tell us the facts about the goods we propose buying. Upon those facts we should base our purchases, and ignore whatever has no bearing upon our getting good value for the money we wish to spend.

• • •

This is a good principle to keep in mind when making Christmas purchases—and, by the way, have you started yet?

• • •

I was surprised in one house where I visited recently, to see a score of bundles nicely wrapped and sealed, all ready for Christmas. My hostess told me she had worked out a scheme of buying one article a week and wrapping it right away, ready for the festive season.

• • •

By following this plan she is able to give more attention to fitting gifts to the individuals for whom they are intended; she gets a better selection than is possible later; and she avoids that terrible last week rush.

• • •

Hearing her crow about the "Grand and glorious feeling" certainly made me feel that the idea is worth while. Mark it down for next year, neighbors.

• • •

And, in the meantime, it's time you were planning your Christmas party for THIS year. Send for the help prepared by Laura, telling menus, games and decorations for Christmas. It will make the party easy to organize

• • •

And, if you have still some gifts to plan, ask at the same time for the four-page folder telling about Christmas gifts to make at home. There's still time, for these gifts are easily made.

Just when I'm on this subject of Christmas and Christmas shopping, here's a good story told me by "Quo Vadis?" "I am Scotch on my mother's side of the family and English from my father," says "Quo Vadis?" "Recently a merchant in town asked me if I found any difficulty through being half Scotch and half English.

• • •

"I said, 'Indeed I do. When I go downtown, the English half of me wants to buy, and the Scotch half reminds me that I can't afford it.'

• • •

"He said, 'Well, well, which of them wins?' I told him the English half, and after laughing heartily, he said I'd always be welcome in his store.

• • •

"Now, doesn't it sound as if HE were Scotch?"

• • •

Yes, "Quo Vadis?" and if his name doesn't start with "S" I'm a poor guesser!

• • •

The date has now passed for the receiving of Christmas stories. All that I can use have been set in type, and will be printed, I expect, on Wednesday. I may be able to announce the winners of the prizes on that day, too.

• • •

Then we'll start thinking up another competition for sometime in the New Year.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

To-day's reading is a suggestion by Mrs. T. C., of Campbellford, and seems very appropriate to the season. The sad story is in sharp contrast to the rather blase humor of Mark Twain, printed yesterday; Mrs. C. says: "I like this poem because of its pretty description of the snow, and because it is so sad and yet hopeful."

December 1, 1928

"The First Snow-Fall" is by James Russell Lowell, who was born February 22, 1819, an died August 12, 1891. He was an editor of the Atlantic Monthly and of the North American Review. He is remembered for his poetical works: "A Year's Life," "The Biglow Papers," "Under the Willow," and "Heartsease and Rue". His prose writings included: "My Study Windows," "Fireside Travels," and 'Among My Books."

The snow had begun in the gloaming,
And busily all the night
Had been heaping field and highway
With a silence deep and white.

Every pine and fir and hemlock
Wore ermine too dear for an earl,
And the poorest twig on the elm tree
Was ridged inch-deep with pearl.

From sheds new-roofed with Carrara
Came Chanticleer's muffled crow,
The stiff rails were softened to swan's down,
And still fluttered down the snow.

I stood and watched by the window
The noiseless work of the sky,
And the sudden flurries of snow birds
Like brown leaves whirling by.

I thought of a mound in sweet Auburn
Where a little headstone stood;
How the flakes were folding it gently,
As did robins the babes in the wood.

Up spoke our own little Mabel,
Saying, "Father, who makes it snow?"
And I told of the good All-Father
Who cares for us here below.

Again I looked at the snow-fall,
And thought of the leaden sky
That arch'd o'er our first great sorrow,
When that mound was heaped so high.

I remembered the gradual patience
That fell from that cloud like snow,
Flake by flake, healing and hiding
The scar of our deep-plunged woe.

And again to the child I whispered,
"The snow that husheth all,
Darling, the merciful Father
Alone can make it fall!"

Then, with eyes that saw not, I kissed her;
And she, kissing back, could not know
That my kiss was given to her sister,
Folded close under deepening snow.

After eight years of faithful and constant effort, the Female Voice Choir is about to be disbanded. This body of musical ladies, which was called into being by Mrs. R. Bugg, the leader, eight years ago, has done a great deal to assist charitable enterprises in the city. Working in a modest way, the members have been able to contribute the fine total of over $1500 to various good causes, during their tenure of life.

They are a band of women, twenty-six in number, who have never received any reimbursement for their endeavors, which have taken the line of concerts given for one good cause after another. Such institutions as the Children's Shelter and St. Vincent's Orphanage, the Well Babies' Clinic, the men's and women's organizations of the Canadian Legion, have all been made the richer by donations from the Female Voice Choir. Two years ago, an elderly couple in Belmont were benefitted to the extent of $100 by a concert given by this group.

Owing to pressure of other duties, the leader, Mrs. Bugg, does not see fit to continue the work any longer. For many years, she has labored successfully to present concerts which had a pleasing atmosphere in their presentation of old-time and popular music, with many novelties in the line of recitations and special solos. While Mrs. Bugg has enjoyed the work, the members have rallied nobly and faithfully under her leadership.

There is also a Juvenile Choir, an offshoot of the Female Voice Choir, and the nineteen members of this organization have decided to turn it into a social club and change the name.

The final concert in the life of the Female Voice Choir will be given on Friday, December 7th, in the Canadian Legion hall, and will be followed by a dance. The proceeds will be turned over to the members of the Legion.

Anyone desiring to get an idea for Christmas gifts would be well advised to mark the group advertising on each Friday in The Examiner, under the heading of "Mistress Nell Goes Shopping."

He is just a lowly cart horse. His lines are not streamlines at all. In fact, he is quite flat as to face and bulky as to feet, which have shaggy fetlocks. He stood the other day at the curb, patiently waiting for a pile of papers to fill the cart behind him. But he had a claim to beauty, after all. Over his right ear, in rakish fashion, someone had stuck a little red velvet flower. It gave him a touch of quite surprising interest.

One does not think of the red cranberry as being very beautiful, but Mrs. J. B. F. Livesay of Toronto, speaking to the members of the Women's Canadian Club at their meeting this week, told them that this red berry is the symbol of woman's beauty in the far-away Ukraine. A poet of that land speaks of the red cranberry that hangs over the well, withered by the blast of winter, and the poetic imagery in this song has to do with the fading beauty of a maiden married to a drunkard.

Speaking of the "black-browed" beauty which is so favored in Ukraina, Mrs. Livesay went on to speak of the national costume of the women: the snow-white smock, embroidered, the full sleeves, the skirt barred in oblongs of bright colors, the silk apron, the belt which is laced in such a fashion that the maiden may span her waist with her own fingers, the red shoes and the blue stockings and the many strings of beads.

A reference by the speaker to the pretty way in which the young girls guard these beads against breaking, when they dance their national favorites, brings back to mind the gay and vivid dancing of the fair-haired Anna Bolishyn, a small beauty of the Ukraine, who visited Peterborough on two occasions during Kiwanis Fair week, last year and this season. This little charming girl, who danced so sweetly and daintily, held her beads in such a way that they did not jump about. It was a graceful gesture with the little hands that held them in place. The writer remembers watching the pretty young girl with admiration as she held them so carefully in place. It seems this is part of their training in the dance.

When the young girls marry, they plait their hair in a long coronal of braids, around the head. This coif, with the little flowers which are braided into it, is called "the white peacock."

Mrs. Livesay's interpretation of the poems was very charming. One little bit complains in verse about the lover who did not come. The maiden had been beaten by her mother, "because I love Petrushka so," but she did not care. She prepared a fine meal for him and then—he did not arrive. The cranky old suitor favored by her parents came instead.

MAN AND WIFE GO TO COLLEGE

Plan Five Years' Course to Add to Medical Knowledge.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 1 (Canadian Press).—A real partnership of interests between husband wife is revealed in the registration at the Medical School of the University of Western Ontario of E. H. Brown, and his wife, Gertrude. Both have had considerable experience in the healing art, since both are trained nurses. They served in Great Britain during the Great War in connection with Red Cross work.

Mrs. Brown, at the outbreak of the war, was stationed at Belfast, Ireland, doing public health work. During the period of the war she taught several hundred V.A.D. girls. In 1922, she came to the United States, where she received a nappointment as medical matron at the sanatorium at Battle Creek, Michigan. Mr. Brown was rejected for active service in the Great War, so devoted his energies to nursing. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will require five years to complete the course in which they have registered.

ENTERTAINING GUESTS

A Series Giving Hints on Arranging Parties.
By LAURA.

Twelfth Anniversary.

When one thinks of celebrating the twelfth wedding anniversary, and discovers that it is a linen wedding, one naturally thinks of a dinner with all the linen cloths beautifully displayed. Invitations for the dinner party may be sent out on squares of linen written in indelible ink, and the place cards can also be of linen. The wax flowers are of course, in keeping in the scheme, and should be placed in many places.

But if one does not wish to give a dinner party, a most amusing evening can be arranged under what is called "A Spinning Party." This will be especially amusing if the guests are of the younger generation, and do not know anything about the work of spinning.

Place an old-fashioned spinning wheel in the centre of the room where everyone can look on with interest, and have flax handy. Each guest is told that he must try for the prizes to be awarded to the person who spun the best thread, after a five minute trial. It would be better to have an older woman who has done such work, to attend to the spinning.

As the threads are finished, place them across the mantel or some convenient place with a paper bearing the name of the owner on each.

Following the spinning contest set the guests following an immense spider web. It is composed of black and white threads, which are wound around the room. The black for the men and the white for the ladies. When an end is found they start winding it into a ball. Each knot must be untied (and there should be a good many) and very gently must one wend his way in and out of the rooms. It may be placed around pictures, chairs, table legs, etc.

At the end of the journey, very carefully hidden from view, is a card—and each card must be different. On each is a spider web, some with four circles, some with more; some with eight, and some with less; but there must be two alike. On the back is written, "You will take supper with the one who holds the mate to your card." The difference in many of the cards will be so slight that it will take some time to be detected.

Bring into the room three small card tables which have been covered completely with heavy brown wrapping paper on which has been drawn five circles, the inner one being only two inches in diameter, and the outside one as large as the table will allow. The others are drawn at equal distances between. The inner space on the first table is marked 25, the next one 20, 15, 10, 5. The second table is marked from 30 in the centre, and each of the other spaces five points less; the third one centred 50, and each of the other spaced five less.

Each player is given a top and in turn must spin. Where the top stops the number is credited to him. As soon as the player has twenty-five points to his credit, he advances to the next table, where he must make fifty before he goes on to the third, where the score is 100. Then he must begin at the low table again.

The possible score is 500, and the first player obtaining that number is declared the winner.

The top must not be touched while spinning. If it drops to the floor the player must make ten before he could begin to count again. If he made twenty five at the next trial, he will only count 15, but he has a second trial after the top drops to the floor before the next player.

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

WHAT OUR WORK SHOULD GIVE US

You and I have ourselves and our families to help and support, and that perhaps fills our minds and our hours to a very considerable extent. However as you have this life to live anyway, why not get all the enjoyment, the satisfaction, the "kick," as our young friends call it, that may be yours.

Dr. Glenn Frank, President of the University of Wisconsin, tells us that as we all have to work, there are four necessary things to our work that make or will give it that completeness that is worth while. First, the work should not be so easy that you are not learning something and overcoming something every day. This makes it a sort of daily "adventure."

Second, enough variety that it taxes your brain, but is not too difficult for mind or body.

Third, a sense that the job you are doing means something to the world; is helping the world's progress.

Fourth, to like and be liked by your fellow workers.

Your natural question is what has the above to do with that body of yours.

Well, just take all four of Dr. Frank's suggestions and see how that body of yours enters into every one of them.

First how much "adventure" is in your spirit in the morning, if you have overeaten the night before or slept badly? Why you don't even want to go to work.

Second, there must be a certain amount of routine in all our work, and how "deadly" that becomes when that body of yours is below par from indigestion, constipation, an abscessed tooth headache, sore feet, or other conditions. There is no energy, mental alertness, left to use your brain on a new problem.

Third, the thought that you are or should be doing or creating something may not even enter your head, the way you are feeling.

Fourth, if you are feeling below par you can readily guess how small things will annoy you, and you may be more or less of a "crab" to those about you with whom you work.

And so as you and I go about the task of living and try to keep in mind Dr. Frank's four suggestions, our first thought should be about our bodies, about our health, because health gives or takes away from us our ability to measure up to the above suggestions, and thus get from life all the wonderful gifts she has to bestow.

REGINA STAR IN PRO RANKS

Harold March of Champion Monarchs Signs With Chicago Black Hawks.

CLAIMS RECORD PRICE.

REGINA, Dec. 1.— Coming like a thunderbolt to the amateur hopes of Regina came the definite announcement that Harold ("Mush") March, outstanding star of the worlds junior championship hockey team, had signed a contract to play with the Chicago Black Hawks for this winter.

The deal came into being after a three-hour conference between Mr. March, Sr., Harold March and W. J. Tobin, business manager of the Chicago team.

In conversation with the press immediately following the signing of the contract, Tobin said: "March will go to the Black Hawks for the highest price that was ever paid for an amateur jumping directly to the National Hockey League, and in this statement I include the deal recently made by the Montreal Maroons for Dave Trottier, heralded as the most sought after amateur in Canada." Tobin would not disclose the terms that had been offered to the youthful Reginian.

March left the city last night via the C.N.R. and will head straight for Chicago, and from there to Ottawa where he will join the Hawks and play with them in their game against the Ottawa Senators on December 6. Other Regina players already on the Chicago outfit are Johnny Gottselig and Dick Irvin, both of whom are going great guns according to all reports.

"It is my opinion that March, Gottselig and Irvin will all be holding regular berths before the season grows very much older," stated Tobin.

Tobin was in Winnipeg on Monday and Wednesday for the Monarchs-Winnipeg Elmwoodseries and was so much impressed by March's ability that he followed him to Regina where he finally succeeded in swinging the deal.

The signing of March with Chicago puts a cap on the score of offers that have been directed at the young Monarch goal-getting ace for the past six months.

March seemed more than pleased with the situation and was anxious to be down in the big noise to see how he actually can stand up with the best hockey talent in the world.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, here we are betweenseasons with the football campaign folded up and the hockey lads not yet able to get out and do their stuff, although what with the gun episode and the river full of off-color beer the week ain't been exactly devoid of excitement.

Before I forget it, Mister Sporting Editor, my best to Mister Tom Curvin for winning that prize for the best bass caught in Ont. this season. Mister Curvin's picture was in the paper along with the prize fish (that was Tom with the hat on), and they was a very nice piece about the struggle he had to land that baby. Not a word about me, of course, and I can't say I'm surprised. I never did get a brake when fishing was concerned, and so them what read about Mister Curvin's great catch never even suspected that if I hadn't of run that bass ragged for 2 weeks and then chased him down to Young's Pt. Tom would be fishing with his old rod next year instead of the prize equipment. Well, let it go—that's the way of the world. It's a long block that ain't got a service station, and next year may be my turn. Anyway, the customers know what happened. That's my story, and I'm going to stick to it.

And now, Mac, a word about the windup of the football season. I didn't expect the P.C.I. lads would be good enough to stop them University School birds, and they didn't, although they put up a tougher argument than you'd guess if you judged from the score. The trouble was the same that bothers Mister Sinclair in the provincial political field, too much Ferguson. I don't know whether the bird by that name that played flying wing for U.T.S. is any relation of the Premier's, but he was mighty hard to stop anyway and he about beat our gang single-handed. And when this Bloor st. outfit holds him and his team down to 2 points and beats them 11 to 2, you gotta admit the class of football they play up in that high school group in the Queen City is decidedly flossy. Our kids was too light to beat a big team that was as fast and clever as themselves, but they got to be handed a bouquet for battling until the final toot. They give us a lot of nice football this fall, and we're grateful.

The local hockey bulletins is about as full of real news as them official communiques used to be back in the war days. The lads can't get down to real work until they get ice, and they won't be a full outburst of enthusiasm until the word goes out from our local ice palace that the surface is ready for a practice. And then we'll see what we'll see. Here's hoping anyway.

Up to now anyway, Mac, the big show shows a few surprises. This Toronto team has been setting up a home ice record, but ain't so hot on the road, while both the Montreal outfits ain't been hitting on all 8, although this Mister Dave Trottier will boost the stock of the Maroons. The same is one of the sweetest left-wingers in the game, and I don't mean probably. And if the boys figger out they can ride him outo the league—and boy won't they try, and how!—I think they got the wrong dope on Mister Trottier. He can take it, for a year or 2 ago the Petes didn't find him backing outa any jams. Mister Trottier, once he decided to make the plunge, pulled no boner in tossing in his lot with the Maroons. The richest gravy in the cash and carry circuit ain't a thousand miles from the Montreal camp.

Well, Mac, mebbe by next week they oughta to be some local hockey dope, sizzling hot, to serve up to the hungry customers.

Anyway, we'll hafta wait and see, as has been said by somebody more famous than

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

ROTARY CLUB HEARS ADDRESS

R. J. Graham Describes Life in Africa at Campbellford Meeting.

GOOD ATTENDANCE.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 1 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—There was a one-hundred per cent. attendance at the second meeting of the local Rotary Club held in the dining-room of the St. Lawrence Hotel yesterday at noon. There were twenty-two Rotarians at the tables, and one member, who was obliged to be in Toronto on business advised the club that he would attend the dinner of the Toronto Rotarians in the King Edward Hotel there.

R. J. Graham of Belleville was the speaker and his remarks were of particular interest since they dealt with the country where the Royal Princes were touring when they suddenly decided to return to the palace where H.M. King George is ill. Mr. Graham and his daughter had had some very interesting experiences while in the wilds of Africa, and the accounts of the native life and that of the wild animals made his address more than usually interesting. He believed that there was a future before this part of the world with regard to the cotton industry. He was of the opinion that in ten years' time, Britain would be entirely independent on the United States for this material. Planters were already getting large tracts under cultivation and employing native labor. Great strides would be made in this industry alone in a very short time.

There were also interesting experiences to relate regarding brushes with the wild life. Lions had been plentiful, and Mr. Graham was able to relate some interesting episodes where these animals had attacked, killed and eaten human being, both white and black. He had also seen giraffes which he estimated to be thirty feet tall.

Some of the members of the local club apparently forgot for the moment some of the rules governing the luncheons. One member came late and paid a fine for his error. Another paid a fine for referring to a member as 'Mister.'

Immediately after the Heenan-Sayers bare-knuckle fight for the championship of England, Thackeray, the novelist, wrote: "If I were king I would send Tom Sayers to jail for a month and make him Sir Thomas on coming out." Such was the sentiment of England in those colorful days—on the one hand, the element that frowned on fighting as a misdemeanor; on the other hand, the vast hero-worshipping public that had taken Tom Sayers to its bosom.

CRITIC APPROVES LITERARY PROGRAM

Third Form of Campbellford High School Present Pleasing Numbers.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, December 1. — Third Form of the Campbellford High School won the favor of the critic by the program which they presented at the meeting of the Literary Society held in the auditorium of the school yesterday afternoon. It is the custom of the society to elect a pupil to the position of critic as soon as the business of the meeting has been disposed of, and this pupil is free to criticize the program as he sees fit. Yesterday the office was bestowed on Peter Dewey, who expressed his entire approval of the entertainment.

There were six numbers on the program including the report of the critic. Jean Cameron was the first to appear. She gave an address on the Goddess of Wisdom, Minerva. Malcolm Hutcheon sketched the current events and there was also a piano solo by Miss Ruby Townsend. "Guilty or Not Guilty," a recitation by Christina Stinson, was received with much applause. The most appreciated number of the afternoon was a one act play entitled "String of Pearls." There were six characters in the cast. Joy Riendeau as Peggy Matheson; Muriel Linton as Ethel Matheson; Helen Thomas as Aunt Phoebe; George Sloggett as Mr. Matheson; Mercelle Sullivan as Hannah and Franklin Linton as Anthony Augustus Waterbury.

After hearing the report of the critic, the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Young Stribling was born at Bainbridge, Ga., December 26th, 1904.

BENEFIT GAME AT LAKEFIELD

Champion Bridgenorth Team Defeats All-Star Aggregation By 12-8 Count.

PLAY GOOD GAME.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 1 (Examiner Correspondence).—On Thursday evening a benefit game of softball was played in the Lakefield Rink for Reg. Dyer, the popular catcher of the De Laval team. Owing to a deluge of counter attractions the attendance was not what was desired and it was a disappointment to the teams and their allies.

The game was a good exhibition game, none better was played throughout the league. Bridgenorth won from an All Star team representing the teams in the league, with a score of 12 to 8, after a hard fought battle, with the All Stars leading for the first five innings. The game was friendly in every sense, and only once or twice did the umpire receive a delegation of players to ask "why" and these were extremely peaceful sessions.

Bridgenorth played a good game, their pitcher, Len Forsythe, struck out ten men and walked five. Simmons, who pitched the first six innings for the All Stars, had nine strike-outs and walked five. Reg. Green, who took his place for the three final innings, struck out four and walked three.

C. Maracle and Ernie Green, who were stalwarts in the Canada Cement team all season, played the first few innings in the outfield with the All Stars, but gradually came forward as the men were changed around till they were in the infield; they both played a good steady game. Mel Dobson, A. Smith, Reg. Green and Dorrington represented Harrison's in the All Stars, and the Simmons (father and son), H. Stanley, and B. Jones were the contribution of De Laval; John Ward represented Cooney's; Ernie Green and Clayton Maracle were from the Canada Cement team, and Russell Payne was the Cubs' representative.

The Bridgenorth line-up was, Pitcher, L. Forsythe; catcher, E. Connors; 1st base, H. Dormer; short stops, G. Dormer and K. Baker; 2nd base, J. Gillespie; 3rd base, H. Bradshaw; field, H. Griffin and D. Jopling; sub., M. Wilson.

The All Star line-up, as the game began; it was a matter of "general post" lated on: Pitcher, W. Simmons; catcher, M. Dobson; 1st base, A. Smith; short stops, R. Green and B. Jones; 2nd base, H. Stanley; 3rd base, J. Ward; field, C. Maracle and E. Green; subs, E. Simmons, R. Payne, and Dorrington.

The score by innings was:

TORONTO CANPROS LOSE BY 2-1 SCORE

Primeau and Voss Score For Corbeau's Team To Defeat Millionaires.

LONDON, Dec. 1—A weak and defective timer's gong that gets its mechanism tangled up during every hockey game nearly cost the London Panthers a 2 to 1 victory over the Toronto Millionaires at the finish of a fast and exciting Canpro fixture at the Arena last night. In the final minute of play with London one man short, the Toronto team was swarming around the Panthers' net and the rink was in an uproar. The timer rang the final bell to end the game, but few in the crowd heard its one jangle before it broke.

The referee and players failed entirely to hear it, and the play kept on. The bell was finally got working by the hand method, but still the play kept on. Fully six seconds after its first peal Rice slammed the puck into the London net and Referee Hewitson was going to allow it and was ready to start then ex tfacoff at centre ice. The official timer, Harry Abel informed the referee that the shot went into the net, and Hewitson promptly disallowed the goal that would have tied the score. The Toronto team registered a protest, but failed to get anywhere on it.

Primeau Scores Early

Joe Primeau had only been in his new Panther uniform 6½ minutes when he scored the first goal of the game on a smart play. The period ended in a draw when Doraty got a soft score at 18 minutes when a loose puck came out of a corner mix-up, the Millionaire winger being uncovered near the London net. After a rough and scoreless second frame the Panthers nabbed the winning tally after 30 seconds of play in the last period. Voss making the play at the net-mouth after taking Filmore's return pass.

A crowd of about 1,800 saw the Panthers break their three-game losing streak that they ran into on the road and also saw them maintain their record of not having been beaten at home. The game have a bit of everything mixed up in it but action was seldom lacking, with the score always close enough to keep the fans on edge.

The addition of Primeau made a huge difference to the team work on the London first string front line and their combination attacks were the best provided by Corbeau's club so far this season. He teamed up especially well with Connacher on left wing and the pair of them were constant threats.

FOUR SURVIVORS IN JUNIOR S.P.A.

Marlboros and Toronto Canoe Club Qualify For Semi-Finals.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.—Four clubs remain in the running for the S.P.A. junior trophy as a result of last night's doubleheader at the Arena Gardens, Marlboros and Toronto Canoe Clubs qualifying to enter the semi-final round. The Dukes disposed of Upper Canada by an 8 to 3 score and earned the right to meet Young Rangers in the second last round while the Red Ringers beat Markham, 6 to 2, for the right to play West Toronto. Thus two teams from the Big Four group play against two new Junior O.H.A. entries for the opportunity to enter the championship circle. The four survivors are the best of eighteen clubs that entered the competition for the pre-season glory.

The games last night, while they were rather one-sided on the score board, were interesting, particularly the battle between Marlboros and Upper Canada. Marlboros the mighty, were made to go every minute at top speed to build up an advantage over the Students, extra weight deciding the issue. The Dukes used their superior strength and size to wear down the lighter Student staff, putting up a barrage of body-checks that took their toll in the latter part of play. The Collegians held their own in the first part of the game and in the second period boasted of a lead but they could not stand the strain and they faded in the final half.

There was plenty of action as Slim Dewar, a husky lad on the U.C.C. defence, undertook the Titantic task of squaring up for heavy checks handed to his lighter team-mates, by Marlboro huskies. Dewar stepped into the Dukes with hard, solid checks and while he got many in return from Horner, Pringle and Levinsky, the Dukes' giant defence men, he was always prepared for more. Upper Canada players were just too small for the men of Marlboro, although they put up a plucky stand.

STRONG TEAMS CLASH TO-NIGHT

Rangers and Maroons Meet For First Time This Year at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press).—New York Rangers, world's professional hockey champions, who won the Stanley Cup in a series with the Montreal Maroons will resume activities against the local N.H.L. club at the Forum tonight. It will be the first meeting here between the two teams since Rangers won the title last spring.

Bringing together the two finalists of last season, the game claims attention on its own merits, but there will be added features to the contest which probably will mean as large and fashionable a hockey gathering as has ever witnessed a contest at the Forum. Rangers and Maroons will be playing before Spanish royalty. Their Royal Highnesses, the Infante Don Alfonso and the Infanta Beatrice, of Spain, with their son, His Royal Highness Prince Don Alvaro D'Orleans Bourbon, and party, will be guests of Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor at the contest.

In the game there will be new attractions. Two former College hockey stars will be making their debut locally, Dave Trottier, with the Maroons, and Myles Lane, with Rangers. Trottier played his first pro game with Maroons at Detroit Thursday and fitted smartly into the picture. The former University of Toronto player will hold his own. Myles Lane, athletic star of Dartmouth College, is the first Eastern American-trained hockey player to enter Major pro hockey. He is regarded as a pioneer, as it is hopefully believed by the United States clubs in the N.H.L. that before long they will be developing their own players on the U.S. side of the border.

Referee-in-chief Cooper Smeaton and Bill O'Hara will officiate in the Maroon-Ranger contest to-night.

ia. Mr. Morrow himself is a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, and both are members of the Engineering Institute of Canada.

Occasionally little accounts of the good deeds of Harold Morrow were gleaned in the course of repertorial rounds, but there is no release for them now, no "now it can be told" recollection any more than when they were first whispered by close friends of his, with admonitions of perpetual penalty. But this is not supposed to be a story of his ideals, of the shining facets of his character and heart that reveal him a true son of his father. Rather, it set out to recount something of the constructional accomplishments of the contracting firm of Morrow & Beatty, Limited, whose Peterborough connection is a matter of pride with every citizen who knows the professional standing this firm has gained in Canada.

Conquer Smoky Falls.

Morrow and Beatty are now completing at Kapuskasing, some sixty miles west of Cochrane, the Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company's mill which has a total daily production of five hundred tons of paper; and at Smoky Falls they have built a hydro-electric power house and dam which is now generating 80,000 horse power. Some idea of the difficulties that arose in this job, which will be completed in December, may be obtained from the following excerpt from a recent article by Paul Montgomery in Toronto Saturday Night entitled "Conquering Smoky Falls":

"The massive engineering work and the expensive electric and hydraulic equipment at once assure the onlooker that capital investment in this section is not transitory. They are monuments in concrete and steel to the industrial awakening of Northern Ontario. But the greatest engineering task in the north is the conquest of Smoky Falls, fifty miles north of Kapuskasing on the Mattagami River. Three falls within nine miles offer a potential development of 250,000 h.p. and the water connexions have been made at that plant for an additional unit of 28,000 h.p.

"For centuries the Smoky Falls have been one of the bywords of the Indians of the north. They so named them from the clouds of spray and mist that rose from the frenzied water as it raced for James Bay. The engineers have to-day wiped out every vestige of the main fall, but the surplus water teeming through the dam gates gives the visitor some idea of their former majesty."

By the year 1926 axemen had cleared through the timber a swath one hundred yards for the railway from Kapuskasing to the Falls, which reduced a canoe trip of days to one hour by train. Smoky Falls were originally about 142 high and 700 feet across.

Re-channelled the River.

"To attempt to construct the power dam with the water flowing would be madness; so the engineers were obliged to divert the entire fall while they poured in their cement and laid their steel in readiness for the return of the tamed waters. To divert the water, it was necessary to blast a pathway through the rock for nearly a mile. This chasm is over 100 yards in width, and it was not entirely a wasted effort for the power house to be located in this chasm and the spent water to roar its entire length."

Three 28,000 h.p. generators have already been installed in the power house. Electric elevators ply between the generator floor and the dam level one hundred feet above.

Greatest Work In the North.

"Perhaps the most remarkable thing about the Smoky Falls power house centres around the rapidity of its completion. It was just twenty months from the time the first steel was hauled over the new railway until power was delivered in Kapuskasing. Taking into consideration that the conquest of the Smoky Falls is the most pretentious piece of engineering work yet carried out in northern Ontario, together with the thoroughness of the job, the rapidity of completion speaks volumes for business management in modern engineering."

The company will make a beauty spot of the surrounding ground, building tennis courts and planting grass and flowers for its resident staff.

So much for the picture of the harnessed giant in the watershed of James Bay. The dam and power house is one of the major works of Morrow & Beatty, Limited. But back in Kapuskasing they built a paper mill of the same capacity as the Abitibi, and already a fine, enterprising town has grown up around the Kapuskasing mill just as at Iroquis Falls, except that the latter is a mill town, that is, it is owned by the Abitibi company.

Premier Ferguson There.

Lacking other sources of information the New York Times of September 26, 1927, yielded the following details of the paper mill and town. The corner stone of the Spruce Falls Power Company's mill at Kapuskasing was laid by the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson on September 26th, 1927. The Premier said that when he first went up there not a building or a barn relieved the rough natural country. The concrete dam at Smoky Falls is 1,700 feet long with an additional earth dam of 2,000 feet; and the maximum height of the dam across the Mattagami is 100 feet. Two aluminum power circuits for the transmission of power at 110,000 volts connect the generating plant with the paper mill fifty miles back at Kapuskasing.

On the various constructions of the entire enterprise 1,800 men were employed. The used material included 18,500 cu. yards of concrete, 16,000,000 pounds of structural steel, 3,500,000 pounds of reinforcing steel, 10,000,000 sq. ft. of timber. The work included the excavation of 130,000 cu. yds. of rock and 1,000,000 cu. yards of earth.

Smoky Falls is the most northerly water development in Ontario. It is just 100 miles south of James Bay.

The Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company is controlled by the Kimberley Clark Co. of Neenah, Wis., and the New York Times, as joint partners. The company bought all the equipment in Canada, from the Canadian General Electric Company and Canadian Westinghouse. They sent forty Canadian University graduates to the various Kimberley Slark Company industries throughout the United States, and only ten per cent. of them failed to qualify for key positions.

A Frontier City.

Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, speaking at the dinner concluding the day's program said that the laying of the corner stone of the paper mill was eventually the laying of the corner stone of a new city on the edge of the forest in the full panoply of modern civilization, with a beautiful central park, a fine school, a perfectly planned hospital, and all the conveniences of a great city. It promised to be the most attractive little city in the north country, though on the frontier. This was something more than a financial venture; it was a new expression of confidence and an added bond of friendship. It emphasized also the interdependence of the two countries. There was hardly a home in the United States which a Canadian product did not enter daily.

Cut out of the forest near the northern border of Canada and standing as an oasis in a desert of tall spruce trees, is the new town of Kapuskasing, (in Indian "Bursting Waters") soon to be complete in every way for a community of 8,000 persons, the Times report continues with descriptive effect. It is on the main line of the C.N.R. 70 miles west of Cochrane. More than 4,000 people are now there (Sept. 1927), more than half of whom are engaged in the construction of a new paper mill and power plant and in the development of homes for the new community.

An Interment Camp.

A trainload of enemy aliens was interned at Kapuskasing during the war. The first clearing in the forest at this point was done by them. Soon afterward the Kimberley Clark company, paper manufacturers of Neenah, Wis., purchased from some settlers the rights to a small water power. After acquiring cutting rights over a considerable area the Kimberley Clark Co organized the Spruce Falls Company, built a sulphide mill and started in a limited way the construction of the town of Kapuskasing. Additional timber limits up to a total of 4,500 square miles and further water power rights were obtained from the Ontario government and in January 1926 the New York Times entered into an agreement with the Kimberley Clark Co. to organize the Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company, to construct a paper mill of 550 tons daily capacity and to take its entire supply of newsprint paper, which now approximates some 90,000 tons annually. The Kimberley Clark Company plans to take from the mill its surplus sulphide production for use in its other plants. Thus the two owners of the new company become its chief customers.

The article refers to the modern facilities and community attractions the new town affords, and says that across the river from the mill the Dominion Government maintains a large experimental farm whose vegetables, eggs and milk supply a large part of the town's requirements.

From these facts it will be understood that the Morrow and Beatty contract was the construction of the Smoky Falls dam and power plant and the 550-ton newsprint mill, the expansiveness of which must be seen to be appreciated. A visitor can spend hours going through such a plant which is modernized down to such details as a clean, white cafeteria.

One Of America's Largest.

Kapuskasing is Ontario's newest outpost of industry and social life clustering about the monumental handiwork of Morrow and Beatty, Limited. Farther south in the northland is another, Iroquois Falls, a busy pulp and paper town that has been established for more than ten years. The Abitibi Power and Paper Company's property includes a dam 700 feet long and a power house about 400 feet long containing sixteen hydraulic units of 1,500 h.p. each, operating under a head of 45 feet. Twelve of them are connected to grinders for the manufacture of wood pulp. The remaining four operate electric generators. The Abitibi pulp and paper mill is one of the largest on the continent. Like the power plant it is of concrete and steel. The contract was completed in eighteen months. Iroquois Falls is on the Abitibi River and is two hundred miles north of North Bay.

Another big pulp mill and hydro-electric development was completed by Morrow & Beatty, Limited, in 1917 at Smooth Rock Falls for the Mattagami Pulp and Paper Company. It is situated on the Mattagami River thirty miles west of Cochrane. The mill comprises twelve modernly designed buildings and the power plant generates 8,000 h.p.

The Sherbrooke, Que., dam and power house was constructed by Morrow and Beatty in 1911. Its output is 3,000 h.p.

In 1912 they built at Wawaitan Falls on the Mattagami about twenty miles from Timmins one of the three hydro-electric power developments of Northern Canada Power Limited on that stream.

The Drummondville, Que., job was completed in April, 1919. In consists of a concrete power house providing 18,000 h.p. with a concrete dam 1,900 feet long.

New Brunswick Job.

Between October 1919 and May 1921 Morrow & Beatty, Limited, were building a 13,500 h.p. dam and power house at Bathurst, N.B., and in 1921 they also completed the Abitibi Power and Paper Company's hydro-electric plant at Twin Falls, on the Abitibi River, which produces 20,000 h.p. The dam is 360 feet long with a maximum height of 85 feet, and the power house is 100 feet by 180 feet.

Other power developments and storage dams were built in the Ottawa River district at various times, and in our Trent section Morrow & Beatty in 1926 completed a power house and dam at Frankford for the Canada Paperboard Company.

Their latest contract has just been received from the Ontario government for a conservation dam at Ear Falls at the head of Lac Seul on the boundary between Manitoba and Ontario.

Peterborough Products.

It is more than probable that in some of the power houses built by these Peterborough contractors the stamp and hallmark of Peterborough products and abilities were carried even further by the installation of generators, motors, switchboards and other electrical equipment manufactured by the Canadian General Electric Company in their local factory and by water wheels from the Wm. Hamilton Company.

The success of Morrow and Beatty since they entered upon their professional alliance in 1908 has been broad based upon the many notable undertakings they have carried out in eastern Canada, and incidentally that success has caught up in its opportunity a number of young Peterborough men, among they Cyril H. Giroux in the accounting department and Angus Richardson of the engineering staff. And it must give to the people of Peterborough a livelier interest in the importance of the conversation and development of our natural resources, and finally leave with them a deep feeling of satisfaction in the rewards, both the material and intangible rewards, which have come to a son of Peterborough, who in his own quiet, unsung way is doing a big man's work in the actual making of this newer Canada.

Americans Unable To Buy Worters, Recall Miller Or Use Walsh.

TROUBLE FOR PIRATES.

NEW YORK, December 1.—Nothing clears the air in sport like a good squabble, and a regular Donnybrook is brewing over the goaltending troubles of three clubs in the National Hockey League. The most troublesome situation is at Pittsburg, and the most desperate in the camp of the New York Americans.

The Pirates at last have signed Roy Worters, one of the leading net-tenders in the circuit, to a contract after many weeks of dickering. But neither Worters nor Benny Leonard, the retired light weight champion and owner of the club, have any expectations at all of Roy appearing in a Pittsburg uniform. Both parties are emphatic in their declarations of mutual disapproval.

Now the New York Americans want Worters. Every indication points to an agreement to trade the star to New York in exchange for Miller, who just can't stand the Americans, and a bundle of cash to the amount of about $20,000. The big fly in the American ointment however is the declaration of the league president, Mr. Frank Calder, that Worters will play in Pittsburg or nowhere else on the pain of permanent suspension.

Maroons Recall Walsh.

The Montreal Maroons became tangled in the goal tending troubles of the two clubs when all hands turned to in the league to dig up enough goalies to go round. The Americans loaned Miller to the Pirates to fill in for Worters, and when Jakie Forbes, the first string guardian, came down with an attack of grippe, the New Yorkers were forced to borrow "Flat" Walsh from the Maroons. Now Montreal has recalled Walsh and the Americans are left without a goalie.

The New Yorkers want to buy Worters, who would like to play here and won't play in Pittsburg, but the league president won't let them acquire Worters and sell Miller, who can't stand the Americans and would like to play in Pittsburg. All in all, it's as nice a tangle as anyone could find anywhere.

The sympathy of New York fans, who have been filling Madison Square Garden as the reorganized Americans climbed to the top of the Canadian section of the league, are all with the home club. Bill Dwyer has bought $50,000 worth of new players in the general shake up of a team that was never a contender last season.

Officials of the club are a bit wrathy about a situation that prevents their acquiring a player Pittsburg can't use in exchange for cash and a goalie who won't play here.

Cases are Not Similar.

"There was no protest," Manager Tommy Gorman said to-day, "when the New York Rangers purchased John Ross Roach, Toronto's star goalie, and landed "Butch" Keeling from the same club. Unless something happens it looks as though Norm Himes, centre, will have to guard the nets against Toronto in the Canadian city on Saturday night."

As a last resort, Dwyer asked Miller to return to the American fold, forget his difficulties with some of his team-mates, and help out in the general mix-up.

"Rather than come back to the Americans, I will return to Ottawa and quit hockey for good," was the answer of the substitute who stepped into the breach for the New York Rangers when Lorne Chabot was hurt in the last Stanley Cup series with the Montreal Maroons and saved the world championship. Worters feels the same way about Pittsburg, and there the situation rests.

Remembrance Fondly Kept

To some of Peterborough's pioneer families, there has recently been erected on the Colonel Haultain lot in Little Lake Cemetery a beautiful Celtic cross, which has been very much admired, and on the Budden lot a handsome Latin cross. Older residents of this city will remember Mr. Budden as the manager of the Bank of Montreal about fifty years ago. Both these crosses are made of very fine blue gray granite, hammered, finished and lettered by the sand blast process which leaves the inscriptions very legible. These monuments have been cut and finished at the Coughlin Monumental Works. This firm invites inspection of their plant and facilities for turning out first-class work.

ENGLAND ADDS TO TOTAL SCORE

Amass Mark of 521 Runs in British-Australian Cricket Matches.

HENDREN STARS.

BRISBANE, Australia, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press).—An excellent innings by Hendren, one of England's premier batsmen and useful scores by Champion and Larawood brought Englands' total to 521 runs, all out, in their first innings of the present test match against Australia. The game is first of the series.

England gave an equally impressive display in the field when Australia went to bat, taking four wickets for the amazingly small score of forty-four runs, before stumps were pulled for the day.

Hendren fifty-two and Chapman, thirty-nine resumed England's first innings to-day on a fast wicket and in fine warm weather. Hendren set out fearlessly to batter the bowling and raised his total to 169 runs before being caught by Ponsford off Ironmonger's bowling. Chapman did not stay long being out when he had made fifty. Tate hit out merrily and got twenty-six runs. When Larwood joined Hendren the two gave the huge crowd a splendid exhibition of forcing batting.

Larwood followed up fine innings of seventy by capturing three of best Australian wickets for nine runs, an astounding performance.

AT THE CAPITOL.

RONALD COLMAN AND VILMA BANKY IN FINAL CO-STARRING FILM, "TWO LOVERS," AT THE CAPITOL, MONDAY, TUESDAY, AND WEDNESDAY. NOAH BEERY SUPPORTS STARS, AND HAROLD CLUFF, OF TORONTO, WILL SING "LENORA," THE THEME SONG, FROM THE STAGE.

"Two Lovers," with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky as the leading players, and supported by Noah Beery, will be the big feature attraction at the Capitol on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. Mr. Harold Cluff, of Toronto, will sing "Lenora," the theme song from "Two Lovers," from the stage at every performance.

"Leatherface," by Baroness Orczy, one of the most popular novels of this generation, furnished the story from which Alice D. G. Miller photo-dramatized the final co-starring picture of Mr. Colman and Miss Banky. Its tale is that of the triumph of love over adversity, but startling twists of circumstances give the Baroness Orczy story a new and brighter flash of the tender, poignant beauty that has characterized all Colman-Banky pictures.

Laid against the ever-stirring background of war, "Two Lovers" tells the story of Mark Van Rycke, son of the patrician burgomaster of Ghent and of his secret adventures as "Leatherface," mysterious and faithful aid to William, Prince of Orange, who seeks to lead the enslaved country of Flanders to freedom from the oppressing hands of the Spaniards. Wild night rides, hair-raising duels (of wit as well as of sword) reveal Ronald Colman, as "Leatherface," in a role more colorful and varied than any he has ever attempted.

Vilma Banky is Lenora, The Flower of Spain, niece of the Duke of Azar, oppressor of the Flemish and commandant of the Spanish. Her royal kinsman weds her to Mark in a gorgeous ceremony, rich in the medieval ceremony of Flanders, a bride of state. Loathing him as her enemy and forced mate, she comes to respect him—for he refuses his marriage privileges. Just when she begins to love him, Lenora makes a discovery about Mark that causes her to hate him. How she betrays and delivers him into the hands of the Spaniards, and then, discovering her mistake, joins the heroic efforts of Mark and his countrymen in their final battle through the swamps for freedom, ending in the assault on the impregnable Kasteel, are among the high spots of the picture.

AT THE REGENT.

"FRECKLES" COMING TO REGENT THEATRE

Gene Stratton-Porter's World-Famed Tale of Orphan Lad in Limberlost with Great Cast.

The sixth Gene Stratton-Porter novel to be brought to the screen for FBO by her son-in-law, Leo Meehan, "Freckles" will open at the Regent Theatre for a three day run commencing Monday. That 'Freckles' will be a smashing success as a picture is evidenced by the warm reception accorded "The Girl of the "Limberlos," "Laddie," "The Keeper of the Bees," "The Magic Garden" and "The Harvester," all Gene Stratton-Porter stories made under Meehan's direction.

Like all of Mrs. Porter's stories, "Freckles" is a simple and charming love story, with the hope and faith of youth as a background. The locale is Indiana, in the Limberlost Forest, where Freckles, an orphan boy, is set to guard the valuable timber holdings from thieves. Through his interest in birds and butterflies, he meets the Bird Woman, and her beautiful daughter whom he names the Swamp Angel. Sacrifice, courage, love and idealism inspire Mrs. Porter's characters with personalities that appeal to everyone, and Leo Meehan director has cast his picture with an eye to keeping the individuality of her characters intact.

Meehan, is the son-in-law of the late authoress and has been engaged in bringing her stories to the screen for the past several years.

Another member of the Porter family plays the leading feminine role. This is little Gene Stratton, grand-daughter of the authoress. She will be known to motion picture audiences for her work in "Laddie."

John Fox, Jr., the masculine lead, is not a new name to Gene Stratton-Porter fans. He also played a prominent part in "Laddie." Among the other productions for which he is famous are "The Covered Wagon," "The Pony Express," "California," "Just," and "One Glorious Day."

The pioneer motion picture actor of the West, Hobart Bosworth, who starred in the first production film, ed in Los Angeles, plays the part of McLean, a sturdy woodsman and timber owner. Bosworth has made so many pictures that it is almost impossible to start naming them.

Eulalie Jensen, who plays the famous Bird Woman, has played many character parts in recent years. Her productions include "The Kiss in a Taxi," "King of Kings," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and others.

Billy Scott and Late McKee play the "heavy" roles.

Indigestion
Immediate Relief!

What most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise.

The best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.

One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate, with no bad after-effects. Once you learn this fact, you will never deal with excess acid in the crude ways. Go learn—now—why this method is supreme.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drug store.

LADIES' AID GIVES BAZAAR A SHOWER

Police Matron Delivers An Interesting Talk on Subject "Life."

The regular meeting of St. James Ladies' Aid was held Thursday afternoon in the church parlours and took the form of a miscellaneous shower in aid of the annual bazaar which is to be held on the 7th and 8th of December. Twenty-four members and several visitors were present. Mrs. Pratt, 1st vice president, presided in the absence of the president Mrs. A. Wilson. After a short business meeting a reading was very much enjoyed by Mrs. Rowe and a vocal duet by Miss Mae Ritchie and Mrs Elliott. Miss A. Wood the police matron, was present and gave a much appreciated address, her subject being "Life." At the conclusion of the address Mrs. Sargent tendered the speaker a hearty vote of thanks and was seconded by Mrs. Elliott. Miss Wood responded in a few brief remarks. All the ladies present viewed the many beautiful and useful articles donated that afternoon before partaking of the dainty refreshments served under the capable management of the social convener, Mrs. Plunket and her committee. The meeting was brought to a close by a prayer by Mrs. Budgeon.

Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 1 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Mr. Peter Nancarrow of Rochester, N.Y., was visiting relatives in town this week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sanders, of Detroit, Mich., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Ford, Garry Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam. Hutton, of Detroit, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Howe, Victoria Street.

At the present time Davidson's Arena is neither in summer nor winter garb. The weather man has much to do with the manufacture of ice in Campbellford, and the recent low temperatures have indicated that flooding the rink would be advisable. Last night, there was ice over about half the surface of the arena, and more is being made as the thermometer remains at a low level. The hockey team is still using the playing surface for training purposes, but the ice will soon crowd them into other quarters till such time as it is ready for their use.

LESS MEN OUT OF WORK THIS YEAR

Fine Weather and Busy Factories Keep Employment Situation Good.

That the employment situation in the city is much better now than it was this time last year was the information given The Examiner at the Employment Bureau this morning. The number applying at the office for work is less now than last year, and the total names on the books of those being out of work is noticeably less.

The reasons given for the improved conditions were two in number: The factories are much busier and are employing more men; the mild and open weather has made it possible for work in the open to be continued long after the usual time.

Under a new order issued to the police of England and Wales, the tails of stray dogs must be measured so that the figure may appear in the "identity certificate" of the dog.

FRIDAY NIGHT CLUB HOLDS CAMPAIGN

H. B. Cowan Delivers Interesting Address On Subject, "Lessons in Journalism."

The membership campaign of the Friday Night Supper Club is at last started on the way to the chicken supper with Hec McLeod's team leading and Bob Allin's and Crawf Hall's teams giving him a close run for the honored position. The race chart this year has been changed to an airplane race across the ocean, the first plane to reach Europe winning. The boys are working hard to bring their teams up to the front, and a stiff race will be put up by all the teams before the race is over. Over forty of the boys were present last night to hear H. B. Cowan give an unusually interesting address on the subject, "Lessons in Journalism."

Mr. Cowan started in journalism at the age of seventeen as a cub reporter on the Montreal Star. In order that the boys, some of whom are thinking of taking up journalism, might understand what would be expected of them at the start, Mr. Cowan described some of the routine work on big daily papers for the beginners. In this connection he emphasized that those who start on small papers first get a better training than those who start on the larger papers, inasmuch as they are given a greater variety of work. On big papers the work is so specialized that beginners are given only the smallest assignments.

The interest of journalism, he stated, lies in the opportunities which it gives at times to promote public enterprises. While a reporter on The Ottawa Journal, attending a farm meeting in the country, Mr. Cowan got the idea of having the paper offer a pure bred pig for ten new subscriptions, with the result that during the next ten years several thousand pigs were disposed of in this way. Early work in promoting the good roads movement, including the running of a good roads train through Eastern Ontario for two years, constructing model stretches of road in days when good roads were scarcely known, and which work was pushed through the Ottawa Farm Journal was described. Many of the rewards in journalism come through the opportunities it presents for leading projects for the improvement and welfare of the people.

Scott Medd moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Cowan, which was seconded by Bob Allin.

NEW ROYAL HOTEL TUNNEL COMPLETED

Visitors May Go Underground From Union Station To Hotel in Toronto.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.— The tunnel from the Union station to the new C.P.R. Royal York hotel has just been completed under Front street. The tunnel has been constructed so that a visitor may get rid of his baggage and find accommodation in perfect comfort before he sets out to see the city. When the passenger arrives in the exit lobby of the station he now encounters the entrance to the street. To the right of that there is at present a store front and a door which will later be converted into a larger entrance to the tunnel. Going through the door he emerges on a landing 24 steps above the level of the tunnel. At the base of the steps the tunnel turns at an agle and runs obliquely across to the hotel more than 100 feet distant. Here several show windows of the specialty shops of the hotel will greet the traveller.

Voice of the People

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

Voice of the people
Edito, Examiner:

Sir,—As an observer, I am glad to see the Examiner is out for the good of Peterborough as usual.

Anybody who would consider spending thousands of dollars to beautify Confederation Square, and make it what it surely is becoming, and then let a corporation build a filling station in front of it, do not show much judgment. This is considered the educational part of the city, and with our Library, new Collegiate, etc., all modeled of high class architecture, it would be a shame to spoil it.

We have enough accidents at this corner as it is without adding to the extra hazard. If you don't remove the hedge you have a death trap, and if you do, it makes the library appear unsightly, shorn of its beauty.

It seems to me having a filling station next, is quite bad enough, but how about people stopping their cars and children going in and out, in hours when a filling station would be at its busiest.

I surely hope the people who make us take out a permit if we want to patch our back roof, will prove now that they are there when needed.

Yours truly,
OBSERVER.

A LAUGHING BABY IS A GREAT JOY

What can give more joy in the home than a laughing, happy baby. The well child makes everyone happy with his tuneful gurgle and bright laughing eyes. It is only the sickly baby who is not a laughing baby, for it is the little one's nature to be happy when well.

Mothers, if your baby is cross, if he cries a great deal and no amount of attention seems to make him happy, give him a dose of Baby's Own Tablets and he will soon be well and ready to radiate that happiness through the home again.

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion break up colds and simple fevers and correct those troubles which accompany the cutting of teeth and in doing those things—and doing them well—they make baby happy and keep him happy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OFFICERS HEAR

the victory on this flank instead of following through the real plan of the pivot. However, the French resistance on the left became too great and Moltke reverted to the great plan of the pivoting movement. Moltke did not thoroughly appreciate the advantage to be secured from the original enveloping plan. He also failed to send some of the forces from the left to the right flank, where they were needed for the great advance after the position on the left was secure.

"Considering the movements of the five great armies on the right that were to take part in the pivoting movement. On August 8, Liege had fallen and the great advance took place according to plan. The French and English were forced to retire and converge to keep their communication safe.

"After the successes on the western front Moltke made the mistake of sending forces from there to the eastern front against Russia, who were advancing into Prussia as it had been expected that they would. In doing this Moltke made his second mistake of again weakening the forces to take part in the main enveloping movement.

"The armies taking part in the pivot began to deviate from their original course and turn south instead of continuing more westerly.

Von Kluck, commander of the most easterly army swung far to the east to envelope the British. Von Bulow in command of the second army was left isolated by Von Kluck's movement and the southerly movement of the third army to the other side. Von Bulow asked aid from Von Kluck and the much discussed inward movement of Von Kluck's army began.

"On August 30, the German Supreme Command issued another "directive" approving Von Kluck's inward wheel and setting new objectives to the flank armies, which indicated that he had given up the original war plan and realized at last that it was impossible to stretch their armies as far as had been contemplated. They were now working on a front of 280 miles with gaps of twenty miles between the armies and if the original plan had been followed it would have meant a full extension of from 300 to 360 miles.

"The failure was caused by Von Moltke's weakening the armies taking part in the pivoting operations so that they were not sufficient to spread themselves across the necessary extent of country. If he had followed Von Schlieffen's original plan as to the placing of his troops and not changed those plans in the slightest then the movement would very likely have been successful and the war would have been won the Germans very quickly."

There were many comments by the officers at the conclusion of Colonel Beeman's lecture and one officer expressed his satisfaction that the death of Von Schlieffen took place before he himself could put his plan into complete effect.

TRUTH VS. ERROR.

People who defame the Holy Name of the great, kind Heavenly Father, by telling lies to their fellowmen, concerning the character of God, and who deceive poor humanity with more untruths, are untruthful in more ways than one. These people deny the word of God, saying, (or repeating what Satan said) "thou shalt not die." They say that a man is not a soul, but has a soul, and if a good man, when he dies, his soul flies out of him and goes to heaven, and stays there forever; if a bad man his soul goes to hell, and is tormented forever. They lie by saying hell is not simply the hole which we dig in the ground, to bury dead people in, but is a literal place of endless torments. They give false comfort to bereaved ones. They fail to preach the resurrection. They take the honor belonging to God and give it to certain ones, calling them "reverend." They also claim that the various religious organizations are the church of God. Other lies are given forth as well and all proclaimed as the word of God. Small wonder that men like Ingersoll repudiate the whole of so-called Christianity.—M. T. Butcher. 1d-129-4970

LADY MISSIONARY AT ALL SAINTS'.

An unusually interesting visitor will be heard in All Saints' Parish Hall this week-end in the person of Miss Dorothy Scott of the Toronto Public School staff. She gave her summer vacation this year to the Sunday School-by-Post Mission, and toured by motor caravan through a large area of Northern Saskatchewan. It so happened that she worked in the same territory as Mr. Horace Ashmore, a missionary who went out from All Saints' three years ago. So that the story she will tell and the pictures she will show will have a double interest for those who see and hear. Miss Scott will speak at the Sunday School and also after the evening service.

IN MEMORIAM.

JACKSON. — In sad and loving memory of our darling Daddy, who departed this life December 1, 1927.
The midnight stars are gleaming
On a lone and silent grave;
Beneath sleeps one we loved,
But one we could not save.
He bade no one a last farewell,
He said good-bye to none;
The heavenly gates were opened wide,
A loving voice said "Come."
His loving voice is silent,
His true heart ceased to beat;
We miss the well-known footsteps
And the face we used to greet.
We often think of the days gone by,
When we were all together;
A shadow on our lives is cast,
A loved one gone forever.
—Remembered by his loving Daughters Bertha and Myrtle.

Drowe of Warsaw was returning from Keene when his car smashed with that of the school teacher, G. Gardener. Both cars were badly damaged, but neither of the drivers received any injuries.

Mr. Alsob, of Lakefield, was returning to Lakefield from Warsaw when his car skidded into the ditch and was badly damaged. He was going up the hill at Hawthorne Corners, when another car came along and Mr. Alsob, turning out too far, skidded into the ditch. The car hit a large stone and turned over. The back of the car got caught in the fence which prevented the car from coming down on the driver.

HEALTH IS VALUABLE

Many things of incalculable value to the individual depend upon his or her good health. Happiness, contentment, usefulness and prosperity in their generally accepted meaning can prevail to the fullest extent only in proportion as good health is experienced. Health is the most valuable and the least valued of our possessions, for without it the world holds few attractions.

ONE OF THE BEST WAYS

to keep healthy is the Chiropractic way because spinal manipulative treatments free the nerves of pressure, thus permitting the life forces from the brain to reach every tissue cell. Nerve energy is that "spark of life" which animates the body and causes every organ and part to do its allotted work.

Let Chiropractic release the power within you.

TOWN OF TALCA IS WIPED OUT BY 'QUAKE

250 LIVES BELIEVED LOST WHEN EARTHQUAKE SHAKES WHOLE COUNTRY OF CHILE

Whole Country Is Shaken By Disastrous Earthquake—Heavy Damage.

ONE CITY WIPED OUT.

Martial Law is Proclaimed and Relief For Sufferers Is Being Rushed.

SANTIAGO, Chile, December 3. — Canadian Press. — President Ibanez to-day was on the scene directing relief measures for the survivors of the earthquake which devastated a large area 150 miles south of Santiago.

The casualty list compiled from unofficial sources placed the deaths at 230 with more than 400 injured.

Martial law was established at Talca, an industrial city of 36,000, what apparently bore the brunt of the 'quake. Only ten per cent. of the houses in the town were habitable.

The buildings not demolished by the 'quake were being razed to avert the danger of sudden collapse.

Troops took over most of the food supplies to prevent looting and profiteering. Relief trains carrying food and medical assistance were rushed the scene, regular railways schedules having been suspended to facilitate their progress. The soldiers had orders to shoot marauders on sight.

Talca was virtually wiped out and the persons arriving here yesterday said that the damage would amount to 100,000,000 pesos (about $12,000,000). Troops who were enforcing martial law took over most of the food supply to prevent looting and were rationing it out. They blocked the efforts of speculators to take advantage of the emergency by jumping their prices.

Talca Hospital Burned

The Talca Hospital burned after the temblor and the more than 200 injured were cared for in emergency shelters by the physicians and nurses who were rushed to the spot at the first reports of the disaster. While railway communication had been restored with the stricken district, the regular schedule was cancelled to permit relief trains to hurry on their errands of mercy without impediment.

Organizations of young men aided the mounted police, and firemen in performing guard duty in Talca. While a special corps of workmen was engaged in rigging a temporary telegraph line into the city, a group of Government engineers went out to make a careful survey for the basis of organized work and rehabiliation.

The relief work had been set in motion in Talca by Minister of War Blanche, who flew there in an airplane Saturday and returned at night. President Ibanez, who had been in the south of Chile, hurried to Talca yesterday to lend encouragement to the relief workers, the Government has accepted the aid offered by the Red Cross.

Victims Buried in Ruins

Three cruisers which were sent to the port of Constitution by the Government, reported yesterday that the city had suffered very greatly. They said that many victims were buried in the ruins, but did not attempt an estimate of the number of dead.

In a dozen other cities and villages the inhabitants who escaped when their homes were shaken down about their ears, were planning to sleep last night in the parks or in the open spaces on the outskirts. Lesser shocks were felt in Talca at intervals all day Sunday and last night.

The astronomical observatory at Salto registered thirty shocks on Saturday.

The Government, from the fragmentary reports reaching the capital, was having great difficulty in determining the exact number of casualties, but the most conservative estimates was more than one hundred killed with some ranging as high as 120. The number of injured was placed variously at from 300 to 500.

Prayers Are Offered For King In Churches

An added note of solemnity was given services in all churches throughout the city on Sunday when prayers for the improved health of His Majesty King George V. were offered and the National Anthem sung with peculiar significance.

This indication of concern pertained not only in local churches but throughout the Dominion. Services broadcast by radio were touched with the same note.

KNOX CHURCH CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY

Rev. Robert Pogue, Former Minister of St. Paul's Church, Preaches.

SPECIAL MUSIC.

"The Works Are Evidence That Christian Church Is True Church," Says Speaker.

"The works that we do are the evidences that the Christian Church is the true church of God," said Rev. Robert Pogue, preaching at the anniversary services of Knox United Church last evening.

A crowded church heard the Rev. Mr. Pogue's message, and the speaker commented on the fact that it was not only the anniversary of Knox Church but also the twenty-first anniversary of his first sermon in St. Paul's Church.

Mr. Pogue took his text from the Gospel of Matthew, verse 4 and 5, chapter 11":

"Jesus answered and said unto them Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see:

"The blind receive their sight and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up and the poor have the Gospel preached unto them."

It was explained that these words were the reply of Christ to John's messenger who came to inquire of Him if He were really the Messiah. "John was in doubt in his imprisonment and suffering if the One Whom he had baptized was the Messiah. He asked, 'Can He do miracles? Can He be the long promised Messiah?" The Master's reply was that the messenger should return and tell John the things he saw and heard."

The speaker said that in the text we have really the Master's vindication of His own claims and the text seems to say, "Let my works be the answer to your questions." And so to-day the real vindication of the Christian Church's claim to be the living church of God must be found in its members' deeds. There have never been so many questions asked the Church as to-day. People are asking if the Church is a divine institution and they ask what are the evidences of the Church to justify her claims to being the church of God. The answer must be a satisfactory one if the Church is to prosper and continue.

Found in God-like Deeds.

"As God sent Jesus so He sent us. The proof of the divinity of the Church is found in the God-like deeds we are doing. 'The deeds that we do bear witness unto us'."

The speaker said that Christ did not appeal on His former deeds but on what He was doing at the present time. "He knew John's present frame of mind and He was not going to appeal to him on the voice from the clouds or on any other past things. The world will not regard the claims of the Church by any arguments drawn from the past history. History gives us much that will persuade the inquirer that we are the church of God. The history of the Christian Church is proof of its divine origin and there is proof also in the things that the Church has done." Examples of some of the works of the Church were given; one being the result of the Christianity on the pagan peoples of Britain making the greatest power for good on earth. Comparisons were made between the Mohammed faith and Christianity, showing that the former gives its devotees no progress, either social or economical.

Not Found in History.

"Still," urged Mr. Pogue, "the most effective reply is not founded on history but in present day achievements. Not what is being done a thousand miles away but what you are doing here in Peterborough."

The audience was reminded also that Jesus said not to judge by His words but by His Works. "He did not say go and tell John that the people

IRISH FREE STATE SHOULD FORGET PAST AND FACE FACTS

Rev. Provost Cosgrave Paints Encouraging Picture of Progress and Growth.

TWO MISTAKES.

Attitude Toward England is Characterized as Most Serious That Is Being Made.

An encouraging picture of the Irish Free State was painted for members of the Peterborough Rotary Club today by Rev. Provost Cosgrave, of Trinity College, Toronto, who dealt with developments since the inauguration of the Free State government in a most informative manner. Himself a native of, and a resident of Dublin until he was twenty-four years old, and having frequently visited Ireland since coming to Canada, the last occasion two years ago, Provost Cosgrave was able to speak of Irish conditions and problems with authority and his summary of the progress of the Free State was full of interest.

Introduced by President W. R. Morris, Provost Cosgrave pointed out that his namesake, President Cosgrave, and his associates, although holding office only by reason of a small and very precarious majority, and facing many difficulties, had brought about a very material improvement in Southern Ireland since assuming office. In the first place they had restored order, a task that involved the raising of an army of 55,000 men and a police force known as the civic guards of 7,000 men. The absence of serious disorders in a country that had had so much disorder was remarkable. The Cosgrave government, too, realizing that Ireland depended almost altogether upon her agriculture and that the Irish cattle were not producing nearly as much milk as those of other countries competing with Ireland in the English market, had taken steps to improve the quality of Irish cattle and much was expected from this development. The lack of industries in Southern Ireland was being met by the development of power on the Shannon river and it was estimated that when this work was completed there would be enough power to furnish every twon in the Free State of 500 or more population with electric light and to give hope that the establishment of industries would follow. The Cosgrave administration had also courageously abolished the corporation of Dublin, characterised by the speaker as formerly one of the most inefficient and inert bodies he had ever known. As a result Dublin was now governed by a commission which was leaving nothing undone to improve and beautify the city.

Two Major Mistakes.

"I would like to be able to tell my namesake as I am going to tell you now," said Provost Cosgrave, "that his administration is making what are in my opinion two major mistakes."

The most serious of these, the speaker declared, was in the relationship of the Free State with Great Britain. The relations between the two countries had been strained for cer urles, ever since 1069. Provost Cosgrave believed, and the situation had on the whole been badly handled

POLICE RAID TWO HOMES

Confiscate Large Quantity of Beer From George Stree' Residences.

PLEADED GUILTY.

Provincial Constable Thompson and City police officers Piercy, Matthews and Sergeant Deannard engineered a raid on 223 and 225 George street on Saturday night, which resulted in three men appearing in police court this morning with seven or eight more to follow in the very near future. In the houses they found the men enjoying a large quantity of beer, which was confiscated.

John Oliver Taylor, of 225 George street, was the first offender to appear before Police Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning as a result of the raid. He pleaded guilty to a charge of keeping liquor for sale, and there being no option of a fine, the minimum sentence of two months' imprisonment was imposed.

Philip Woodcock, of 223 George street, was the second man to appear in the same connection, he being charged with having liquor in his possession without a permit. He pleaded guilty and the minimum fine of $110.00 and costs was imposed.

A third man, named Crosson, faced a charge of intoxication, and was fined $10.00 and costs.

YOUTH IS DROWNED WHILE OUT SKATING

Man 70 Years Old Makes Valiant Attempt To Rescue.

Utilities Commission To Decorate Main Streets

One of the most prominent contributions to the promotion of the Christmas festivities in Peterborough, is that of the Peterborough Utilities Commission—the placing of hundreds of colored electric lights on the main streets of the city.

This morning came the announcement from the Commission that it will again make this valuable contribution, and by December 10, Charlotte and George streets will be beautifully decorated with the strings of lights. Much favorable comment on this form of decoration was heard far beyond the city last year, and the Yuletide spirit will gain fresh impetus by their presence again this year.

ALLAN BROWN WINS FIRST IN COMB HONEY

Competition at Royal Fair Was Unusually Keen, With Increase in Exhibits.

BEEKEEPERS MEET.

Association Asks Government To Extend Grading Regulations To Cover Honey.

Great credit was brought to the City and County of Peterborough last week by one of the district's well-known beekeepers, Allan T. Brown, when he took first prize for comb honey at the Royal Winter Fair held in Toronto, in competition with all Canada. The competition this year was unusually keen as there was an increase of several hundred per cent. in the number of exhibits as compared with the year before.

The interests of the honey producers of the county, as well as of the consumers in the city, were involved in a decision reached at the annual convention of the Ontario Beekepers' Association, held at the time at the Royal Winter Fair, to ask the Dominion Government to pass legislation requiring the compulsory grading of honey sold on the local markets.

Mr. Brown was in attendance, as representative of the local beekeepers, as well as of "The Canadian Beekeeper" magazine, which is published in Peterborough, and which is the official organ of the Ontario Beekepers' Association. Mr. Brown is editor of this magazine. The Ontario Beekeepers' Association, which secured legislation from the Ontario Government, requiring the compulsory registration of all owners of bees in the province, and which has succeeded in having the Dominion Department of Agriculture pass regulations requiring the grading of all honey exported from Canada, decided to ask the Department to extend the grading regulations to cover the honey sold on the domestic market, just as honey that is exported has to be graded. Thus local consumers and consumers all over the Dominion would be sure that the honey they were getting was of good quality. In the past beekeepers have been inclined to export their finest honey and keep the poorer quality honey for home consumption. All the expense of this grading would be borne by the government and none of it would fall directly on the local consumer. When this legislation is enacted it means that Peterborough housewives will be able to buy honey graded just as they are now able to buy butter and eggs by grade.

May Need Bees.

Local gardeners often complain that their fruit trees are not bearing fruit or doing so very shyly. Even fruit growers throughout the county at times make the same complaint, not only about their orchards but about their clover crops as well. A possible explanation of the cause of this trouble was given by one of the speakers at the convention who stated that this often happens where there is a lack of bees to pollenize the blossoms. It was shown that the honey bee was not intended by nature to be a gatherer of honey only but as a pollenizer of the blossoms in order that they might produce fruits and seeds for the feeding of the human race. As is well known, blossoms of such plants as apples, cherries, plums and all fleshy fruits, as well as plants of the pumpkin family, are not self-pollinating but require the bees to transfer the pollen and ensure the fertilization of the blossoms for the production of fruit. The value of the honey bee in this way is vastly greater than as a producer of honey. The honey in the flowers is nature's method of attracting the bees to the flowers. Similarly the services of the bee is absolutely necessary for the fertilization and production of seeds in all clovers. It would be impossible for farmers to grow clover of any kind if there were no bees to aid in seed production. This has been proven in the case of Australia where no clover could be grown until bees were imported to bring about fertilization of the blossoms. Small areas of clover and fruit

Last Reports Issued Are More Favorable; Heart Has Weakened

Physicians Are Now in Almost Constant Attendance On His Majesty—Consulting Doctors Are Called Into Conference Which Lasts Until 3 A.M.

UNDISGUISED ANXIETY PREVAILS AT PALACE FOUR EMINENT PHYSICIANS REMAIN AT BEDSIDE

During Night Oxygen Was Administered in Small Quantities as a Tonic—Sleep Mentioned in Last Bulletin is Not Considered a Good Sign.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Fears of impending calamity which had gripped the British public throughout the night after it was learned that King George had been given oxygen and that a long illness menaced his heart were somewhat allayed by the doctor's report this morning. The report said the King's condition was slightly improved.

There remained in the public mind however a conviction that the King was fighting for his life with the issues still very much in doubt. Buckingham Palace officials minimized the importance of oxygen treatment pointing out that it was usual to administer it for tonic effect in such cases.

The bulletin at 10.30 a.m. said: "The King has had three hours of quieter sleep since the last bulletin. The temperature is now 99.8 and there is a slight improvement in general condition."

Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Stanley Hewett, the King's physicians, returned to the Palace at six o'clock this evening and saw King George again. It was Lord Dawson's fourth visit of the day, and Sir Stanley's third.

No Mention of Heart.

No mention was made as to how the overtaxed heart was standing the strain. The statement seemed to have a reassuring effect at the palace as there was a relaxation of the tension there. The Queen with Princess Mary at her side spent a trying night, anxiously awaiting the next development, fully aware of the hard struggle her royal consort was having at this stage of illness. She was the first to receive the doctors' report, and was greatly relieved at what appeared a remarkable rally since midnight.

Premier Baldwin called at the palace at noon and had a conversation with Lord Dawson, but did not see the King.

Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn, the King's physicians, paid a second visit to Buckingham Palace this afternoon. Lord Dawson stayed only a short time, but Sir Stanley remained about an hour.

Duke Is Returning.

BROKEN HILL, Rhodesia, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press).—The Duke of Gloucester, who is on his way to the bedside of his father, King George, received word of His Majesty's illness when hunting in the Bangweulu Swamps in Northern Rhodesia. He immediately made a dash by canoe to Kapalia, in the Belgian Congo, where he joined the mail train for Sakania, and came here to-day. He planned to continue on to Victoria Falls.

The Duke was in excellent health and put on weight during his trip.

In his hunt, he shot three lions and twenty-two different species of other game.

Queen Mary did not take her usual outing from the Palace this afternoon. This was the first time she had omitted her regular drive since the King was taken ill.

A large crowd had gathered about the palace gates to see the Queen drive out as usual about three p.m., and an hour later as darkness began to fall the throng learned that the Queen would remain indoors.

Lord Dawson of Penn, one of the King's physicians, paid a third visit to Buckingham Palace to-day at 2.45 p.m. He left after an hour.

The Duke of Connaught, former Governor-General of Canada, uncle of King George, is spending the winter in the South of France and has made no alteration in his arrangements. The sojourn is customary with the Duke.

Heart Weakening.

Weakening of the heart of King George, reported by his physicians last night, caused growing anxiety, although the same report told of favorable progress in the lung infection.

The two medical bulletins on His Majesty's condition during the day could only serve to increase distress in the public mind. They showed improvement in the local ailment and that fever condition was less grave, last night's temperature being 100.

On the other hand the prolonged illness, which began with a heavy cold and developed into pleurisy and a slight infection of the lung, has now continued for 12 days and is beginning to tell on the Royal patient's strength and power of resistance.

Last night for the first time the medical bulletin mentions His Majesty's heart as exhibiting a decline in strength which "causes anxiety." The physicians were more frequently and longer in attendance at Buckingham Palace yesterday than on any day since the illness set in except perhaps the day when an x-ray examination was made or that when Sir Humphrey Rolleston was called in as a consultant.

This assidious attendance by the physicians at morning, afternoon and evening was indication to the general public of their increased solicitude, and being Sunday there was an enormous gathering outside the Palace gates to await the night bulletin.

This read:—"His Majesty had a quieter sleep during the day. The infective process has continued to diminish and his temperature last night was 100. At the same time there was a decline in strength of the heart which causes anxiety."

No Special Editions.

No special editions of newspapers were issued to fill the usual Sunday gap in publishing information and the only means which the public had to learn the progress of the illness of the King was to watch the bulletin board in front of the palace or to listen to the radio broadcast.

The official bulletin yesterday morning read: "The King had a rather restless night. This morning his temperature is lower and the infective process shows some improvement. His general strength, though at the present adequate, is at this stage of the illness being taxed." There was no bulletin issued after the afternoon visit of the physicians.

Queen Mary, the Duke and Duchess of York, Princess Mary and others of the Royal household attended divine service in the private chapel of Buckingham palace this morning. This afternoon the Queen took her usual constitutional drive out, which the public marked as a favorable sign, indicating that no immediate danger was feared.

The Prince of Wales is aboard H.M.S. Enterprise on the high seas speeding homeward. His younger brother, the Duke of Gloucester, has reached a point in the interior of Africa where he can be reached by telegraph and bulletins giving the latest information on his father's illness have been communicated to him. He will reach Victoria Falls on Tuesday morning and will then take the quickest route to England.

The morning bulletin on His Majesty's condition was issued too late to be read to the congregation which assembled in the churches, but there was none the less fervency in the prayer everywhere offered for the sovereign's recovery.

Oxygen Is Administered.

It was reported that oxygen was being administered to the royal patient. It was understood that at that hour the Queen and the King's two children who are in England, Princess Mary and the Duke of York, were in a room adjoining the King's, awaiting a summons to his bedside.

The sleep mentioned in the latest bulletin is not considered a good sign. This bulletin stated:

"His Majesty the King has had some sleep during the last three hours. A further consultation confirms the opinion expressed in the last bulletin and, in spite of improvement in the lung, anxiety concerning the strength of the heart persists."

Crowd Before Palace.

About two thousand persons assembled in the cold December air yesterday morning on the pavement in front of the Palace. A constant stream of motor cars drew up to al-

MADOC, December 3. — An entire business block, containing Govier's bakeshop, Daniel Barry's ladies' wear shop, an apartment occupied by Frank Thompson and family, and R. O. Riordan's grocery store, was almost completely destroyed by a fire which began in the bakeshop at about 2.45 o'clock on Sunday morning. The quick response of the fire brigade to an alarm given by Mr. Bennett, the driver of the Ivanhoe bus, proved of little avail, and the buildings and the contents, only partially insured, were swept by the flames, which were with difficulty confined to the above named quarters. Fortunately no lives were lost though the Thompson family was able to save but little, while the grocery store stock was badly damaged.

This is the second time in little more than a year that the same block has been visited by fire, Frank Thompson having lost his garage and property, D. J. Barry suffering considerable loss and Armstrong's garage and blacksmith shop being completely destroyed on the first occasion.

Southworth Brothers Lose Their Home and all the Contents.

UNKNOWN ORIGIN.

(Examiner Correspondence)

FETHERICKS CORNERS, Dec. 3. —Thomas and James Southworth had the misfortune to lose their dwelling by a fire of unknown origin on Wednesday evening about 10 o'clock. Thomas Southworth was at the barn when the fire broke out and as no one was in the house, nothing was saved. The unfortunate owners are left with only the clothing which they wore at the time. Telephone service on the 152 line was suspended from the time of the fire until Thursday at noon, when Albert Petherick found the wire to the Southworth phone grounding the line and repaired the damage. It is not yet known whether the Southworth brothers will rebuild this year or not.

League Meets

With an attendance of fifty-nine, Zion League meeting on Thursday was one of the best of the year. Thomas Fry, convenor of Christian Fellowship, was in charge with Mrs. Fred Barnum as leader. The program consisted of a hymn by the Chevrolet group; scriptural lesson by Mrs. Barnum, with devotional talk by Rev. F. G. MacTavish; reading by Albert Petherick; vocal duet, Mrs. Lorne Barnum and Miss Jennie Fry; devotional topic, Thomas Fry and song service led by Fred Barnum.

The standing of the groups as announced by the contest secretary, Laura Watson, shows the Whippet group leading by 117 points over the Stars who are just one point ahead of the Chevrolet group. The Fords are rattling along 47 points in the rear. Only three more meetings remain this year and the struggle for second place will be an interesting one.

An advance poll of voting for the Boys' Parliament election was held after League, with Rev. Mr. MacTavish, D.R.O. in charge.

NET EARNINGS WILL EXCEED 1926 RECORD

Canadian National Railways Are Having Great Banner Year.

RAPID PROGRESS.

A Responsibility Is Owed All Municipalities, Declares Sir Henry Thornton.

TORONTO, December 3. — The net earnings of the Canadian National Railways for the year 1928 will exceed $50,000,000. This announcement was made by Sir Henry Thornton, chairman and president of the Canadian National system, and shows that 1928 will go down in Canadian National books as the banner year of the system, exceeding the previous high figure of net earnings, $47,900,000, which was reached in 1926.

In making public the net earnings for the present year, Sir Henry stated that in measuring the prosperity of a nation an excellent yardstick to take would be that of the railways' net earnings. "If I may be permitted to speak solely of the C. N. system for a second," he said, "I can picture briefly the situation in simple words. It is an axiom of business that the measure of value of any enterprise is that of what is operation and other recognized expenses have been deducted. If we assume that money is worth five per cent., a fair indication of the increased values in Canadian industry may be gleaned by the progress made by the national system. In 1922 the net earnings of the system were slightly under $3,000,000, which, based upon money being worth five per cent., would indicate that the value of the system was rated at $60,000,000. This year the net earnings will exceed $50,000,000, which, capitalized at five per cent., will mean a value of the system to the people of Canada of one billion dollars. The use of this form of yardstick, which is the Canadian National system alone, shows an increase in value in the Canadian National Railways in six years from $60,000,000 to a billion dollars, tells us some things of the economic strides made by Canada, and we could not have advanced so rapidly in earning power but for the sound economic condition of the country. Indeed, it is a heritage well worth while, and worthy of our giving our best to develop it."

Singularly Blessed.

Sir Henry pointed out that Canada was singularly blessed for its future development by two great transportation systems. From the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the United States frontier to the Arctic Ocean it was well served by the two steel arteries of commerce, and while it was true that both roads were engaged in keen competition, this was not only good for the systems themselves, but it was good for the Dominion of Canada at large. While both roads endeavored to protect their interests, they proceeded on the theory that both systems were dedicated to serve the people of Canada. The railway systems live on gross receipts, Sir Henry added, and there is a well-defined axiom in the conduct of business affairs that if a company or corporation sells enough of its products, it is bound to make money, providing that product is sold at a profit. The railways have transportation to sell as their product, and while this is being sold at advantage, the development of the Dominion is such that there is a demand for better services from the transportation systems. With these demands in view, the people should permit such rates as would give the railways an opportunity fully to serve the public.

Sir Henry stated that he fully recognized that the source of production in Canada was a long way from the source of consumption, and that unless the freight rates permitted access to the market with a profit, the country would be in a bad way, and that with the demands which will be made upon the roads in the future, the subject of rates must be left to

CLUB HONORS PATRON SAINT

Rev. William McDonald Was Special Speaker For St. Andrew's Day.

EXCELLENT PROGRAM.

Alike in Peterborough as in the furthermost corners of the globe, Scotia's children met together on Friday night to celebrate St. Andrew's Day.

In the W.O.W. Hall the members of the Caledonian Club listened to a splendid Scottish program. The hall was suitably decorated, the blue cross of the patron saint on a white background predominating. After God Save the King was sung, Robert Veitch, the president of the society, who occupied the chair, made some very fitting remarks, and though nothing new could be said as to the reason of the gathering, they never grow old to Scottish hearts.

The principal speaker of the evening was Rev. Wm. McDonald, B.D. who, in his twenty-five years in the ministry, has always been minister of a St. Andrew's church up to the time he came to Knox United in this city. He wore a tartan badge of the clan McDonald, handed down from his ancestors, and he chose for his subject, besides "Saint Andrew," the "Early Pioneers." He had much first-hand knowledge to impart on this latter subject, as his grandfather was one of them.

The Patron Saint.

Mr. McDonald made a special study of Saint Andrew and delved into all the lore and tradition of that patron saint of Scotland, who is the patron saint of Russia also. The life work of St. Andrew was carried on around the Black Sea, so that is the reason for Russia's choosing him. The reasons given for the Scottish choice are that the characteristics of this saint appealed to their race. In 740 A.D., after he was martyred, his arm was brought by Saint Reguis to the east coast of Scotland and there buried, and on its site St. Andrew's University now stands. Andrew was the first disciple to discover the Messiah and introduced Him to his brother Simon.

Allegiance to the protecting saint was faithfully adhered to by the early Scottish pioneers in Canada. The ancestors of Rev. Wm. McDonald came from Mull in 1821, settled around Glengarry and formed the Bathurst settlement. From them he has learned to cherish traditions dear to Scottish hearts. He was brought up in a district which he called "an older Scotland reproduced." Very interesting were the tales he told of the struggles of these courageous pioneers and how they established homes, schools and churches first, replicas of those in the homeland. A very appreciative audience were sorry when this genial and interesting speaker took his seat.

George Low, after a few remarks, moved that a vote of thanks be given to the various artists.

After the programme luncheon was served and the event brought to a close in the usual Scottish style, the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

Fine Program.

The following was the program:

TOOK ADVICE OF DOCTORS AND COLDS QUICKLY DISAPPEARED

Get Instant Relief Instead of Added Misery Caused by Neglect of Proper Treatment

Many Here Try New Hospital Method in Own Homes for Head and Chest Colds

By taking the advice of their doctors and using a method that has relieved even the most extreme hospital cases, Mrs. E. H. Barber and C. H. Perry now know the quickest and most pleasant way to get rid of a head cold, chest cold or resultant cough.

Nose Cleared Up—Cold Gone In Few Hours

The quick relief which came to Mr. Perry is typical of experiences in numbers of Peterborough homes.

For three days the different remedies he used failed to check the cold in his head. Then he consulted his doctor, who advised double strength doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a hospital certified medication of wild cherry, terpin-hydrate, etc., which clears up the breathing passages.

Relief began instantly. He felt the comforting, healing warmth—from his nose passages deep down into his chest—and in a few hours congestion began to loosen up. Next morning he was breathing freely through his nose and in a day or so all traces of the cold were gone.

Tempting to Take and Soon Ended Child's Cold

Mrs. Barber's ten year old daughter contracted a severe cold which started spreading so fast it was necessary to call the doctor. On his advice then she gave double doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral every half hour until congestion was relieved—then one every two hours. By supper time the child felt lots better and ate heartily for the first time in several days. That night she was able to sleep without coughing and in a day or so was rid of the cold and back at school.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

This hospital certified medicine quickly penetrates and heals inflamed linings of the air passages. Absorbed by the system it helps allay congestion and drive out the cold from the nose passages, throat and chest.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral now and you, too, will feel like a different person tomorrow. At all druggists—50c and twice as much in $1.00 hospital size.

Children Making Use Of Icy Roads

MARMORA, Dec. 3 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Although the icy roads have made the roads dangerous for motorists, and the sidewalks treacherous for pedestians, it may be truly said that it is an ill wind that blows nobody good. The children of the village and also at various places throughout the country are enjoying the icy hills that are ideal for sleigh riding. The low temperature has also made good skating on the shallow area on the east side of the Moira River, immediately south of the bridge on the Havelock Road. Some of the older youngsters took advantage of this condition Saturday afternoon.

CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

MONTREAL GRAIN AND BELLEVILLLE CHEESE BOARD

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 3—At the cheese market here on Saturday two hundred cheese sold at 19 cents. This is the last board of the season.

PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 3—(Canadian Press).—The export trade in wheat was quiet on Sunday. A moderate amount of business was done in car lots of oash grain and prices for wheat were about one cent per bushel higher.

A feature of the local flour trade during the past week was the decline of 20 cents per barrel in the prices for spring wheat grades. These grades are now 90 cents per barrel lower than at this date last year. This may be attributed to the fact that the raw material is cheaper on account of more liberal supplies. A fair amount of business was done with domestic and country buyers. There was no change in the condition of the market for winter wheat flour, prices being maintained.

Butter receipts on Saturday were 823 packages. A fair volume of business was transacted in this market. Prices showed no change although a firmer feeling prevailed due to a large reduction in the stock of creamery butter on sport.

Saturday's cheese receipts were 1,111 boxes. Cheese prices steadily declined during the past week.

The feature of the millfeed market during the last week was the increase in prices of Manitoba bran and shorts by $1 per ton, and the decrease in the price of middlings by $2 per ton. There was a good seasonal demand for rolled oats and the price was steady.

Egg receipts on Saturday were 2,365 cases. Prices held firm. It is stated, however," that early production of eggs in British Columbia will relieve the shortage in the east for fresh eggs and when they begin to arrive more freely there will in all probability be a reduction in prices.

On the potato market there were liberal receipts during the week. Prices held firm at the low levels established the previous week.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ills., Dec. 3 (Canadian Press).—Notable unreadiness which owners of grain showed Saturday to make deliveries on December contracts here did much to bring about substantial upturns in price. Bulges in values were also promoted by general notice taken of Secretary Jardine's plans submitted to Congress, giving a definite initial program for farm relief.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong, 1⅛ to 2⅛c net higher. Corn finished ⅝ to ¾c up; oats unchanged to ¼c advance, and provisions varying from 22c decline to a rise of 27c.

Stimulus to buyers and nervousness on the part of recent speculative sellers quickly resulted Saturday from announcement that only 325,000 bushels of wheat had been handed over here Saturday when the first opportunity was presented to fill December contracts by actual delivery of the grain. Preliminary deliveries of December corn, too, were next to nothing, 48,000 bushels all told, and with talk of possible farm relief legislation becoming more and more a distinct influence on the market, prices of wheat developed an increasing upward trend, with the close at nearly the day's top level.

Especially in the last hour of trading, aggressive buying took place on the part of speculators who expected to profit from an advance of wheat values. Meanwhile, houses with connections northwest were the chief sellers, but the offerings were of insufficient volume to meet the demand. Word that total deliveries for the day amounted to 465,000 bushels of wheat and 73,000 bushels of corn was virtually ignored.

Special significance in some quarters was attached to the fact that Secretary Jardine formally advocated creation of a federal farm board with authority to finance the handling of crop surpluses and with a revolving fund provided for the purpose. Unsettled weather in Argentina and 28,000,000 bushels reduction of estimates of the 1929 Argentine exportable wheat surplus counted also as a bullish influence.

Corn and oats were firmer, sympathizing with wheat and responsive to indications of bad weather in the corn belt. Besides, rural offerings of corn to arrive were meagre, whereas shipments to the seaboard appeared to be assuming large bulk. On the other hand, Saturday's receipts of corn in Chicago were fairly liberal, 364 cars.

Provisions were irregular, but for the most part reflected upturns in the value of hogs.

TORONTO, Dec. 3.—Butter buying was moderate on Saturday, and the week's closing session was not particularly demonstrative. Business was limited to filling orders for immediate trade needs at steady prices. Finest creamery changed hands in small broken lots at the week's levels of from 40¾c to 41c per lb. for No. 1 pasteurized solids, undergrades selling for a cent a pound less.

The inquiry for all grades of fresh and storage eggs was fair, and prices were well maintained. At farmers' markets fresh eggs were sold to users at new high peak levels for the season, and there appeared to be plenty of eggs available for those willing to pay the top prices asked.

Cheese markets were signally featureless and slow moving. Values have been marked down again at outside markets, although the local trade reported no change in the absence of any stimulating movement. The quotable range for No. 1, large, colored, paraffined and Government grade is steady at from 21¼c to 21¾c per lb., delivered basis.

Retail markets were busy on Saturday, dispensing turkey, geese, chicken and ducks at prices which are fairly reasonable, considering supply on hand and the demand.

low the occupants to learn the latest news.

The pressure of anxious subjects to get near the bulletin posted on the railing prevented many from reading it and two policemen on duty were asked to raise it higher. The taller men in the throng then read the news to their neighbors while those in the front removed their hats so that persons behind them could get a better view.

In consquence of the swelling crowd, the police finally decided that it was necessary to form the inquirers into a line which thereafter passed slowly in front of bulletin board. Previously a number of guardsmen going to their posts of duty had had to shoulder their way through the crowd.

THE GUNS.

(By Pater Familias.)

Now that the storm arising from the removal of the German guns from Confederation Square has subsided, it is to be hoped that no mistake will occur in their new placement, or replacement, as the case may be. It does seem that this is a question in which the people, through their representatives on the council board and the Great War veterans should have a voice, especially the latter body, whose sentiments in the matter should be religiously respected for obvious reasons. Quoting Ald. Greene from Tuesday's Examiner, he says: "We want to have everything in Confederation Square in keeping with the spirit of the memorial." Now, Ald. Greene's objective that the Square should be created into a veritable beauty spot is to be highly commended. And knowing Ald. Greene and the Mayor as I do, I am quite confident that neither gentleman would deliberately run counter to the wishes of the people by intentionally heaping indignities upon mementoes of 1914-18 we all prize so highly.

But is is difficult to conceive of anything more in keeping with the true spirit of the memorial in Confederation Square than these same German guns, whose presence here gives eloquent and tangible testimony to the courage of, and sacrifice by, our brave soldier citizens. Then, why should these war trophies be relegated to semi-obscurity on Armour Hill, or to all but isolation on Nicholls Oval, as some citizens advocate What spot more fitting than Confederation Square, with the Armories in the rear from which marched to the Great War the gallant 93rd Battalion; the adjacent Collegiate Institute, from which not a few of Canada's defenders found their way to the front in France and Flanders; the permanent home of Peterborough's veterans on the left, where also is erected the Cenotaph in perpetual memory of their fallen comrades.

I take it that the figures on the memorial represent Canada staying the advance of Germany. I also submit that the captured German guns are fitting companions for that memorial, strikingly demonstrating, as they do, the prowess and victory of our Canadian armies, and those of her allies.

The erection of the memorial in Confederation Square has stirred our civic representatives to beautify this central hub of the city, with which all should agree. Of course the guns are not, and never can be made, beautiful—neither in war; but transcendently beautiful is the thought they inspire, of the youth and young men who went through hell and laid down their lives that freedom and justice should prevail. Then, to my mind, the permanent placement of these war should be a finishing touch to keeping forever green our gratitude to the glorious dead.

Reverting to the salvaging of the guns of the Vets, it's an ill-wind that blows nobody any good, and perhaps our memories needed a little quickening in realisation of the debt we owe our returned men and those they left behind thm—"Lest we forget!"

REHA INQUEST IS POSTPONED UNTIL TUESDAY

Inquiry Into Fatal Shooting at Deloro Laid Over Until Tuesday.

JURY EMPANELLED.

Expected Finding Resulting From Post Mortem Will Play Important Part in Hearing.

DELORO, Dec. 3. — (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Inquiry into the cause of the death of Frank Reha, 24, Roumanian, which was to have taken place at ten o'clock Saturday morning will not be carried out till four o'clock Tuesday afternoon, December 4th. At ten o'clock Saturday morning, there was no one to be seen in the town hall where the inquest was to be held but the constable, George O'Brien, who was in charge of the body and the caretaker of the building. Shortly after eleven o'clock, Dr. Crawford arrived expecting that he would be late for the inquest, and expressed some surprise that the inquiry had not been started. At ten minutes to twelve, the coroner, Dr. Harper of Madoc, and three provincial officers arrived on the scene. The work of selecting a jury was begun and by two in the afternoon the first steps of the inquest had been completed. The hearing was adjourned, after the remains had been viewed, till Tuesday afternoon.

To selece eight men and empanel them as a jury, was the work of about an hour. During this time the remains were removed from where they were in the town hall to a company residence which was unoccupied, but which had been heated for the purpose. Here the jurymen were duly sworn, elected their foreman and viewed the remains. The jury:—Harry Loveless, foreman; N. Kilpatrick; F. Leal; H. A. Haacke; M. J. Tamplin; Clifford Quinn; E. Shannon; R. Murray.

Pellets Entered Chest

In the absence of the constables who were for the moment not in the room, the coroner lifted the gray blanket which covered the dead body of Frank Reha. He pointed out to the men that the pellets of shots had entered at the points where there were small round scars, and that there were no places of exit. The marks were mostly on the left side of the chest with one single scar on the left shoulder. There had been some on the left hand. But this member was bandaged and the bandage was not removed. None of the jurymen required it to be taken from the hand, but seemed more concerned with the scars on the chest There were twenty-seven in the chest and one in the left shoulder. There were several more in the left hand, which was bandaged. Then, the jury having viewed the remains and been adjourned till Tuesday, the work of post mortem examination was begun. It is expected that the finding resulting from this work will play a prominent part in the hearing at the inquest.

He clears the LINE

IN THE TELEPHONE BUSINESS this man is called a "trouble-shooter", which may sound like sport but it isn't for him.

Any hour of the night he may be roused from sleep. Somewhere the line is down and it is up to him to fix it. Right away.

Usually the line is down because there has been a storm. It isn't much fun to cling to the top of a pole with a zero gale taking your breath away.

FINDING THE BREAK in the line is not as bad as it used to be. It used to mean that men had to trudge along through the storm, perhaps for miles, until the bad spot was found. Today there are delicate instruments which can locate the spot within a few rods from an office many miles away.

They are so accurate that if there is a break in the 180 miles of line between Toronto and Sarnia, a man can sit in a building in Toronto and locate the spot within a pole's length or so. Or a man can sit in a building in Montreal and find a break anywhere between there and Quebec.

He can tell the trouble-shooter almost the very pole to go to because every pole now is numbered.

BUT THE TROUBLE-SHOOTER has to do the actual job and it means more than losing sleep or braving bad weather. It calls for very high technical skill.

Big cables are simply lead containers holding hundreds of tightly packed wires, each fine as a hair. When the cable is burnt out for a stretch, or is opened, there is a fine looking mess. It looks like the stuffing of a hair mattress.

Each of these hundreds of fine wires has to be connected again to its mate in the other half of the cable. If you can imagine yourself fingering those wires at two o'clock of a stormy wintry morning you will realize how good the trouble-shooter has to be at his job.

STORMS COST MONEY as well as discomfort. The telephone system has over 675,000 miles of wire strung on poles stretching across 23,000 miles of country and every storm hits some part of the system. A big storm can do a great deal of damage.

Sleet has cost the telephone company as much as a million dollars in one year. Sometimes one storm means spending more than $100,000 without delay.

There is no time to call the directors together. The job has to be done and the money must be spent.

The money is ready because the telephone company has followed a policy of making definite provision for such emergencies.

And the job is done because the telephone business has men and women, like the trouble-shooter, alive to the meaning of service and eager to keep the telephone in the front rank of Canadian progress.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1928

A PROGRESSIVE STEP.

The resolution passed by the Board of Works making the streets round Victoria Park and Confederation Square a restricted area puts into effect a principle that is entirely for the public good.

Like most other Canadian municipalities, we are decidedly backward in recognizing the absolute necessity of a town-planning bylaw and other municipal legislation incidental to such a measure.

Had we such legislation no company would have even thought of building a service station opposite one of the city parks, and we would have been spared many other eye-sores that have been allowed to develop.

We need a town-planning bylaw, and we need a modern building bylaw—two pieces of legislation that should make profitable study for ambitious municipal politicians who really want to do something important and lasting for the city they serve.

Meanwhile it is a cause for satisfaction that members of the Council recognize that the public is strongly opposed to the proposed service station opposite Confederation Square, and that the aldermen are alive to the need of restrictions that will prevent this and other enterprises from encroaching on the city's beauty spots.

KEEPING THE ROADS OPEN.

Simultaneously with the announcement from the Provincial Highways Department that 1,000 miles of Provincial highways in Ontario is to be kept open this winter comes a resolution unanimously passed by the Simcoe County Council requesting the department to discontinue the use of snowplows on Provincial roads in that county on the ground that "it is detrimental to the best interests of the farmers."

From the viewpoint of the farmer living on a side road there is much to justify the Simcoe resolution.

With the Provincial highways bare of snow he is up against a serious situation.

To reach the highway he must use a sleigh, and yet when he gets out to the main road the runners are of no use to him.

The problem, of course, is a development that has accompanied the motor car, and how it is to be solved so as to please everybody is not yet apparent.

The urban motorist and the farmer living on the Provincial highways want the roads kept free of snow; the rest of the rural population would prefer to have good sleighing everywhere.

However, the department's plans to keep the principal roads open for motoring are not likely to be changed, even if other county councils pass resolutions similar to that of the Simcoe body.

MAY MEAN A REVENUE LOSS.

A recent judgment of County Judge Ross, of Barrie, who has ruled that owners of summer cottages occupied but two months in the year are entitled to 50 per cent. reduction in assessment on buildings, is a matter that may involve a considerable loss to several Peterborough County municipalities should cottagers take advantage of this ruling.

The majority of cottages at Chemong, Stoney Lake and other summer resorts in this district would come under this 50 per cent. reduction as they are usually open during July and August, and if there is a general move on the part of the property owners to benefit themselves of the reduction as set forth in the judgment of Judge Ross the revenues of such townships as Smith, Burleigh and Dummer would be materially affected.

The situation is being brought to the attention of the Ontario Legislature by the Simcoe County Council, which will ask that the Assessment Act shall be so amended so that the rebate authorized in the case of residences not occupied continuously shall not apply to summer cottages.

In this connection it is pointed out that these cottages are assessable at a lower percentage of their valuation and, in addition, their presence calls for a heavy expenditure on good roads.

The point raised is of great interest to municipalities throughout Ontario as well as to thousands of citizens who own summer homes.

COMPLETE THE JOB.

The Examiner, sympathetic as it is toward the citizens affected, can see neither fairness nor consistency in the decision of the Board of Works that the owners of the five gasoline pumps still remaining on the streets, in spite of the order made some months ago, shall be given another year in which to remove them.

The original order to clear streets in the business section of the city of these obstructions was in the general interest, and there is no reason why it should be departed from now when ample time has been given pump-owners to comply with the city's instructions.

To rescind that order under any conditions would show weakness on the part of the Council, but to rescind it after a number of owners have obeyed the ruling and removed their pumps from the street shows not only weakness but unfairness.

The Council was right when it decided that the pumps must go.

When half the job has been done it is no time to extend the time limit by a year and thus penalize the citizens who loyally obeyed instructions, and in common justice the Council at to-night's meeting should reject the action of the Board of Works and declare that its street-cleaning program in regard to these pumps must be completed at once.

If there is anything in the slogan, "The Greatest good to the greatest number," it is necessary to consider the interests of the community as a whole, and not merely that of a few individual citizens.

THE CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS.

In the story of Canadian progress during recent years there is little that can compare with the record of the Canadian National Railways. Consider it for a minute. Half-a-dozen years ago the Canadian National was a veritable white elephant. A fortuitous collection of roads, operated half-heartedly in a haphazard way, lacking in morale, public confidence and support, and losing all the way from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year, it looked like a forlorn hope. It was one of those things, in fact, that the nation accepted as a legacy of former folly, a sort of combined boom and war casualty, something to be shouldered resignedly and to be made the best of.

What is its position to-day?

The answer is best given in figures that were issued yesterday from the head office of the railway in Montreal. Here are some of the things they tell:

1.—In October the gross earnings of the Canadian National were $30,154,743. This was $5,367,021 more than during October of last year—a gain of 21 per cent.

2.—In October the net earnings of the Canadian National were $10,323,313. This was $2,738,699 more than during October of last year—a gain of 36 per cent.

3.—For the ten months of the calendar year, January to October 31, the gross earnings of the Canadian National were $226,742,565. This was a gain of $23,000,000 over the gross earnings for the same ten months last year.

4.—For the ten months of the calendar year, January to October 31, the net earnings of the railway totalled $46,410,000. This was a gain of $11,823,155 over the earnings during the same period last year—an advance of 34 per cent.

These figures are amazing. If, as is probable, the Canadian National shows as big net profits for November and December as it has shown for October, the result will be that the railway will conclude the year with a total net operating profit of nearly $65,000,000.

In other words, we have seen the Canadian National come in a few years from a position where it compelled the Government to put up tens of millions for it each year, to a position where it is able to itself take care of all of its liabilities to the public and to hand over to the Government some cash as well.—Ottawa Journal.

BRITISH UNEMPLOYMENT.

The unemployed in Great Britain continue to trouble the dreams of statesmen and party leaders. The latest figures show an increase in the numbers out of work, though this is called "seasonal." That must be cold comfort for men and women without jobs. The whole subject was earnestly debated at the reopening of Parliament. Mr. Churchill, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, made a long speech which was partly political, partly economic and industrial. When called upon by one of the Labor members, Mr. Clynes, to do a great amount of Government spending, as the wise choice between paying for idleness and paying for work, Mr. Churchill neatly quoted the words of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Labor party, when he was Prime Minister. Mr. MacDonald then said: "I wish to make it perfectly clear that the Government have no intention of drawing off from normal channels of trade large sums for extemporized measures which can only be palliative."

Yet the present Government is not sitting down before extensive unemployment with folded hands. Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons of several different expedients which were being tried or would be tried. Among them were plans to facilitate foreign trade by extending the Export Credits scheme of 1920. There was also a method of helping general industry through improving and extending the supply of electricity. Projects are already in a forward condition to cover an area of 30,000 square miles and to serve a population of 27,000,000. The Government has also set on foot large plans for drainage of swamp lands and for checking erosion on the coasts which are expected to furnish work for a large number of the unemployed. Even more stress is laid upon training unemployed miners and others to become artisans. Through this recourse work has latterly been found for six or seven hundred men a week. If that rate can be kept up it will in time mean a substantial gain both for the workers themselves and for British industry.

Mr. Churchill refused to end his speech on a note of pessimism. He admitted the extent of the evil which they were seeking to remedy, but insisted that more people were actually employed in England to-day than ever before. Savings have steadily increased, even in the hard years, and the investing power of the nation is still very great and is becoming larger. Many British factories are putting themselves in a position better to meet the stress of modern competition. All told, it is no time for "this small, overcrowded, overburdened but still unconquered island" to despair of its future.—New York Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

When they say that Canada's future lies in the West they are not, of course, referring to football.

Sir Austen Chamberlain has joined the ranks of Canada's advocates in the Old Land. His Birmingham speech should do much to interest Britishers in the possibilities of this country.

The United States Customs Border Patrol is to be 100 per cent. honest, according to an official. When that condition arrives the flow of Canadian liquor into the United States will be considerably lessened.

Peterborough will have to be on the wing. Kitchener has already asked the Postoffice Department to establish a local air mail service in Western Ontario.

The Peterborough Examiner doesn't care for the publicity as a result of the row over the disposition of the German war trophies. Cheer up, such rows are only the spice of life, and are evidence of a deeper spirit of patriotic sentiment and camaraderie than the speeches of Agnes MacPhail and a few other pacifists show.—St. Catharines Standard.

A Thought

TO-MORROW.

To-day's trial is annoying; but we can endure this, if this be all there is of it. To-morrow's trial, however, may be heavier and worse, and from that we naturally shrink. Yet tomorrow's trial is not yet ours, and it may not ever be.

The trouble we cannot bear is only the trouble we borrow,
And the trials that never come are the ones that fret us so.

Then why should we shrink from the weight of burdens we may never have to bear? "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." If, indeed, we bear up bravely and in faith under the burden and trial of today, we thereby gain added strength for the burden of tomorrow, if that ever comes.

LIFE'S DIFFICULTIES.

He alone is wise who can accommodate himself to all the contingencies of life; but the fool contends, and is struggling, like a swimmer against the stream.

GOD'S MINUTE.

But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.—II Cor. 3:18.

Loving Lord, renew in us the image of our Creator.

We have marred, we have lost, through sin, the holiness which makes men like to Thee. Transform us, conform us to the image of Thy dear Son—Himself the express image of the Father's Person—Who came and died and rose again that we might be fashioned anew in the likeness of God. Give us the vision of Thee in Thy blessed Word, so that reflecting as in a mirror the glory of the Lord, we may be changed into the same image from glory to glory.

Let the light of Christ's love shine in our faces as we go among our brothers day by day. Make us so like Him in all our ways that in us they shall see Him and be drawn to Him. Enable us to say in truth, "To me to live is Christ."

Deepen within us the yearning to see His unveiled face in the day when we shall be satisfied when we awake in His likeness, Who liveth and reigneth with the Father and the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

ROMAN CATHOLIC WOMEN NOT IN FAVOR OF DIVORCE COURTS.

As a member of the Catholic Womens' League of Ontario, and reguarding the subject of Divorce Courts, we are not willing that our fair province should adopt Divorce Courts, as I only see them as a foundation for destroying the Christian home. We would welcome any improvement of the law being applied to the evils that bring about divorce in the Christian home. Divorce will never improve this fair province and we would not welcome a poison so deadly to Christian morals, but rather seek a remedy to keep husbands and wives living happily with their children as Christian fathers and mothers. I think intemperance helps to fill the Divorce Courts. Please root out this evil first.

BROKEN

CHAPTER XLVII.

The driver of the car stood watching with kindly, sympathetic eyes. He was a big, bulky man with a red face that looked as if it had been exposed to all weathers, and he had a deep, jovial voice.

"Glad you're not hurt," he said after a moment. "It was a near shave, eh? By Jove, you gave me a nasty turn, I can tell you. I've driven thousands of miles in my time on motor bikes and in all sorts of tin lizzies, but this is the first time I've knocked anyone down. Rotten sensation. I assure you! However, as long as you're not hurt—Have some more whisky."

He went on talking as he fetched the decanter.

"You a motorist? No? Never drive yourself? Well, I won't let anyone drive me—makes me nervous as a woman. Though talking about women, I met one once with some pluck—drove a car up St. Bernrrd in a blizzard. Know the road up the St. Bernard?"

"No." There was a curiously sharp note in Schofield's voice. It seemed as if fate were laughing at him again. Why should this man mention St. Bernard of all places?

With an effort he pulled himself together.

"No—never been to Switzerland," he said.

"No? I know every inch of it. Had a tour on a motor bike there last summer. She was some bike—special engine fitted."

He would have launched into a glowing description of the machine, but Schofield cut him short.

"Who was the woman who drove a car up there? I knew one once."

He broke off with a sharp memory of the reckless way in which Julie had boasted of her achievement. "I did it all right, only I couldn't get down; and the snow was too bad—and the wind!"

He remembered the way she had shivered. "I never heard the wind howl like it did that night. It was as if the souls of all the damned were up there, screaming for mercy."

That was like her—she had always talked extravagantly.

And it must have been the night she had spent with Chittenham.

Schofield clenched his teeth.

The other man went on cheerily: "I never knew her name, but she was a little slip of a thing—fair—I always like fair women. eh? I remember noticing her because she was the only woman in the hotel—a rotten hotel, too. She had a man with her—a decent sort of a chap. I remember he gave me a tip about a new engine he——"

Again Schofield cut in impatiently: "You don't remember his name? It's strange, but some people I know did that trip, and——"

The other man laughed.

"Yes, oddly enough I ran into him only a day or two ago. Chittenham, his name was. What did you say?"

"Only that it's a coincidence, but I know Chittenham. Surprising how small the world is!"

"You know him? Really. I like the fellow. He and I sat up talking that night. It was too darned cold to sleep. He knew a lot about motoring; he told me——"

"You mean that night on the St. Bernard?"

"Yes, he——"

Schofield got up suddenly, his face white, his eyes strained.

"Will you swear that is the truth?" he said thickly.

The other man stared.

"The truth? Why, what on earth—?"

"Is it true that you and he sat up all that night? Oh, I know I must seem mad to you, but for God's sake answer me! If you knew what it means to me——"

But before the answer came he knew what it would be—knew just how base and unfounded were Lombard's lies—knew just how cruelly he had mijsudged Julie—knew also that with his own hands he had wilfully brought his last hope of happiness to the ground.

Bim Lennox and Chittenham sought everywhere for Julie without success.

They inquired of everyone whom she had ever known, and searched every spot in London she had ever visited.

It was a difficult search to carry out without raising suspicion or scandal, and its difficulties were added to by the fact that Julie's dead cousin's solicitors were inquiring for her also.

It appeared that Jewel had left her a substantial sum of money, with the pathetic wish that "she may find greater happiness in her life than I have found in mine."

Bim put them off as naturally as she could. Julie was traveling on the Continent, she said, and so far no address had been received from her.

"I know they don't believe me," she told Chittenham. "Or perhaps it is because I know I am lying that I don't expect them to believe me."

Chittenham was torn between his anxiety for Julie and his distress for Sadie.

He had told Bim the whole story.

"I only wish to God I had told you before!" he said, when he read the kindly sympathy and understanding in her eyes. "When we find Julie——" He broke off as Bim turned away. "You don't believe we shall ever find her," he accused her angrily. "You're afraid to admit it, but you believe she is dead."

Bim made no answer, and he went on passionately, driven by his own dread and pain:

"People don't take their lives so easily. Julie was never a coward. She'll come back."

But his own hope was not very real. He was haunted by the dread that some day he would read just such another headline in the papers as that which had announced her cousin's tragic death. He spent his time between the nursing home where Sadie was and Bim's flat.

He had called in an inquiry agent to help the search for Julie; he found himself staring into the face of every woman he passed in the street; once he waited hours outside a house into which a girl who in the distance had looked like Julie hurriedly disappeared as he came towards her.

"You're wearing yourself to a shred, poor darling," Mrs. Ardron wailed. She believed his distress was all for Sadie. She confided to Marco Essen that she believed Giles adored his wife.

"It's all too amazing," she sighed. "I've never known him to care for anyone before. And that type of girl, too!" She forgot that once she had told Giles she would like him to marry Sadie; she had come to the conclusion that she did not really care for her daughter-in-law at all.

"If only she'd been English!" she complained.

Essen guffawed.

He was fond of his future wife in his own way, but as he once confided to a friend: "God only knows what made me propose to her. It was the last thing I intended to do."

Even he was not sufficiently shrewd to see that it was Mrs. Ardron herself who had made him; a deep artfulness lay beneath all her pretended simplicity.

But apart from her anxiety for Giles Mrs. Ardron was entirely happy. She spent a hectic weekend in Paris with Doris Gardener, buying a trousseau more suitable for a girl of twenty.

"It's the third time I've had to choose frocks for a wedding," she sighed. "It's such a beautiful, romantic experience."

Doris said cynically that once had been often enough for her, but her heart gave a queer little throb of pain whenever she thought of Giles Chittenham, and there were times when she hoped passionately that Sadie would die and set him free.

But Sadie showed no signs of obliging. She had changed wonderfully since her first shock and despair, and had grown quiet and obedient. She did everything she was told with pathetic eagerness, and she was always gentle and grateful to Giles.

"When I get well I'll start all over again and show you how nice I can be," she told him. "You've been so good to me—far better than I ever deserved. I'll pay you back some day, Giles."

"Get well and strong, and I shall want nothing else," he told her.

The reports of the specialists were encouraging. They had every hope, they said. It might be a long time, naturally, but Mrs. Chittenham was such an excellent patient——

Giles winced and turned away.

He wanted Sadie to recover her sight, but the thought of the future was a nightmare to him.

Even if Julie never came back, he knew it would be impossible for him ever to take up his old life with Sadie.

He had no feeling left for her but pity: it only distressed him when she tried to show her gratitude and affection.

The kisses of one woman cannot kill the memory of another.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1928

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Strong good and evil planetary influences prevail today, according to astrology, which finds the day uncertain and inauspicious for important matters.

In the early hours it is well to attend to routine matters, especially avoiding any speculative venture.

It is not a lucky day for seeking financial support or even expert advice. Judgment should not be trusted where investments are concerned.

There is fair promise for initiative that has been previously planned. The middle of the day is auspicious for artistic ventures.

There is a reasonably promising sign for dealings with women who are to succeed wonderfully in big business within a decade.

Real estate is today under a malefic sway making for delays in profits, taxes and unusual expenses.

Happiness should attend brides who plight troth today, for the stars are read as friendly to them and promising long partnership.

Theatres should benefit today, for there is indication of success for new plays as well as little known players.

All the seers appear to believe that the study of occultism will be made seriously as the next great triumph of the human mind.

Earth, air and water having been subjugated to the uses of man the next step will be conquest of the unseen world, begun in telegraphy and developed through radio.

As December advances unusual and severe storms may be expected, astrologers warn, and there will be serious earthquakes.

A mining disaster has been prognosticated and it is wise for workers to be unusually cautious.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of rather a disturbing year in which they should postpone important decisions, especially those regarding change of residence. Women may be too much interested in dress and society.

Children born on this day probably will have to overcome many obstacles in the course of their march toward success. These subjects of Sagittarius are generally meticulous in details and exceedingly conscientious. They win through concentration on their own affairs to the exclusion of outside interests.

STEAMER RESCUES CREW OF FREIGHTER

Chief Maquilla Abandoned Because Water Continued to Rise in Holds.

SEATTLE, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press)—Radio message received here Saturday said the freighter Chief Maquilla was abandoned after the crew had been taken aboard the Japanese steamer Montreal Maru. Message said that ship was left because water continued to rise in the holds and the barometer was lowering.

Maquilla sent out an S.O.S. call on Thursday while two thousand miles out in the Pacific, enroute to Shanghai with a cargo of grain from Kildoonan, B.C.

She carried eight officers and crew of about thirty-two Chinese.

Uncle Wiggily

A Bed-Time Story by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S SURPRISE

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Uncle Wiggily squiggled his toes under the warm bed clothes. Then he twiddled his ears. Next he twinkled his pink nose and called to Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy:

"Will you please pull down the curtain, Janie, dear!"

"Pull down the curtain?" squeaked the muskrat lady housekeeper. "What in the world for? It isn't dark yet."

"I know it isn't," said Uncle Wiggily, who had to stay in bed because he had a cold and coughed. "Hoch! Heck! Hick!"

"Then why do you want the curtains down?" asked Nurse Jane.

"So it will seem to be night more quickly," answered Uncle Wiggily and he sneezed: "Ker choo! Ker chow! Ker chee!"

"Just as I thought!" laughed Nurse Jane.

"Oh, now I know!" and Nurse Jane laughed a little. "You want to have that little elf come and play white marbles with you again and he only comes when it is night and you dream. Isn't that it?"

"Yes," answered the rabbit gentleman, "but it was no dream. There really was a little elf and he had white marbles. I put them under the bed here but in the morning——"

"Yes, in the morning there was only a puddle of water where some snow blew in your window in the night and melted," said the muskrat lady housekeeper. "Fie upon your white marbles!"

"I tell you the little elf gave me some white marbles and I played a game with him and he left me a lot of round white balls," said the bunny. "He's coming again tonight. Pull down the curtains, please, and make it dark."

So Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy pulled down the curtains and made it dark.

After a while, when it was really night, Uncle Wiggily went to sleep and perhaps it was the mystic hour of twelve when he awoke and sat up in bed for he heard a noise at the window.

"Ah, I think the little elf is coming in to play more white marbles with me," thought Mr. Longears. And, surely enough, in through the open window leaped the queer little sprite.

"Ha!" cried the rabbit. "I knew you would come! Now I will show Nurse Jane you are not a dream. You'll give me some more white marbles; won't you, little elf?"

"If you beat me playing the game I will," said the queer little chap and he jumped up and sat crossed legs like a tailor on the foot of Uncle Wiggily's bed. Reaching into his pocket, the elf took out some round, white balls and he and Uncle Wiggily began to play a game using one of the red rings embroidered on the bedquilt in silk.

Uncle Wiggily was a good marble player and he had no trouble in beating the little elf at the game so that soon the rabbit had quite a heap of the white marbles all his own. Then the elf said:

"It is time for me to go now. I'll see you again before winter is over. Good night!"

"But may I keep these white marbles to show Nurse Jane?" asked Uncle Wiggily, taking them up in his paws.

"Of course!" said the elf and he laughed.

Mr. Longears put the marbles under his pillow instead of under the bed for he thought that perhaps the night before some of his little rabbit boys might have come in early in the morning and taken the first ones. Then as the little elf waved farewell, Uncle Wiggily went to sleep. Pretty soon it was morning.

Eagerly Uncle Wiggily sat up in bed and called:

"Nurse Jane! The little elf came! I played a game with him. I have more white marbles! Come and see it was no dream!"

As Nurse Jane came in Uncle Wiggily put his paw under his pillow, but all he found was a puddle of water.

"Oh, my goodness!" he cried in surprise. "What happened?"

"Just as I thought!" laughed Nurse Jane. "It wasn't exactly a dream, but Jack Frost has been coming into your room these last two nights. He made some round, white marbles out of ice and you played with them. When you put them under the bed and under your pillow the warm room melted them so that, by morning, there was only water. The little elf was Jack Frost and his white marbles were chunks of ice."

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "I guess you're right, Nurse Jane. Anyhow my cold is all better!" And so it was, in spite of the puddle of water under his pillow. For the bunny no longer coughed: "Hoch! Heck! Hick!" Nor did he sneeze: "Ker choo! Ker chow! Ker chee!"

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

VENTILATE

Shut up your house, close all the doors,
And stuff the cracks in all the floors,
Around the windows nail your tin
And never let a breath get in——
But then don't sit and wonder why
Your house-plants all curl up and die.

Ah, yes, take up your dwelling there
Amid the gloom and stagnant air,
And what will happen then to you?
You'll do just like the house-plants do:
Dry up and shrivel in about
A week, and then yourself pass out.

And yet a man will shut his mind
To every word of every kind,
Think his own thoughts, breathe his own breath,
And slowly starve his soul to death,
Imprisoned in the lonely night
Of that poor man who's always right.

Throw wide the window and the door
And let the wind blow in once more!
Give your geraniums a show
And your own soul a chance to grow.
For ventilation, you will find,
May mean your house or mean your mind.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE YAWN

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

We all yawn. Yawning is a universal phenomenon among animals as well as human beings. It is a form of stretching tired and cramped muscles. We stretch our arms and legs to release the strain and tension of inactivity or of activity. Every baseball fan is familiar with the seventh inning stretch in which the whole crowd rises as one man to get stiffness out of joints and muscles. Sitting in one position fatigues the muscles and interferes with the circulation.

It is not merely the sitting position at the ball game which makes you tired. The excitement of the game and the tense moments have a lot to do with it. While you are eagerly watching the pitcher as he winds up you are tense with expectation. The act of attention is physically produced by a tightening of the muscles and the nerves. This takes energy and fatigues the whole organism.

Yawning releases the tension of the chest muscles and the breathing apparatus. This is why we yawn most when we are sleepy and in a stuffy room where the circulation is bad. You will feel like yawning after you have been paying strict attention to a lecture or any hing that has held your interest to a marked degree. But you do not yawn when you are deeply interested. This is why yawning in company is bad. It signifies that you are tired of your surroundings, that your interest has ceased.

Yawning is highly contageous because it is so easy. It is one of those hair-trigger reflexes that may be set off with the slightest hint. The mere thought of yawning is suggestive. The idea releases the reflex. The writer yawned seven times while writing these lines and he is not especially given to yawning.

You do not yawn when you are angry, when you are excited, when you open a letter from your sweetheart.

Why do you do what you do? Ask Dr. Thomson. Write care of this paper, and send stamped envelope for reply.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion at The Examiner Office.

DEAR MARION:

I enjoy very much reading the Women's Page in The Examiner. I have tried and found some of the recipes very good, and am keeping all of them for future use.

Can you tell me what was the matter with my cucumber pickles? I made three gallons of cider vinegar into pickle with sugar, spice, etc., when cold added my cucumbers, wiped dry every day until the crocks were full. Then they started to work (without a yeast cake) and worked until I had to throw them out. The vinegar, when I threw it out, was just like water. I have made pickles like this for 10 years and this is the first time they went like that. Did some one else have trouble like that? I am anxious to know.

Please find enclosed two-cent stamp for mailing enclosed list of instructions which I will be very glad to receive. You have certainly improved the paper.

Yours truly,
M. J. B."

P. S.—When making pumpkin pie try 1 egg, 2 rolled soda biscuits or rolled soda biscuits in tead o' eggs and see if you like a pie made in this way. This is good to know when eggs are dear.

M. J. B.

I hope some neighbor can tell you about your pickles, "M. J. B." Isn't it disappointing when such an accident happens after one has worked so hard?

"Dear Marion,

I am sending you a Christmas suggestion and hope you can make room for it. Thanks vrey much, dear Marion and neighbors for all the help I have received.

Knitted Bluing Bag.

Four fine steel knitting needles; very fine white yarn. Cast on 36 stitches. Knit 1 inch 2 and 1 rib. Knit plain for 2½ inches, then narrow off like the toe of a sock. Then crochet a cord of thread and fasten one inch from the top. Then take a bal of bluing, tie in muslin cloth and put in the knitted bag. This makes a very useful Christmas pr sent and does not cost very much, and it has the personal touch.

Nancy."

Thanks very much for your Christmas suggestion, "Nancy"; the bluing bag should make a very nice gift.

"Dear Marion:

I have been a reader of The Examiner for the past few months and I certainly enjoy your page very much and have received considerable benefit by it. You surely give us something to think about. I wonder could you give me an idea about making a kimona for a little girl about three years old?

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. B."
Bailieboro.

I have managed to obtain a pattern I think you can use, Mrs. B., but now I can't find your address! Will you rush it to me so that I can send the pattern?

I am very glad that you like the page.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

I don't know how to thank you or tell you what a wonderful friendly page you have. I'm sure that in every home to which The Examiner goes, help is received from your helps and hints.

I have sent in for some more helps which I hope you can spare me. The other helps I received were real good.

In this letter you will find the little card you sent me the other time, with a few hints on it which is very little in return for your household helps.

I thank you very much for the last ones, I received and also for the ones I know I shall receive in the near future.

Yours in friendship,
Reuben-Ring."

To clean suede, buckskin or chamois gloves, rub with stale bread crumbs.

To remove grass stains wet the stained part with alcohol and rub well.

Hot grease spilled on a wood floor should have cold water thrown on it at once to harden it and prevent it striking into the wood.

Thank you very much, "Reuben-Ring," for the helps and for the appreciation. It IS nice to be friendly, and I thoroughly enjoy my association with all the neighbors. The help were sent you some days ago—I have so much mail that it is 'way be ind!

* * *

"Dea Marion:

Thank you very much for the helps, they are very useful.

What favors and what design for place cards would be suitable for a dinner party for a fifteenth wedding anniversary?

I think your page is very nice, but it does not seem as interesting as when "Tillie," and "Bubbles" and "Good Girl" and the rest wrote to you.

Yours sincerely,
Margaretta."

For a Crystal wedding anniversary—which is the fifteenth anniversary, table decorations should be carried out almost entirely in glass. Red carnations with red candle shades make a very effective color scheme for the Crystal background. Little cake with red icing, red bon-bons and red place cards can be used.

Tiny glass bottles, holding a red baby carnation make very appropriate souvenirs.

It does seem a long time since we heard from those whom you mention; perhaps they will take your hint and write again.

"Laura" could have given you more information on the party if you had sent your address.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

I do appreciate your page so much and I think you are a wonderful woman to make it so interesting. I have tried some of the recipes and found them fine, but have no especial one to send in return, but may send some hints later on, as I am very busy preparing for Christmas and trying to get a story written in time which is not long now. Please send me instructions for making Christmas gifts and crush collar.

Thanking you so much,
Pollyanna."

I'm so glad that you like our page, "Pollyanna." I'll be looking forward to receiving those hints.

"My dear Marion:

I am sending in my contribution to the Christmas story contest—not that I have any hopes of a prize or of even getting it in print, as I cannot expect to compete successfully with those who have educational advantages. Still I thought I would try, just for the fun of the thing, and also it was a good opportunit for giving my lazy brain a little very necessary exercise. I am looking forward to reading the stories of the successful competitors.

I just love your page and always turn to it first—if I can get hold of that part of the paper first, that is. The Armistice Number was just great and I am sure the Christmas Number will be also.

I think the idea of printing extracts from our best writers, past and present, is one of the finest ideas put forth in our page as yet. It will do us all good and will probably revive the thirst for good reading many of us have lost in the busy rush of life.

Wishing you every success, dear Marion,
Yours sincerely,
A. R."

Indeed your brain can't have stagnated very badly, "A. R."—but I must not say anything about the stories until they are judged!

It's nice to know you like our page, and I'm very pleased to know the new column has found favor.

* * *

"Dear Marion:

I am very humbly submitting two stories for your story contest. If it is presumptious to send two please just consider the on entitled, "Two Spruce Trees."

We enjoy your page very much and wish it the success it surely merits.

If it is not too soon to do so, we wish you also a Merry Christmas. You see writing the stories has given me the Christmas spirit rather earlier than usual. The same will be true of you, no doubt since you are already making preparations for the Christmas Number.

Very sincerely yours,
V. F. B."

You are a most prolific writer, "V. F. B." to turn out TWO stories on so short notice! I started plans for the Christmas number on the day after Armistice, so really, Christmas comes as a kind of anti-climax. Thanks for your good wishes, but SURELY you are going to write to me again before December 25!

* * *

"Dear Marion

Am sending a Christmas Story. Hope it is acceptable. I had just 1 st night and a few hours to-day to write it. Did you say how many words? If so, I missed the number but hope this is inside the count.

These are such busy times, however do you get time to carry on all your work? The new column is just what I have been longing for—"something worthwhil in a short while." Thank you for the helps you sent. I am using some right away.

Yours truly,
Willo."
Havelock.

Glad you like the new columu, "Willo." Your story came just in the nick of time.

You ask how I get time to carry on all my work—I, too, would like to know. Sometimes I think there should be 36 hours in a day—but then we would be just as much rushed, wouldn't we?

Marion

REALLY CLEAN

Most housewives are most particular about clean tea towels, but how many completely forget the lowly dishcloth, which really gets all the dirty work to do. It should be washed out after each meal and dried thoroughly before using again.

PLUMBING AID

A new kind of metal cement is on the market that when mixed with water is soft as putty but it hardens like metal when cold. It can be used to fix plumbing leaks on the car or wherever metal cement is required.

NEIGHBORLY HELPS

This column is used by Examiner neighbors to help out others who have requested recipes or advice. You may use it freely by addressing Marion.

"Dear Marion,

I noticed in Thursday's paper (I think it was) Mrs. T. R. asked how to remove soot and ink stains from a carpet. I have a method that doesn't sound very expert, but it works.

The ink stain may be removed by washing with milk. Plenty of milk must be used, and rubbed into the carpet vigorously with a piece of clean flannel. The milk should be poured on to the carpet, and not on the flannel.

As for the soot, I find ordinary table salt the best eliminator. It should be sprinkled on the spots and allowed to remain for a short time, then brushed lightly off into a dustpan, the carpet then being brushed with a clean dry brush.

I hope this helps Mrs. T. R.

Yours truly,
Maria."

YOUR HOME AND YOU

By BETSY CALLISTER

Here are some hors d'oeuvres that provide an interesting and appetizing first course for dinner.

Cheese Darioles—For six persons you will need six level tablespoons of grated Parmesan cheese, an ounce of granulated gelatine, a half pint of whipping cream and a half pint of milk. Soak the gelatine in the milk and then heat over the fire, stirring well until dissolved. Set aside to cool and then add the cheese and the cream, beaten stiff. Add a little salt and cayenne pepper and turn into very small molds to set. Chill well and unmold just before wanted. Serve with thin strips of pimento, or strips of truffles, if desired.

Eggs a la Dijon—For four persons you will need two hard cooked eggs of which only the whites will be used. The eggs should be cut in halves crosswise and the hard cooked yolks when crumbled may be used to garnish some other dish. Thin slices should be cut off the ends of the eggs so that they will stand up like little cups. They should be filled with a mixture made from the following ingredients: One tablespoon of chopped ham, a tablespoon of chopped cooked mushrooms, chopped canned truffles and foies gras, with salt to taste.

* * *

Make cups of whites of hard-boiled eggs as described above. Fill with a mixture of crumbled egg yolk, mixed with a chopped skinned and boned sardine, a saltspoon of anchovy essence, a tablespoon of white sauce. Mix very thoroughly before putting into the cups. Then garnish with a few strips of gherkins and serve on little beds of watercress sprinkled with French dressing.

* * *

If you have a service platter for assorted hors d'oeuvres, the sections may be filled with an assortment of the following delicacies. Sliced fresh tomatoes sprinkled with parsley and French dressing, pickled beet slices, tuna fish dressed with olive oil and lemon juice and a few chopped capers, choice canned sardines, radishes, olives, sliced cucumbers dressed with French dressing, strips of celery hearts, chopped or shredded cabbage with French or boiled dressing.

THE CHINESE CABINET

By KATE EDMONDS

The three granddaughters of Phineas Cobb listened to the reading of his last will and testament. There were no other heirs and the document was strangely brief.

"To my granddaughter, Annie Cobb Youngs, $10,000. To my granddaughter, Martha Weeks Stringer, $10,000. To my granddaughter, Helen Cobb, the Chinese cabinet in my library, together with all my books and collection of engravings."

"That is all," said the lawyer after a pause.

"All?" repeated Mrs. Youngs. "What becomes of the house and its contents?"

"It is not mentioned in the will."

"Then," said Mrs. Martha Stringer in an acid tone, "I suppose that will be divided separately, among us three, share and share alike."

"That would be the legal division," admitted the lawyer, "unless your grandfather disposed of it in some other manner."

"You should know that," protested Mrs. Youngs.

He shook his head. "You remember that my partner attended to Mr. Cobb's affairs, and that I was recalled from the West because of my partner's death, which occurred a week before that of Mr. Cobb. I can only administer the estate according to the will, and if you care to carry the matter into court it can be decided definitely."

Mrs. Youngs said she preferred to consult her husband, and Mrs. Stringer echoed the remark. Helen Cobb, the youngest and unmarried one of the cousins, arose and thanked the lawyer for his services, kissed her cousins goodby and went away.

"Grandfather treated her abominably," declared Annie Youngs to Martha as they rode to the railroad station. "She worked for him, took care of him when he was sick and made a slave of herself—now, she is turned out with that wretched Chinese cabinet and a lot of musty old books. She will have to start anew and get something to do, being all alone in the world. She's a good nurse, Martha."

In the meantime Helen Cobb walked home like one in a daze. The blow she had received had been a staggering one, and deprived her not only of a home and sustenance, but of faith in the grandparent she had loved and cherished in his lonely old age.

"It must be a mistake," she whispered as she let herself into the great, silent house. Maggie, the cook, came creaking upstairs her round face full of concern.

"You look all wore out, Miss Helen. I've made you a cup of tea and cooked a chop; I've baked you a strawberry tart, too." She made Helen sit down, pulled up a shade to let the sun in and brought a tempting tray.

The girl smiled through her tears. "You are very good, Maggie; I am tired."

"I expect you ought to see Dr. Hare—your nerves are all unstrung, child."

Helen blushed. "I don't need a doctor, Maggie."

"There's a young doctor thinks he needs you, I reckon," and Maggie went off chuckling to open the door for Dr. Hare, who had come to bring a bunch of roses for Helen and inquire after her health.

In a few moments Helen had told him her disappointment. "I shall have to finish my nursing course, and I am sure both you and Dr. Paine will recommend me," she concluded.

"I am sorry about your grandfather—it is puzzling, for he was a man of strong intellect up to his death. But, I am glad, Helen, for another reason—you can now marry me all the sooner, if you will. I am still struggling, but there is enough for two—and I would never have dared ask an heiress to become my wife!"

And so they became engaged—the disinherited granddaughter and the poor young doctor.

"I am heiress to a Chinese cabinet and a library of 5,000 volumes!" declared Helen.

The Chinese cabinet was of lacquer, with gorgeous fighting cocks in brilliant red in relief on the doors. The lawyer had given Helen the key and in a moment the doors were open and a row of small drawers were revealed.

The first drawer contained odd bits of Chinese jewelry of small value; the second one was filled with a silk shawl of cobweb fineness, and the third one contained an ivory fan, delicately carved. The third drawer was shallow and came out entirely, disclosing another secret drawer behind it.

"How delightful," exclaimed Helen, pulling on the red silk tassel that formed a handle. The secret drawer opened with a jerk and a mass of envelopes fell into Helen's lap. Upon examination they proved to be deeds to the property—house and gardens—transferring all of the real estate to Helen Cobb. Another paper directed her to open each volume in the library. This they did in the presence of the amazed lawyer, and in each book was found a new $100 bill.

"You are quite an heiress after all," said the delighted lawyer, shaking hands with the girl.

"Yes—but—Jack, you are not going?" She followed the doctor to the door. His honest young face was white and set. "After this I cannot offer you my modest—" Then her soft hand pressed his lips.

"You have asked me and I have promised, and so—you would not make me give the cabinet and the house and the money to my cousins, for I would rather go with you—"

What could Dr. Hare say?

It is said that at least two per cent of human beings associate a particular color with each sound they hear and sometimes this extends to the names of days of the week.

DAILY READING

A FEW MINUTES A DAY WITH THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S AUTHOR'S CONDUCTED BY THE NEIGHBORS AND MARION

This begins the second week of this column, so appropriately suggested by "Mariana," to whom I think we all owe thanks for a very splendid idea.

I would like to remind the neighbors that they are invited to suggest extracts (they must be short) suitable for the column. I print the date on every day's extract, for reference in your scrap book—and you should not fail to clip the extracts every day.

DECEMBER 3, 1928.

This being the anniversary of the battle of Hohenlinden, fought on December 3, 1800, it is very appropriate to read the famous poem by Thomas Campbell, Scotch poet and author, born July 27, 1777, and died June 15, 1844. Campbell lives in our memory for his wonderfully stirring poems: "Lochiel's Warning," "The Exile of Erin," "Ye Mariners of England," "Lord Ullin's Daughter" and others. I will print some of these on future occasions.

On Linden, when the sun was low,
All bloodless lay th' untrodden snow
And dark as winter was the flow
Of Iser rolling rapidly.

But Linden saw another sight
When the drum beat, at dead of night,
Commanding fires of death to light
The darkness of her scenery.

By torch and trumpet fast arrayed
Each horseman drew his battle-blade,
And furious every charger made
To join the dreadful revelry.

Then shook the hills with thunder riven
Then rush'a the steed to battle driven,
And louder than the bolts of Heaven
Far flash'd the red artillery.

But redder that light shall glow,
On Linden's hills of stained snow
And bloodier yet the torrent flow
Of Iser rolling rapidly.

'Tis morn, but scarce you level sun
Can pierce the war-clouds, rolling down,
Where furious Frank and fiery Hun
Shout in their sulphrous canopy.

The combat deepens—on, ye brave
Who rush to glory or the grave.
Wave, Munich, all thy banners wave,
And charge with all thy chivalry.

Few, few shall part where many meet,
The snow shall be their winding-sheet;
And every tuft beneath their feet
Shall be a soldier's sepulchre.

That Body of Yours

By Dr. J. Barton

DIVIDING UP YOUR DOLLAR FOR FOOD

Whether you are a millionaire or an individual of limited means, what your dollar will buy in food in the market for cash, is just the same. And when you think about it, it isn't what luxuries or delicacies in foods that count with that body of yours, but what foods will give the most value in heat, energy, and body building. In other words the best way to invest that dollar in foodstuffs, should be of interest to every man, woman, and child.

I saw a food exhibit arranged by the nutritional expert of the Canadian Government that struck me as being worthy of handing on to my readers.

Spread out in a neat array of little groups were the different types of foodstuffs.

One group: meat, fish and eggs.
Second group: vegetables and fruits.
Third group: bread and cereals.
Fourth group: milk and cheese.
Fifth group: fats, sugars, groceries or other adjuncts.

Thus all the foodstuffs were included, and the suggestion was that of each dollar spent on food, twenty cents, or one fifth, should be spent on each one of these groups.

This means that the number of calories and all the vitamins get into the diet every day.

This looks like a practical common sense manner in which the housewife can feel that she is using the best possible method of not only getting the best all round value for her dollar, but giving her children, husband, and self, the greatest amount of nourishment. Of course there will be cases where there must be little changes made. A mother with three or four small children will invest more of her dollar in milk.

A mother with children in their teens will need the milk of course, but must get more meat or eggs.

Also where the family are all adults and work hard with their hands more meat or eggs may be necessary.

However the general idea that the dollar as expended should be divided into fifths, one fifth for each of above groups, is a simple method that is easily remembered.

The jumping bean owes its activity to a worm which destroys the germ of the seed.

SHADING THE GLARE

Every care and precaution should be taken to protect the Eyes from glare. During the dark days a larger amount of electric light is used, and shading off the glare helps to avoid eyestrain.

The Whatnot

A Column for Little Bits of Everything of Interest to Women Readers

Conducted by Marion

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

Color, color! Everywhere we go we encounter some new scheme being worked out—combining some new colors—trying to get something which will be new and different—something our neighbors haven't got!

* * * * * * *

Color has become a thing of paramount importance in everything nowadays. The modern home brags of kitchens that shout with grey colors, and bathrooms tiled in sea green or daffodil yellow.

* * * * * * *

You remember the time when the housewife made her dream-kitchen a haven of spotless white—and before that, graining seemed to settle the question of decoration for the kitchen.

* * * * * * *

Now we have indeed have had them for some time—the colored cloths. Three times a day—just think of it—we sit down at a table to eat our meals. Three times we must look at the same colored cloth—maybe the same dishes, and with the same appetite.

* * * * * * *

The housewife now can change the color of the cloth to our hearts content—in the morning we may sit down to a cheery breakfast set on a cloth of Old Rose—to brighten our spirits. At lunch we may have a daffodil yellow and at dinner the sea green.

* * * * * * *

If one knows the choice of appointments suitable, and of the moment, that will harmonize with the color scheme of your furniture, achievement is assured.

* * * * * * *

Often it is a help to have aguide. I noticed one long ago. It ran something like this: On a cloth of beige damask we should use green stemware, yellow candles, and tawny chrysanthemums; on a cloth of pastel green, we use pink stemware, lavendar candles and pink flowers in white pottery bowls; on a rich cream cloth smoky amber glass.

* * * * * * *

Then again, we have the two-tone shade of gray-beige with it we have pink flowers and green candles.

* * * * * * *

Then, of course, we must not forget the snowy white cloth used in our grandmother's day, and which, somehow, seems to stick to us. We continue to use it even though we have carloads of color floating around us.

* * * * * * *

This thought sort of leads of me on to color schemes which we try to have in each room, especially the living room—sometimes we are apt to put some colored cut flowers in a vase which completely spoils the effect, just because the color of the vase happened to be wrong.

* * * * * * *

For the little hospitable hall, one small tall table, one tall slim candle against glittering background of a long slender mirror.

* * * * * * *

* * * * * * *

We should, too, try to arrange our books so as the covers will harmonize. Can you imagine the effect if we put a copy of Arlen in a acquer jacket next an intense purple of D'annuzio? A dove-grey, sifting next a shadow blue will carress, not stab, as some would say.

* * * * * * *

Have you noticed the new Modernistic Boudoir lamp? They're adorable. And the colors—they would just make you feel like singing when you wake in the morning and your eyes rest upon it.

* * * * * * *

These would be lovely for Christmas gifts too, especially if they can be obtained in the especial color your friend desires.

* * * * * * *

Speaking of Christmas gifts, a little bed jacket that you can make in an hour or so and that any girl of your acquaintance would like, is shown in this week's helps. So please send me your stamped, self-addressed envelope if you would like a copy of the help. The diagram pattern shows precisely how to make it.

* * * * * * *

Needle workers have ever at their finer tips, beautiful gift possibilities. A suggestion of them is the use of bright wools, on organdie. Gay dashes of color on an apron, a little lace and there you have a pretty gift for any feminine friend.

* * * * * * *

A set of pieces for a bedroom might consist of a band of embroidery for a valance and a pair of bright bands for curtain tie-backs. A lamp shade to match these in pastel tints with ovals of embroidery would complete an unusually lovely gift.

* * * * * * *

If a person is clever at cutting linoleum blocks in simple or fanciful design, printing of these in oil paint on natural colored pongee is recommended. Bags, table runners for library table, portfolio covers, cushion top suggest themselves.

Plants that perch on tree tops have been discovered in British Guiana. They are air plants of the pineapple family, found growing in a mass on big trees and existing as a parasite until the long roots reach the ground.

An unusual cure for insomnia, suggested by recent experiments is black bedclothes and pillows in a black bed within a room of the same dusky shade.

LONDON REPLIES TO NAVAL NOTE

Baldwin's Answer Attracts Little Attention in Daily Papers.

EQUALITY ON SEAS.

LONDON, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press.)—The announcement that Premier Baldwin had sent a reply to Representative Britten's proposals of an Interparliamentary Conference on naval limitations attracted only moderate attention in the morning papers Saturday. The reply was sent to Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador at Washintgon, who is to communicate it to the American State Department.

The majority of to-day's papers who printed the anonuncement that reply had been sent did not give it any special prominence and one paper buried it in small type at the foot of the column, while another omitted it altogether.

The only paper to comment was the Daily News which said that if the Baldwin reply expressed complete readiness to discuss the question of equality of sea power in an open, frank and statesman-like manner, it represented the popular feeling in England.

SOCIETY HEARS BOY CANDIDATE

Expresses Himself in Favor of Camps For Boys of Rural Districts.

REV. PRINGLE SPEAKS.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, December 1. — At the meeting of the Ugoigo Society, held on Wednesday evening in the United church. H. Waddell of Garden Hill, candidate for East Durham for member of the Provincial Boys' Parliament, delivered an excellent campaign address. The pastor, Rev. F. Carpenter, conducted the meeting, and Mrs. A. B. Kennedy presided at the organ for the song service. Mr. Waddell stated that he was not in favor of anything which will hinder the daily occupation of the boys in his riding. He thought that boy camps were not necessary in a rural district where the boys were all too busy to attend, but he stated that if it was the wish of a majority in the electorate, he would help to establish them. He then in a very clear manner, stated the planks of his platform:

Intersquare games to be held periodically in East Durham throughout the year.

An aggressive bond-selling campaign to be carried on in East Durham.

Father and Son banquets to be held in each Square.

A general council of the leaders of each Square to be held quarterly.

C. S. E. T. work in East Durham to be litfed to a higher plane.

The four-fold life to be stressed in our work.

This program is based on Luke ii: 52: "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." This verse includes the four phases of our work—athletic, intellectual, religious and social.

In a few words he explained how he proposed to carry out these planks, and concluded by telling the boys that the election would be held on Friday, December 7th, from 4.15 to 5 o'clock, and on Saturday from 1 o'clock to 10 o'clock, at the Queen's Hotel, Millbrook.

Mrs. Carpenter and Miss Irene Carpenter sang a duet, which was much enjoyed. Mr. Carpenter introduced the Rev. G. Pringle, as the Sky Pilot on the "Sky Pilot" of our great Marine Mission on the Pacific Coast.

25 Years in West.

Rev. Mr. Pringle made reference to the young man who had made such a fine address, and said it augured well for the future of the church when the young men were being trained to take their places on the paltform in the interests of good causes. Rev. Mr. Pringle stated that he had been 28 years in the West, starting in as a student minister in Minnesota, and sent out by the Presbyterian church of Canada. He told of his experiences in the Yukon, of the discouragements, and long waiting, before he could induce the loggers and miners to even attend his meetings; of the indomitable courage and patience of his wife, to whom he paid tribute, saying that hers was the harder part. While he was away for weeks at a time on mission work, she was alone in her little shack with her family of small children. He told of the rewards of service which came in the freindship of many of the men after they had grown to know him and appreciate his message and the work which he was trying to do among them. One message he, brought to the young people was: "Never lower your flag when temptation comes. Don't lower your ideal."

At the conclusion of his address, he said he had endeavored to give a picture of the life of a missionary in the far north, and if his hearers thought his work supporting, get behind it and help with the missionary work.

His lecture pictured many sad scenes, but was filled with humor also. His manner of describing his work was so interesting, and his personality so kindly, that everyone regretted it, when the address came to a close.

Rev. Mr. Carpenter announced that on Wednesday evening, December 12, the young people of Mark street church Peterborough, would present their play, "Safety First," in Cavan Community Hall; also that the South Monaghan and Cavan Sunday School Convention would be held in Bailieboro on Tuesday, December 4th.

GOLDEN LINKS PLAN CHRISTMAS CHEER

Mission Band Will Send Gifts For Ruthenian Children's Tree.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 1 (Examiner Correspondence). — Mrs. George E. Burnham was hostess for the November meeting of the Golden Links Mission Circle, held at her home on Wednesday evening; the president, Miss Jean L. Burnham, taking the chair.

A number of business items came up for consideration, among these being the decision to have the Circle remember its special missionary, Miss E. C. Hawken, Wabstao, Alberta, with a Christmas gift; the committee appointed to attend to this matter being, Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. David Lunn, and Miss Lottie Luxon. A committee was also appointed to assist with the preparation of the annual concert and "giving Christmas Tree" of the Sunshine Mission Band, which is now under way, the box to be packed after the entertainment going to help Miss Hawken furnish gifts for the Christmas tree for the Ruthenian children at the boarding school.

The treasurer, Francis Jones, reported a goodly balance in the bank, and the Circle hopes to have $100 as its share toward the total allocation of $530 which must be raised by the Auxiliary, the Circle, and the Band. Each year the Circle contributes $50 toward Miss Hawken's salary.

A song, "Say the Right Thing Always," was given by Mary Burnham, Helen Mitchell, and Bryer Edmunds, and was much enjoyed. The hymns were played by one of the little girls, Mary Burnham, throughout the meeting.

Mrs. D. Lunn read the Scripture lesson from Psalm 139, and the president read an interesting letter from the mission field, and gave the introductory chapter to the book, "New Canadians."

A pleasant social hour brought the gathering to a close, a treat of homemade candy being served by the hostess and the committee in charge.

The December meeting will also be the annual gathering, when reports will be received, and the election of officers held. This meeting will be at the home of Mrs. E. S. Burnham, Main street, on the second Tuesday in December, at 8 p.m. A social hour will follow, when refreshments will be served.

Entertained Club

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Fallis, Fallis Line, were host and hostess for the regular meeting of the Five Hundred Club on Wednesday, when a most enjoyable time was spent, music and cards filling the time pleasantly, the service of dainty rfreshments bringing this enjoyable social occasion to a close. SCHOOL TEAMS ARE BANQUETED

King Edward School Won Three Championships During Year.

CUPS PRESENTED.

King Edward School was the scene of a splendid banquet, under the auspices of the Home and School Association Friday. This banquet was in honor of the three championships won by the school this year: The girls' softball team, the boys' soccer team, and the cadet corps, of whom the school is very justly proud.

The banquet hall was beautifully decorated in blue and white, the school colors.

The table decorations followed the same color scheme, carried out by streamers of crepe paper over white; and lighting the table were blue candles in silver candlesticks.

The banquet was graced by the presence of Inspector A. Mowat and Mrs. Mowat; Mrs. W. R. Morris, president of the Provincial Home and School Association; Mrs. C. H. Edwards, president of the Local Council of Women; and members of the teaching staff of King Edward School.

Mr. R. J. Bolton, the principal, acted as chairman and toast master, and after a short address, in which he expressed his appreciation of the splendid work being done by the Home and School Association, he welcomed the guests. The toast to the King was then proposed. Mrs. W. H. Andrews, president of the Home and School Association, present the girls' softball team with a cup, the gift of the association, in appreciation of their success in winning the city championship.

Miss Genevieve Price, captain of the team, responded very suitably, thanking, on behalf of her team, the ladies for the interest they had shown by this splendid gift and banquet.

Best Corps in District

Mr. Mowat, being called upon to propose the toast to the cadet corps, said he was both pleased and proud to be present, and to know that the Peterborough cadets were credited with being the best in the district. He was also glad that the fine work done by the King Edward cadets did not detract from their studies in school, for their academic record was just as good as their record in sports. Cadet Captain Fred Linsey ably responded to this toast.

A presentation of a gift from the softball team to Mr. Donald Crawford, in acknowledgment of his efforts as their coach, was made by Lillian Dickens. Mr. Crawford was taken entirely by surprise, but in thanking the girls, said it was they who had won the cup, and not himself. He paid them the tribute of being just as good losers as winners, which was really the chief aim of sport.
